THE NICOMACHEAN ETHICS.

BOOKS III.—X.

PLAN OF BOOK III.

Thas been already assumed without proof, that virtue implies purpose (Eth. II. iv. 3, II. v. 4, II. iv. 15), and therefore of course will and freedom. Before proceeding to the analysis of particular virtues, Aristotle begins by examining the generic conception of the Voluntary, with a view chiefly to the comprehension of its species, Purpose.

The first five Chapters of Book III. are accordingly devoted to this subject, and stand so much apart from what goes before and after, that some have been led to the conclusion that they were written as a separate treatise (see Vol. I. Essay I. p. 45). That several parts of these chapters are unnecessarily repeated in Book V. c. xiii., and that certain points in them do not agree with the psychology of Books VI. and VII., is no argument against the present chapters having formed part of Aristotle's original draft and conception of his Ethics, but only tends to show that Books V. VI. VII. were written later. It is more to the purpose to notice that in Chapter v. § 10, there is an apparent ignoring of the whole discussion upon the formation of moral states which occupies the commencement of Book II., and that no allusion occurs to 'the mean' or to 'happiness.' But this is only a specimen of the way in which Aristotle concentrated his mind on each new subject as it arose, and in writing upon it frequently neglected to refer to other cognate passages. The same thing is observable in the treatise on Friendship (VIII, i. 1). The treatise on the Voluntary is neatly fitted on to the general ethical treatise by $$ 21, 22, of the fifth chapter of this book. There is no reason to suspect these sections of being other than the work of Aristotle.

It must not be supposed that the present disquisition on the Voluntary is a disquisition on Free Will. The latter question Aristotle would certainly have assigned to  $\pi_2 \omega \tau_1 \psi \lambda \omega \sigma \omega \phi \omega$ , or metaphysics, and would have thought out of place in a system of ethics. Some remarks upon his views of Free Will, so far as they can be gathered, will be found in Vol. I. Essay V. The ensuing chapters assume that man is the  $\dot{\alpha}_2 \chi \dot{\gamma}_1$  of his own actions, and with this assumption treat of the Voluntary under its various aspects in relation to virtue and vice, praise and blame, reward and punishment. From this practical point of view these chapters furnish to some extent a psychology, though not a metaphysic, of the Will. Their contents are as follows:—

- (1.) The general definition of the Voluntary. Ch. i.
- (2.) The special account of Purpose, that it is distinct from desire, wish, opinion; its relation to the process of deliberation. Ch. ii.—iii.
- (3.) Some consideration of the question whether Wish is for the absolute or the apparent good. Ch. iv.
- (4.) An attack upon the position that while virtue is free, vice . I is involuntary. Ch. v.

The remainder of the book is occupied with a discussion of the two first virtues upon Aristotle's list—Courage and Temperance. With regard to Courage the following heads are treated of:—
(1.) Its proper objects; Ch. vi. (2.) That it is a mean; Ch. vii. (3.) That true courage is to be distinguished from five spurious kinds of courage; Ch. viii. (4.) That it is particularly related to pain, and implies making great sacrifices for the sake of what is noble; Ch. ix. The objects and the nature of Temperance are treated of in Chapters x, and xi. And the book ends with two remarks on Intemperance: (1.) that it is more voluntary than cowardice; and, (2.) that its character is shown in its etymology; Ch. xii.

ΗΘΙΚΩΝ ΝΙΚΟΜΑΧΕΙΩΝ ΙΙΙ.

ΤΗΣ ἀρετῆς δὴ περὶ πάθη τε καὶ πράξεις οἴσης, καὶ ἐπὶ μὲν τοῖς ἑκουσίοις ἐπαίνων καὶ ψόγων γινομένων, ἐπὶ δὲ τοῖς ἀκουσίοις συγγνώμης, ἐνίοτε δὲ καὶ ἐλέου, τὸ ἐκούσιον καὶ ἀκούσιον ἀναγκαῖον ἴσως διορίσαι τοῖς περὶ ἀρετῆς ἐπισκοποῦσι, χρήσιμον δὲ καὶ τοῖς νομοθετοῦσι πρός τε 2

Ι. 1-2 Της άρετης δή-κολάσεις] 'Virtue then being concerned with feelings and actions; and praise and blame being bestowed on acts which are voluntary, while pardon and sometimes even pity are conceded to involuntary ones, -it will surely be necessary for the philosopher who treats of virtue to define the voluntary and involuntary; and moreover this will be useful for the legislator with a view to the rewards and punishments with which he has to deal,' In the Eudemian Ethics, which contain generally speaking a reproduction of these Ethics, for the most part compressed, but also occasionally expanded and supplemented, we find (Eth. Eud., 11. vi.) a more definite and reasoned statement of the voluntariness of virtue and vice. The reasoning of Eudemus is briefly as follows: -All ovolar are doxal, and tend to reproduce themselves; and only those άρχαί are properly so called (κύριαι) which are primary causes of motion, as is especially the case with regard to invariable motions, whose cause is doubtless God. Mathematical apxal are called so only by analogy, not being causes of motion. We have hitherto only mentioned necessary consequences: but there are many things which may happen or may not, and whose causes therefore must be, like themselves, contingent. All human actions being contingent, it is obvious that man is a contingent cause, and that the reason of the contingency in his actions is his ability to will one way or the other, as is farther manifest from our praise or blame of actions .- A deeper ground than that which Aristotle has taken might surely have been found for the position that morality implies freedom. But though philosophy even before Aristotle had dealt to some extent with the ideas of necessity and freedom, it remained for the Stoics to open the question more decisively. It is plain that the discussions on the Will in this place are never metaphysical. An appeal to language and common opinions sums up nearly the whole. The scope of the argument is limited to a political, as distinguished from a theological point of view (ἀναγκαῖοντοῖς περὶ ἀρετῆς ἐπισκοποῦσι, χρήσιμον δὲ καὶ τοῖς νομοθετοῦσι).

3 δοκεί δέ-γινόμενα] 'Now those acts seem to be involuntary which are done under compulsion or through ignorance.' In asking what is the Voluntary, Aristotle does not pursue a speculative method of inquiry. Such a method might have commenced with the deep-lying ideas of personality and consciousness, of the individuality of the subject, &c. But he is content with defining the voluntary by a contrast to the common notions (δοκεί) of what constitutes an involuntary act. It might be said that this is giving a merely negative conception of freedom. But in fact the conception given is positive, only the analysis of it is not pushed very far. The voluntariness of an act Aristotle represents to be constituted in this-that the actor is in every case the dρχή, or cause, of his actions, except in cases of compulsion, where there really is a superior doxn (Kant's 'heteronomy'), or of ignorance, where he does not know what his action is, and can only be held to be the cause of what he meant to do. In what sense and how the individual is an ἀρχή, is the point where Aristotle stops short in the inquiry.

Blauov & - orres] 'That is compulsory, whose cause is external to the agent, and is of such a nature that the agent (or patient) contributes nothing towards it : as, for instance, if a wind were to carry you to any place, or men in whose power you are.' 'Αρχή seems here equivalent to άρχη κινήσεως, the efficient cause. Aristotle attributes spontaneity so decisively to the individual act, that he confines the term compulsion as only applicable to cases of absolute physical force, where a man's limbs are moved or his body transported, as if he were inanimate, by some external power. The compulsion of threats, fear, and such like, he will not call compulsion without qualification, because still the individual acts under He has already spoken of the life of money-making as being Blacks Tis. 'in a sort compulsory' (Eth. 1. v. 8). With ὁ πράττωυ ἡ ὁ πάσχων cf. v. viii. 3: πολλά γάρ των φύσει ὑπαρχόντων είδότες και πράττομεν και πάσχομενοΐον τὸ γηράν ή ἀποθνήσκειν.

4-9 The cause of the act must be entirely from without, for in some cases men are forced, not to an act, but to an alternative. They may do what is grievous for the fear of what is worse. Such acts, then, are of a mixed character, partaking of the nature both of voluntariness and involuntariness. Relatively to the moment, they come from the choice and will of the individual. Abstractedly and in themselves they are contrary to the will. But as ἀκούσιά ἐστιν ἡ ἐκούσια. τοιοῦτον δέ τι συμβαίνει καὶ 5 περὶ τὰς ἐν τοῖς χειμῶσιν ἐκβολάς ἀπλῶς μὲν γὰρ οὐδεὶς ἀποβάλλεται ἐκών, ἐπὶ σωτηρία δ' αὐτοῦ καὶ τῶν λοιπῶν ἄπαντες οἱ νοῦν ἔχοντες. μκταὶ μὲν οὖν εἰσὶν αὶ τοιαῦται 6 πράξεις, ἐοίκασι δὲ μᾶλλον ἐκουσίοις αἰρεταὶ γάρ εἰσι τότε ὅτε πράττονται, τὸ δὲ τέλος τῆς πράξεως κατὰ τὸν

every act aims at something in reference to the particular moment, and is thus entirely dependent on it, so these must be judged as acts done and chosen voluntarily, and according to circumstances must obtain blame or praise. There seem to be four cases which Aristotle conceives as possible: (1) Praise is deserved where pain or degradation is endured for the sake of some great and noble end; (2) but blame, where what is degrading is endured without a sufficiently great and noble end. (3) Pardon is conceded where human nature succumbs. under great extremities, to do what is not right; (4) except the action be such as no extremities ought to bring a man to consent to, in which case pardon is withheld. In these distinctions we may recognise a practical and political wisdom such as might be found in the speeches of Thucydides, but the discussion does not rise to the level of philosophy.

6 μικταλ—οὐδέν] 'Now it may be said that such actions are of a mixed character, but they are more like things voluntary, for at the particular moment when they are done they are such as one would choose, and the moral character of an action depends on the circumstance of the moment; hence also the terms "voluntary" and "involuntary" must be predicated in reference to the moment when a person is acting. Now, in the supposed case (ἐν τοιαύταις πράξεσι), the individual acts voluntarily; for the efficient cause of the movement of the accessory limbs is in himself, and where the cause is in a person, it rests with him to act or not. Therefore such things are voluntary, though abstractedly perhaps, involuntary, for in themselves no one would choose any of such things as these.'

τὸ δὲ τέλος τῆς πράξεως] The phrase is general, not referring only to the cases under dispute, but to action universally. In this sense we may translate της πράξεως 'of an action,' Tέλος is used here in a peculiar sense to denote the 'moral character of an action.' This sense arises out of a combination of associations, 'final cause,' and 'motive,' being combined with 'end in itself,' 'perfection,' 'completeness.' A precisely similar use of the word occurs, Eth. III, vii. 6: Τέλος δὲ πάσης ἐνεργείας-ὁρίζεται γάρ ξκαστον τῷ τέλει (on which see note). The Paraphrast, in accordance with the above explanation, states the argument thus :- ' Because the character of an action as good or bad is X judged in reference to the mind of the actor at the moment of action, so also must the voluntariness of an action be judged.' 'Enel kal to ékáστης πράξεως τέλος κατά τον καιρόν αὐτής ἐστί, καὶ ἀπὸ τοῦ καιροῦ ἡ ἀγαθόν ή πονηρόν γίνεται ώστε και τὸ έκούσιον, ή τὸ ἀκούσιον, κατὰ τὸν καιρὸν ότε πράττεται, ζητητέον. Of course the interpretation of Muretus is wrong which attributes a merely popular and un-Aristotelian sense to τέλος- actio terminatur eo ipso tempore quo agimus.'

ὅτε πράττει] The omission of τις, especially after conjunctions like εί, ὅτε, κ̄c., is common in Aristotle, though not peculiar to him. Cf. Εὐλ. III. ix. 5: πλην ἐφ' ὅσον τοῦ τέλους ἐφάπτεται. Pol. ΥΙΙ. xiii. 8: Ճωπερ εί τοῦ κιθαρίζεω λαμπρὸν και καλῶς αιτίωτο την λύραν μᾶλλον τῆς τέχνης.

τὰ ὀργανικὰ μέρη! The 'subservient,' or 'instrumental' limbs. The modern word 'organised,' which has grown out of the Aristotelian conception of ὀργανικὸ σῶμα, does not exactly represent it. 'Organisation' implies multeity in unity, the co-existence and interjunction of physical parts under a law of life. But in ὀργανικός originally nothing more was implied than 'that which is fitly framed as an instrument,'—according to Aristotle's principle, that the body is the means to the life, mind, or soul, which is the end. Cf. De An. II.i.6: ψυχή έστιν έντελέχεια ή πρώτη σώματος όψοικοῦ δυνάμει ζωήν έχοντος. τοιοῦτο δέ, δ ἀν ἢ όργανικόν. De Part. An. 10 ποῖα δ' ἀντὶ ποίων αἰρετέον, οὐ βάδιον ἀποδοῦναι] These words repeat what has been already said in the preceding section. Έστι δὲ χαλεπὸν ἐνίστε κ.τ.λ., but they add the reason 'because each particular case has its own special diversity:' cf. διαφορὰν καὶ πλάνην, I. iii. 2, II-I2 In these sections Aristotle guards his definition against a possible misconception. Having defined the compulsory to be that whose cause is external, he disallows the supposition that the two great inducements to all action, the pleasant and the noble, because external to us, make the actions they induce compulsory. His arguments against this supposition are : (1) It would make all action compulsory, and thus imply more than any one would wish to support. (2) Compulsory actions are painful; those done for the pleasant or the noble are pleasurable. (3) It leaves out of account the internal susceptibility of the agent (αὐτὸν εὐθήρατον ὅντα). His VOL. II.

τὰ ἡδέα και τὰ καλά] Aspasius reads τὰ ἡδέα καὶ τὰ λυπηρά. The commentators, Victorius, Muretus, Giphanius, and Zell, get over the difficulty by taking rà καλά to mean 'non honesta, sed formosa, pulchra.' It is plain, however, that the same classification of inducements is here referred to as that given Eth. II. iii. 7, the συμφέρον being a means either to the ἡδύ or the καλόν. The καλόν is in short 'the noble,' or 'the good, viewed as morally beautiful.' A concise definition of it is given in Rhet. I. ix. 3: καλόν μέν οῦν ἐστίν, 8 αν δι' αύτο αίρετου δυ έπαινετου ή, ή δ αν άγαθὸν δν ἡδὺ ἢ, ὅτι άγαθόν. It is used in the present passage not at all emphatically, but simply to denote that form of inducement which consists in our wishing to do a thing 13 Το δε δι ἄγνοιαν οὐχ ἐκούσιον μὲν ἄπαν ἐστίν, ἀκούσιον δε τὸ ἐπίλυπον καὶ ἐν μεταμελεία· ὁ γὰρ δι ἄγνοιαν πράξας ὁτιοῦν, μηθὲν δε δυσχεραίνων ἐπὶ τῆ πράξει, ἐκὼν μὲν οὐ πέπραχεν, ὅ γε μὴ ἤδει, οὐδ' αῦ ἄκων, μὴ λυπούμενος γε. τοῦ δὴ δι ἄγνοιαν ὁ μὲν ἐν μεταμελεία ἄκων δοκεῖ, ὁ ἱδε μὴ μεταμελόμενος, ἐπεὶ ἔτερος, ἔστω οὐχ ἐκών· ἐπεὶ 14 γὰρ διαφέρει, βέλτιον ὅνομα ἔχειν ἴδιον. ἔτερον δ' ἔοικε καὶ τὸ δι ἄγνοιαν πράττειν τοῦ ἀγνοοῦντα ποιεῖν· ὁ γὰρ μεθύων ἡ ὀργιζόμενος οὐ δοκεῖ δι ἄγνοιαν πράττειν, ἀλλὰ because it is right. A little examination shows that the writing here is vague, for presently it is said to be absurd to assign the cause of the good things to oneself, and of the bad things to pleasure (αἰτιᾶσθαι-τῶν μέν καλών ξαυτόν, των δ' αισχρών τὰ ήδέα); whereas consistently the 'good things' would have been assigned to 'the good' as an external cause by those who maintained the position, εί δέ τις τὰ ἡδέα κ.τ.λ. Also would Aristotle say that what is done did 70 καλόν, is always done μεθ' ήδονης? This goes strangely against Eth. III. ix. 4-5, where the higher satisfaction of the καλόν is represented as purchased by great pain. There is a vagueness also in the use of Blaza, which first stands for that which compels, and secondly for that which is compelled. The principle, however, is well brought out, that the objective inducement to an action cannot be separated from the subjective apprehension of this in the will.

'Now that which is done through ignorance is always non-voluntary, but it is involuntary only when followed by pain, and when it is a matter of regret. For he who has done something through ignorance, but without feeling any dislike at the action, has not, it is true, acted voluntarily, inasmuch as he did not know he was doing it, but, on the other hand, not involuntarily, since he is not sorry. With regard, therefore, to actions done through ignorance we may say that he who repents has been an involuntary agent, while him who does not repent we may distinguish as having been a nonvoluntary one; for where there is a real difference, it is proper to have a distinctive name.' Aristotle begins the discussion of ignorance as modifying volition by this refined distinction, that an action may be done through ignorance, and yet not against the will. It may in short be neither with the will nor against it. He then goes on to consider the precise meaning of δι' άγνοιαν.

14-16 trepov & toke-drovotov mpdrrtel There seems to be a farther difference between acting through ignorance and doing a thing in ignorance. Common opinion pronounces that the drunken or the angry man acts not through ignorance, but in consequence of drunkenness or anger, and yet that he does not act wittingly, but in ignorance. Without doubt every deprayed man is in ignorance of what he ought to do, and of that from which he ought to refrain, and it is

in consequence of this error that men become unjust, or bad generally. But the term involuntary is not meant to cover ignorance of man's true interest. Ignorance which affects moral choice, and ignorance of the universal, are the causes, not of involuntary action, but of wickedness, and it is precisely for this ignorance that wicked men are blamed. The ignorance which causes involuntary action is ignorance of particulars, which are the circumstances and the objects of actions. With regard to these particulars, pity and pardon may be proper. for the man who acts in ignorance of some particular is an involuntary agent,' The connection of this somewhat compressed passage is as follows. An act is involuntary when caused by ignorance. But ignorance cannot be said to be the cause of an act if the individual be himself the cause of the ignorance. In that case ignorance rather accompanies the act (dyvowv πράττει) than causes it (δι' άγνοιαν πράττει). We see this (1) in instances of temporary oblivion, as from anger or wine; (2) in those of a standing moral ignorance or oblivion (el 765 άγνοει τὸ συμφέρον-ή ἐν τῆ προαιρέσει άγνοια-ή καθόλου άγνοια). The only ignorance, then, which is purely external to the agent, so as to take away from him the responsibility of the act, is some chance mistake with , regard to the particular facts of the case. A great deal of trouble has been expended upon the endeavour to distinguish and explain the various terms, άγνοοθντα πράττειν-άγνοεθν τὸ συμφέρον-ή έν τῆ προαιρέσει άγνοια - ή καθόλου άγνοια. But a closer examination shows that these different terms are not opposed to each other. but rather are all different ways for expressing the same thing, being opposed to the h καθ' ξκαστα, έν οίς h πράξις. This is the way in which the Paraphrast understands the passage, for he renders it: A! 8h τοιαθται πράξεις οὐκ είσιν ἀκούσιοι ἡ γὰρ ἐν τῆ προαιρέσει άγνοια, ήτις έστλν αλτία των κακιών, οὐκ ἔστιν αίτία τοῦ ἀκουσίου. άλλὰ τῆς μοχθηρίας. Οὐ γὰρ τὸ καθόλου περί της μέθης άγνοείν ότι πονηρόν, αίτιον γίνεται τοῦ ἀκουσίου, ἀλλὰ τὸ άγνοησαι μερικώς τήνδε την μέθοδον. οΐον, φέρε είπεῖν, οὐκ είδότα μέχρι πόσου πιόντας ένι μεθύειν. Aristotle strictly confines ignorance, as a cause of involuntary action, to mistakes about particulars. Before proceeding to this particular ignorance, he separates from it that kind of ignorance which is faulty, because caused by the agent himself. Of this there are two kinds, the temporary, as for instance that caused by intoxication, and the permanent, such as that caused by any vicious habit. 'Ignorance of the universal' is not different from 'ignorance of our real interest,' but serves to point the antithesis of 'ignorance of the particular:' nor is it opposed to ignorance as shown in wrong moral choice, but to ignorance of external facts. It goes to constitute ignorance in the purpose, for in every moral act there is a universal conception, as well as a particular application of this. But Aristotle does not here enter upon the psychology of the subject, as is afterwards done, Eth. VII. iii. The word συμφέρον is used, Politics, i. II. 11. to include and denote all kinds of good, ὁ δὲ λόγος ἐπὶ τῷ δηλοῦν ἐστὶ τὸ συμφέρον και το βλαβερόν, ώστε και το δίκαιον και τὸ άδικον.

14 διά τι των είρημένων] Some refer

this to § 11, τὸ ἡδέα καὶ τὰ καλά, but it appears simply to mean 'not from ignorance, but from one of the things now specified ' (i.e. drunkenness or anger). Cf. III. iii. II, τὸν εἰρημένον τρόπον, which refers to the passage immediately preceding.

16-17 The particulars connected with an action are as follows:—(1) The person doing it, about which ignorance is impossible to the doer.
(2) The thing done, which may not ke known, e.g. Æschylus did not know he was revealing the mysteries.
(3) The thing or person made the object of the action (περὶ τὶ ἢ ἐν τίνι), e.g. Merope did not know it was her son. (4) The instrument, e.g. one might fancy one's spear had a button on it. (5) The purpose or tendency of the act (ἐνεκα τίνοτ), e.g. one wishing to preserve might kill.

(6) The manner  $(\pi \hat{\omega}s)$ , e.g. one might strike harder than one wished,

Aspasius explains ἀκροχειρίζεσθαι thus: ἔστι τὸ πυκτεύειν ħακικρατιάζειν πρός ἔτερον ἀνειν συμπλοκῆς ἡ δλως ἄκραις ταῖς χεραὶ μετ' ἀλλήλων γυμπάζεσθαι, i.e. it is what we call 'sparring.' This same phrase δείξαι βουλόμενος was applied before to 'the man who was showing the catapult,' and was given as an instance of one being ignorant of the nature of his act. Here it is an instance of ignorance of the tendency of an act. The different kinds of ignorance are not very distinct from one another.

18 περl πάντα δή—ℓνεκα] 'Ignorance then being concerned with all these circumstances of the action, he that was ignorant of some one of these is held (δοκεί) to have acted involuntarily, and especially (if ignorant) with regard to the most important; and the most important seem to be the objects of the action and the tendency of it.' The words ev ols are used at the beginning of the section in a general sense, as before (§ 15); afterwards they correspond with wepl 71 kal έν τίνι (§ 16). There is an awkwardness about of Evera. A person knows with what end or view he is acting (and this is what of Evera legitimately expresses). But he is mistaken about the means which he uses. Hence wishing to produce one result he produces another. But what he mistakes, is not the end (of Evera) but the means (τὰ πρὸς τὸ τέλος). The phrase here would imply that an action had an end, or aim of its own(οδ ἔνεκα)independent of the doer, -in other words a tendency, of which therefore the doer might be ignorant.

20-27 Having separated off the involuntary in its two forms of compulsion and mistake, there remains to us the conception of the voluntary, as that whose cause is in an agent knowing the circumstances of the action. This definition requires justification, owing to a false notion (or καλώς λέγεται) that acts done from anger or desire (which are 'in the agent') are involuntary. This notion is refuted by the following arguments: (1) It would prove too much, and would make all the actions of brutes and of children involuntary. (2) Some acts prompted by desire or anger are right and good. We must either call these involuntary, or say that while these are voluntary, bad acts similarly prompted are involuntary. Either supposition is absurd. (3) There is a feeling of obligation (δεί), attaching sometimes to these emotions ; we ought to desire some things and be angry at some. This feeling of 'ought' implies freedom. (4) Acts prompted by desire are pleasant; involuntary acts, painful. (5) We have as strong a feeling about errors of passion, as about errors of reason, that they are to be eschewed (φευκτά). The passions are as much part of the man as the reason, therefore acts prompted by them are acts of the man.

  - 2 Διωρισμένων δε τοῦ τε έκουσίου καὶ τοῦ ἀκουσίου, περὶ

The polemic in these arguments does not seem to be directed against any philosophical school, but rather againstapopular error. Aristotle does not deal with the maintainers of the doctrine of necessity as a whole, but only with those who, allowing that half our actions are free, would argue that the other half are not free. Such reasoners are comparatively easy to answer. The most important argument adduced by Aristotle is the third, where he implies that the idea of freedom is contained in that of duty. He does not draw out this principle, nor could he have done so without anticipating the philosophy of later times. The last argument seems to come to this, that you cannot separate a man from his passions, or say the reason is the man's self and the passions not. Elsewhere Aristotle says δ νοῦς αὐτὸς ἔκαστος. And in truth the relation of a man's desires to his individuality might be more deeply investigated than is here done.

φενκτὰ μὲν γὰρ ἄμφω] This seems a counterpart to the former argument, ἄτοπον ἴσως τὸ ἀκούσια φάναι ῶν δεῖ ὁρέγεσθαι. The passions are proved to be voluntary on account of the feeling of reprehension we have for errors of passion. On the emplatic opposition between φενκτόν and αἰρετόν, cf. Εἰλ. Χ. ii. 5.

II. Having given a generic account of the voluntary, Aristotle proceeds to examine the special form of it which he calls προαίρεσις. This does not mean the will as a whole (for which, indeed, Aristotle has no one name), but a particular exhibition of it, namely, a conscious, determinate act of the will. 'Purpose' or 'determination is perhaps the nearest word in our language, but in fact no word exactly corresponds. The contrasts and distinctions made in this chapter might at first seem unnecessary, until we observe that Aristotle is himself founding a new psychology. The προαιρέσεως έπεται διελθείν· οἰκειότατον γὰρ εἶναι δοκεῖ τἢ ἀρετἢ καὶ μᾶλλον τὰ ἤθη κρίνειν τῶν πράξεων. ἡ 2 προαίρεσις δὴ ἐκούσιον μὲν φαίνεται, οὐ ταὐτὸν δέ, ἀλλ' ἐπὶ πλέον τὸ ἐκούσιον· τοῦ μὲν γὰρ ἐκουσίου καὶ παῖδες καὶ τἄλλα ζῷα κοινωνεῖ, προαιρέσεως δ' οὕ, καὶ τὰ ἐξαίφνης ἐκούσια μὲν λέγομεν, κατὰ προαίρεσιν δ' οὕ. οἱ δὲ λέγον- 3 τες αὐτὴν ἐπιθυμίαν ἢ θυμὸν ἢ βούλησιν ἤ τινα δόξαν οὐκ ἐοἰκασιν ὀρθῶς λέγειν. οὐ γὰρ κοινὸν ἡ προαίρεσις καὶ τῶν ἀλόγων, ἐπιθυμία δὲ καὶ θυμός, καὶ ὁ ἀκρατὴς 4 word mpoalpeous only once occurs in Plato, and then not in its present psychological sense, but merely denoting 'selection' or 'choice.' Parmenides, p. 143 Β: τί οὖν; ἐὰν προελώμεθα αύτων είτε βούλει την ούσίαν καὶ τὸ ἔτερον είτε τὴν οὐσίαν και τὸ ἐν είτε τὸ ἐν καὶ τὸ ἔτερον, ἄρ' οὐκ ἐν ἐκάστη τῆ προαιρέσει προαιρούμεθά τινε & δρθώς έχει καλείσθαι άμφοτέρω; It is true that the verb προαιρείσθαι is of frequent occurrence in Plato, but generally in the sense of 'selecting' or 'preferring,' and not 'purposing' or 'determining.' As in other cases. then, Aristotle takes up a floating term from common language, and gives it scientific definiteness, so that it becomes henceforth a psychological formula. His account of mpoalpeous in the present chapter is, that it is a species of the voluntary (ἐκούσιον μεν φαίνεται, οὐ ταὐτὸν δέ, άλλ' έπ] πλέον τὸ ἐκούσιον), and that it differs from anger, desire, wish, and any form of opinion. (1) It differs from desire or anger as not being shared by irrational creatures, as being often opposed to desire, &c. (2) It is still less like anger than like desire, anger excluding the notion of purpose or deliberate choice (ήκιστα γάρ τὰ διά θυμόν κατά προαίρεσιν είναι δοκεί). (3) It is not wish, because we often wish for what is impossible, or beyond our control, and because, speaking generally, wish is of the end, whereas purpose is of the means, and restricts itself to what is in our power. (4) Nor is it opinion, which may be about anything, the eternal or the impossible, and which is characterised as true or false, not, like purpose, as good or bad. Nor is it opinion on matters of action. For opinion on good and evil does not constitute the moral character in the way that purpose does; again, the use of these terms in common language points out a difference between purpose and opinion.

Purpose then, being a species of the voluntary, implies also intellect (μετά λόγου καὶ διαυσίας) and deliberation. It is a deliberate desire of what is within our own power (βουλευτική δρεξις των έφ' ήμιν, Εth. III. iii. 19).

I οlkειότατον γάρ—πράξεων] 'For it seems most closely bound up with virtue, and to be a better criterion of moral character than even actions.' Cf. Είλ. Χ. viii. 5: ἀμφορρητείται δὲ πότερον κυριώτερον τῆς ἀρετῆς ἡ προαίρεσις ἡ αὶ πράξεις, ὡτ ἐν ἀμφοῦν οδοης. The importance of this position as a ground-work for the whole doctrine of morality must be estimated by the advance which is made in it beyond what Plato had arrived at.

3 ol δὲ λέγοντες] There is a tendency in Plato to merge the distinctions of will and reason; whether some of his school are here alluded olov άθανασίαs] 'But wish is for impossibilities, as, for instance, immortality.' This is not a passage that can be cited as an indication of Aristotle's opinion with regard to a future life. 'Αθανασία here means 'exemption from death,' and does not touch the question as to the imperishability of the soul. It seems to have been a stock instance of an impossible wish. Dr. Cardwell quotes Xenophon's Symposium (I.§ 15): οὐτο γλρ Εγωγε σπουδάσαι ἀν δυναμπν μάλλον ἤπερ ἀθὰνατος γενέσθα.

For in purposing what is good or bad our moral character consists,—not in opining it. And we purpose to take or avoid, or something of the kind, but we opine what a thing is, or for whom it is good, or how; but we do not exactly opine to take or avoid. And while purpose is praised rather by the epithets, "of the right object," or "rightly," opinion is praised by the epithet "truly." And we purpose things that, as far as may be (μάλιστα), we know for certain to be good, but we opine what we do not exactly know."

oύδέ τωι] i.e. purpose is not identical with an opinion as to moral matters. The first argument to prove this is characteristic of Aristotle as opposed to Plato. He says, 'our moral character does not consist in our opinions on good and evil, but in the deliberate acts of our will.' This is guarded afterwards by the limitation (§ 15) that 'opinion may go to form purpose, and may You. H.

12-13. The arguments in these sections consist in an appeal to language—we cannot speak of 'opining to take,' &c.

μάλλον ἢ τῷ ὀρθῶτ] H is of course not connected with μάλλον. It simply means 'or.' Όρθῶτ, which should properly go with a verb, seems used because the verb προαιρεῖσθαι was much commoner before Aristotle than the abstract form προαιρεσιτ. 'Ορθή is applied to δρεξει (the element of desire in προαιρεσιτ), Eth. VI. ii. 2.

III. Since Purpose implies deliberation, this latter is now analysed, and an account is given, first of its object, secondly of its mode of operation. The object of deliberation is determined by an exhaustive process. All things are either etornal or mutable; we do not deliberate about things

eternal. Of things mutable, we do not deliberate about those things which are regulated by necessity, by nature, or by chance. Hence it remains that we deliberate about mutable things within the power of man, and not about all such, but about those within our own power, and not about ends, but about means, and where there is room for question. The mode of operation in deliberating is a kind of analysis. Assuming as desirable some end, we first ask what means will immediately produce this end, what again will produce those means, and so on till we have brought the last link of the chain of causation to ourselves, when we commence acting at once, the last step in the analysis being the first in the productive process. If any step occurs which is on the one hand necessary for the given end, and on the other hand unattainable by us, the chain cannot be completed; the deliberation is relinquished. But if all the steps are feasible, that which was indefinite before at once becomes definite, and purpose succeeds deliberation. A discussion of the nature of εὐβουλία as related to poornous occurs Eth. VI. ix., but is evidently written quite independently of the present chapter, on which it improves by employing the formula of the moral syllogism, and by inquiring after the faculty which perceives ends. We might have expected Aristotle to say that in the deliberation which precedes an action some account should always be taken of the right or wrong of the action. But here the only question is represented to be, how a given end is to be obtained? What action will serve as a means to it? Hence while the present discussion must be considered a subtle piece of elementary psychology, and of greatmerit in the infancy of the science, on the other hand it seems incomplete as regards the theory of morals.

3-5 περί δὲ τῶν ἀιδίων-εὐρέσεως] 'No man deliberates about eternal things, such as the universe, or the incommensurability of the diagonal and the side in a square; nor indeed about things in motion, if the motion takes place invariably in the same way, whether of necessity, or by nature, or from any other cause, as in the instance of the solstices and the risings of the sun : nor about things entirely variable, like droughts and rains: nor about matter of chance. like the finding of a treasure.' The opposition to tà didia is tà en kunhaei. The more exhaustive division of objects would have been that which is given Eth. VI. i. 6, into τὰ ἐνδεχόμενα άλλως έχειν and τὰ μη ἐνδεχόμενα. But there is an absence of logical formulæ in the present book which is observable. The instances here given of the eternal are (1) the universe, (2) a particular mathematical truth -that the diagonal of a square is incommensurate with its side. That the universe is eternal, being uncreated, indestructible, and, as a whole, immutable, was part of Aristotle's physical philosophy. Cf. de Cœlo I. K. 10: "Ωστ' εί τὸ όλον σώμα συνεχές δν ότὲ μέν ούτως ότε δ' εκείνως διατίθεται καί διακεκόσμηται, ή δὲ τοῦ δλου σύστασίς έστι κόσμος καὶ οὐρανός, οὐκ ἄν ὁ κόσμος γίγνοιτο καὶ φθείροιτο, άλλ' αὶ διαθέσεις aύτοῦ. - The above mathematical truth is called 'eternal,' De Gen. An. II. νί. 15: ἐπεὶ καὶ τὸ τρίγωνον ἔχειν δυσίν όρθαις ίσας άει και το την διάμετρον άσύμμετρον είναι πρός την πλευράν allion. It is mentioned as one of those things which philosophy begins by wondering at, and ends by feeling their universal necessity. Metaphys. Ι. ii. 15: καθάπερ τῶν θαυμάτων ταὐτόματα τοῖς μήπω τεθεωρηκόσι τὴν αἰτίαν, η περί τὰς τοῦ ἡλίου τροπάς η την της διαμέτρου άσυμμετρίαν θαυμαστόν γάρ είναι δοκεί πασιν, εί τι τω έλαχίστω μη μετρείται. δεί δέ είς τούναντίον άποτελευτήσαι -- οὐθέν γὰρ ἄν οὕτω θαυμάσειεν ανήρ γεωμετρικός ώς εί γένοιτο ή διάμετρος μετρητή. Two kinds of eternity seem here placed in juxtaposition-one physical, the other mathematical. But eternity or necessity can only exist in relation to the laws of the mind that perceives it. Therefore we might say that these two kinds of eternity find their meeting-point in a metaphysic above the division of the sciences. Aristotle however is writing où κατ' ἀκρί-βειαν.

7 atria γλρ—ἀνθρώπου] 'For the causes of things seem to be as follows, nature, and necessity, and chance, and again reason and all that depends on man.' A similar classification of causes is implied Eth. I. ix. 5, VI. iv. 4. The relation of necessity and chance, as causes, to nature, forms the subject of Aristotle's Physics, Book II. Chapters iv.—ix. See Vol. I. p. 250.

S και περι—γραπτέον] 'And on the one hand there is no deliberation about sciences that are fixed and complete in themselves, as for instance about writing—for we do not doubt how we ought to write.' The ἀκριβεῖς ἐπιστήμαι here meant are not the 'exact sciences,' as we may judge from the instance given. 'Ακριβιῆς seems equivalent to 'fixed' (of. the note on Eth. I. vii. 18), and ἐπιστήμη is used in a sense equivalent to τέχτη, though the words are immediately afterwards distinguished.

* ΙΙ οὅτε γὰρ -- διάγραμμα] 'The physician does not deliberate whether he is to cure, nor the orator whether he is to persuade, nor the statesman whether he is to produce law and order. The end is not the subject of deliberation in any science. end being assumed, we consider how and by what means it can be brought about; if it appear that there are more ways than one, we inquire which is the easiest and best; if it can be accomplished by one mean alone, we inquire how this produces the end, and by what it is itself produced, until we come to that which as a cause is first, but is the last thing to be discovered; for such deliberation as we describe is like seeking the solution of a geometrical problem by analysis of the diagram,' The process of deliberation is analytical, proceeding backwards έπι την άρχην. It ends with the πρώτον αίτιον, i.e. the individual will. 'Will,' says Kant, 'is that kind of causality attributed to living agents, in so far as they are possessed of reason, and freedom is such a property of that causality as enables them to originate events independently of foreign determining causes.' That each man is, as regards his own acts, an originating cause not determined by other causes, is Aristotle's view throughout. Kant's definition throws light upon this.

15 ξοικε δὴ-ξενεκα] 'It seems, therefore, that man is, as we have said, the cause of his actions: that deliberation is about the things to be done by ourselves, and that actions are means to something else.' In one sense, and so far as deliberation is concerned, actions must be regarded as means. Cf. Rhetoric, 1. vi. 1:

πρόκειται τῷ συμβουλεύονται σκοπὸς τὸ συμφέρον, βουλεύονται δὲ οὐ περὶ τοῦ τέλους ἀλλά περὶ τῶν πρὸς τὸ τέλος ταῦτα δ' ἐστὶ τὰ συμφέροντα κατὰ τὰς πράξεις. But in another sense, and from a moral point of view, each action is an end-in-itself. Cf. Είλ. VI. ii. 5: Οὐ τέλος ἀπλῶς—τὸ ποιητόν. 'λλλὰ τὸ πρακτόν' ἡ γὰρ εὐπραξία τέλος, ἡ δ' ὁρεξις τούτου.

'For every one stops inquiring how he shall act, when he has brought home the first link in the chain to himself and to the guiding principle in himself; that is to say, to that which purposes.' Throughout these discussions we find a striking clearness of expression for some of the ordinary phenomena of consciousness; on the other hand, evident tokens that the psychology is new and tentative; and again, a want of deeper inquiry into

18 δήλον δέ – δήμω] 'Now this is exemplified from the old politics which Homer depicted; for the kings used to announce to the people the course they had selected.' Cf. the conduct of Agamemnon, Iliad 11. 53, sqq. A modern illustration is furnished by the French Parliaments, which used to register the edicts presented to them by the king as a matter of course. The Paraphrast explains the comparison by making the people represent the mpoalpeous-Elodyer yap τούς βασιλείς μετά την βουλην τό προκριθέν ἀπαγγέλλοντας τῷ δήμω ὥσπερ τη προαιρέσει, ώστε πραχθήναι, The people were required to acquiesce in and carry out the decisions of the kings, which else would have remained unratified. So the reason announces its decisions to the will or purpose, i.e. the active powers in the mind. Metaphors of this sort never accurately represent mental distinctions. The present comparison has many flaws. For the mpoalpeous is here called τὸ ἡγούμενον, which does not answer to the people, distinguished from the king. Again, it is the individual (ἔκαστος), not the reason, that announces his deliberations to the leading part in himself. What constitutes the individual as separate from the will or purpose? And, is not reason part of purpose, how then can it be distinguished from it?

19 δυτος δέ-βούλευσω] object of purpose is that, which, being in our power, we desire after deliberation, purpose will be a deliberate desire of things in our power. After deliberating we decide, and form a desire in accordance with our deliberation.' The Paraphrast here reads κατά την βούλησιν at the end of this passage. There might seem to be something plausible in the change, because βούλευσις is represented as confining itself to means; hence how can we be said to desire κατά την βούλευσιν? Consistently, our desires must depend on something else, namely, βούλησις-deliberation is the faculty for attaining them. On the other hand, the phrases βουλευτοῦ δρεκτού, and βουλευτική δρεξις, run the consideration of means and ends together.

IV. Hitherto every act has been regarded as a means, and has been accounted voluntary because originating in the individual. Deliberation and purpose have been restricted in their function to the mere choice and taking of means. A great question therefore remains to be mooted, whence do we get our conception of ends? What is the nature of the fuculty called βούλησες, which has been assumed to be the faculty of ends? Are we as free in the choice of these, as we are in that of the means? Aristotle contents himself with mentioning in the present chapter that there are two extreme opinions, the one (that of Plato) that wish is always for the good; the other (that of some of the sophists) that it is for the apparent good. He rejects both of these, the first as contradicting facts, the second as ignoring any true object of wish. He takes a position between them, that, abstractedly and ideally, as appealing to the universal reason (ἀπλῶς μὲν καὶ κατ' ἀλήθειαν) the good is the object of wish, while to the individual mind only what appears good can seem desirable; hence, although the good man, who has the mens sana, and is thus in accordance with the universal reason, and is its exponent in particular cases (τάληθὲς έν έκάστοις όρα ώσπερ κανών και μέτρον αὐτῶν ὤν), wishes for the good alone, others are deceived by false appearances and by pleasure, and choose what is not truly good. statement that the morally good man (σπουδαίος) wishes aright, there is implied the doctrine, afterwards developed by the Peripatetics, that it is Virtue that gives a right conception of ends. Cf. Eth. Eud. II. xi. I, and Eth. Nic. VI. xii, 8, and see Vol. I. Essay I. p. 59.

This doctrine is found stated at length in the Gorgias of Plato, p. 466, sqq.
Polus having argued that the position of a tyrant or orator is enviable, because 'the can do what he wishes,' Socrates answers that 'the tyrant or orator does nothing that he wishes: '
φημὶ γὰρ, ὧ Πάλε, ἐγὼ καὶ τοὺε

φήτορας και τούς τυράννους δύνασθαι μέν έν ταις πόλεσι σμικρότατον - οὐδέν γάρ ποιείν ων βούλονται, ώς έπος είπειν ποιείν μέντοι ο τι αν αύτοις δόξη βέλτιστον είναι. Then follows an account of Bounger, that it is of ends not means. Πότερον οθν σοι δοκοθσιν οί ἄνθρωποι τοῦτο βούλεσθαι, δ άν πράττωσιν έκάστοτε, ή έκείνο οῦ ἔνεκα πράττουσι τοῦθ' δ πράττουσιν: Βν which it can be demonstrated that βούλησις is of the absolute good. The difference between Plato's account and the one above is, that Plato distinguishes βούλησις from ἐπιθυμία, while Aristotle does not. The βούληous of Plato is the higher will, or desire of the Universal. higher sense of the word wish, no one wishes except for what is good. that is, in his best moments, in the deepest recesses of his nature, if the true bearings of his wish be pointed In this sense the wish out to him. of the individual is in accordance with universal reason, and is an expression of it. In a lower sense, we wish with different parts of our nature, and thus wish for all sorts of things, bad as well as good. But to this latter kind of wish the name 'desire' is appropriate. The tenet ὅτι ἀγαθοῦ βούλησις έστιν is of great importance for morals. It implies much that modern systems would convey in other terms, such as the 'supremacy of conscience,' the 'autonomy of the will,' Elsewhere Aristotle distinctly maintains it. Cf. Metaphys. XI. vii. 2: τὸ ὁρεκτὸν και τὸ νοητόν κινεί οὐ κινούμενα. τούτων τὰ πρώτα τὰ αὐτά (transcendentally the objects of reason and of longing are identical). 'Επιθυμητόν μέν γάρ το φαινόμενον καλόν, βουλητόν δέ πρώτον τό δν καλόν. Ιη

De Anima, 111. x. 4, he makes the wish (or will) side with reason, in opposition to desire. 'Η γάρ βούλησις δρεξις δταν δέ κατά τὸν λογισμόν κινήται, καί κατά βούλησιν κινείται. ή δ' δρεξις κινεί παρά τον λογισμόν ή γάρ έπιθυμία δρεξίς τίς έστιν. In other parts of the Ethics also (which may hence be concluded to have been composed at a different period from this chapter) this distinction between βούλησις, the general wish, and any particular desire or determination, is observed. Cf. Eth. v. ix. 6: οὐθεὶς γὰρ βούλεται οὐδ' ὁ ἀκρατής, άλλὰ παρά την βούλησιν πράττει. οδτε γάρ βούλεται ούθεις δ μη οίεται είναι σπουδαίον. VIII. xiii. 8: τοῦτο δὲ συμβαίνει διὰ τὸ βούλεσθαι μέν πάντας ή τούς πλείστους τὰ καλά, προαιρείσθαι δὲ τὰ ώφέλιμα.

τοῖς δὲ τοῦ φαινομένου ἀγαθοῦ] This is a corollary of the doctrine of Protagoras. If the individual could only know what 'seemed' to him, he could only wish for what seemed good. Thus the objective distinction between good and evil is done away with (συμβαίνει μὴ εἶναι φύσει βουλη-τόν). Cf. Μεταρίγε. Χ. vi. 1: Έκεῦνος (ὁ Πρωταγόρας) ἔψη πάστων χρημάτων είναι μέτρον ἄνθρωπον, οὐθὲν ἔτερον λέγων ἡ τὸ δοκοῦν ἐκάστω τοῦτο καὶ εἶναι παγίως. τοῦτου δὲ γιγγομένου τὸ αὐτὸ συμβαίνει καὶ εἶναι καὶ μὴ εἶναι, καὶ κακὸν καὶ ἀγαθὸν εἶναι.

4 ὁ σπουδαῖος γάρ ἔκαστα κρίνει ὁρθῶς] The good man is made here again, as above (11. vi. 15), that standard of right and wrong, that exponent of the universal reason, by which Aristotle escapes being forced into an utterly relative system of morals.

5 οὐ γὰρ οὖσα ἀγαθὸν φαίνεται] The 'pleasant' is characterised as 'the seeming good' in the Peripa"Οντος δη βουλητοῦ μὲν τοῦ τέλους, βουλευτῶν δε καὶ 5 προαιρετῶν τῶν πρὸς τὸ τέλος, αὶ περὶ ταῦτα πράξεις κατὰ προαίρεσιν ἂν εἶεν καὶ έκούσιοι. αὶ δὲ τῶν ἀρετῶν ἐνέργειαι περὶ ταῦτα. ἐφὶ ἡμῦν δὲ καὶ ἡ ἀρετή, ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ ἡ 2

V. Aristotle winds up his account of the voluntary, by arguing that virtue and vice are free (¿o' nuîv δὲ καὶ ἡ ἀρετή, ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ ἡ As before remarked, this must not be taken as a metaphysical discussion of the question of free-will, Partly, the question had never yet been fully started; partly, Aristotle would have thought it foreign to an ethical treatise; partly, we find in the present chapter that same elementary and tentative character which marks the previous discussions in this book. In dealing with one of the real difficulties of the question at the end of the chapter, Aristotle contents himself with a very qualified and moderate assertion of freedom, which contrasts with the dogmatic statements on the same subject in the Ethics of Eudemus. The discussion here is evidently suggested by, and directed against, the doctrine of the Platonists, that 'vice is involuntary,' since it consists in ignorance. The arguments are as follows: (1) All action implies the possibility of its contrary, hence if to act rightly be in our power, to act wrongly must be in our power also. (2) That an individual is the originating cause of his actions, is a conception which it is difficult to get rid of. This implies freedom. (3) We all act as if vice were free as well as virtue. It is punished by the state. Even for VOL. II.

ignorance and carelessness producing vice, men are held to be responsible. (4) Men must not charge their acts upon their natural character -rather their character is produced by their acts. (5) The analogy of bodily infirmities shows us that if some vices are cogenital, some, at all events, are self-produced. (6) The great difficulty of the question is as follows: if, as was said above (Chapter IV.), we each of us desire what seems good; if our conception of the end, that is, our idea of good, depends not on our own will, but on nature, or our character and tendency from birth; and if all our acts are determined by this conception of the end, how can they be called free? Aristotle answers by putting various alternatives : (a) You may either accept this position in its full extent. It will then apply to virtue as well as vice. Both will be equally under a law of nature. Neither will be voluntary. But this the mind seems to revolt against. (3) Or, you may say that while the end is absolutely determined, the means to it are all free as springing from the will of the individual. Thus, virtue and vice are free, because all their parts are free. (y) Or, you may modify the doctrine by admitting that there is something self-produced and selfdetermined in the character as a whole, and therefore in the idea of good, which is to determine our actions.

I-2 δετος δη -- ή κακία] 'The end then being the object of wish, while the means are the objects of deliberation and purpose, the actions that are concerned with the means must depend on purpose and must be voluntary. But every calling out of the virtues into play is concerned with the means; virtue accordingly is in our power, and in like manner so is vice.

al περl ταῦτα πράξεις] The words περl ταῦτα are ambiguous. The Paraphrast confines them to 'the means,' which rendering is supported by κατά προαίρεσιν ἀν εἶεν. Actions were above said to be means (III. iii. 15).

αί δὲ τῶν ἀρετῶν ἐνέργειαι] This is an unusual expression. We find it again, Eth. x. iii. I : οὐδὲ γὰρ αἰ της άρετης ενέργειαι ποιότητές είσιν. Aristotle's usual formula is ένέργεια κατ' aperty, i.e. the evocation of the internal nature into consciousness or action, under the regulation of the moral law. He seems averse to considering άρετή as a δύναμις, or latent quality that might be so evoked. The psychology of this passage is different from that of Eth. vi. xii. 8-10. Here it is said that βούλησις gives us the idea of the end, and that virtue consists in προαίρεσις and βούλευσις taking the means; there that virtue gives the end, and an intellectual faculty  $(\phi\rho\delta\nu\eta\sigma\iota s)$  the means. But see above, note on iv. 1.

2 èν οἶs γὰρ ἐφ' ἡμῶν τὸ πράττεν καὶ τὸ μὴ πράττεν] Elsewhere (Meta-phys. VIII. ii. 2) Aristotle states in more philosophical form this first step in the doctrine of free-will, namely, that every psychical δόναμι is a capacity of contraries, see Vol. I. p. 238.

3 τοῦτο δ' ἢν τὸ ἀγαθοῖς καὶ κακοῖς εἶναι] 'And this is, according to our hypothesis,—being good and bad.'  $\frac{1}{4}ν = ^4$  is as we have said,' referring to the preceding section. Trendelenburg in his paper on τὸ τἱ ἢν εἶναι (Rheinisches Museum, 1828) tells us that ἀγαθοῖς in the present passage is by attraction to ἡμῶν. It is therefore to be distinguished from the logical expression τὸ ἀγαθῷ εἶναι, 'the essential idea of goodness.'

4 τό δὲ λέγειν ὡς—ἀληθεῖ] 'But to say that "No man prefers a crime or spurns a bliss" seems half false and half true.' The line here quoted, on which the discussion in this chapter turns, is of uncertain authorship. It is quoted in the ninth book of the Lave of Plato, p. 374, A, which passage is referred to here. Πότερον δὲ ἐκόντας οἰει ἔχειν τοῦτο τὸ ἀδικον τοὺς ἀνθρώπους ἡ ἀκοντας; ιδὸῦ δὲ λέγω,

'Αλλά τοι, ὧ Σώκρατει, εễ ἡ παλαιὰ παρομία ἔχει, ὅτι πολλὰ ψεόδονται ἀοιδοί. The answer to this is, an argument to show that injustice is δι' ἀμαθίαν, and therefore involuntary. Οὐκ ἀρα ἐψεόσατο τοῦτό γε ἀοιδόκ. The original saying was probably a mere truism, πονηρόκ meaning not 'wicked' but 'wretched.' This play on the word rendered the line peculiarly suitable for Plato's argument. The same quotation occurs in the spurious Platonic dialogue περὶ Δικαίου.

5 γεννητὴν τῶν πράξεων ὥσπερ καὶ τέκκω) The analogy here given, when looked at closely, does not imply any very strong assertion of free-will (though Aristotle meant it to be so). For the father inherits, or receives by nature, qualities that he transmits to his children. Analogously the will might be regarded as an effect, as well as a cause, of circumstances.

7 τούτοις δ' ξοικε-νομοθετών] 'This seems to be supported by the testimony both of individuals and of the great legislators themselves,' The argument drawn from the constitution of society. from the fact of rewards and punishments, goes so far as this. It proves that the mind is of a nature to be acted on by inducements. It, of course, does not touch the metaphysical difficulty as to the whole world being bound by a law of necessity. But it proves an instinctive belief existing in society, exactly coincident with the position of Aristotle, that the individual is the cause of particular acts. There is no natural tendency in criminals to disclaim responsibility for their crimes. If they do so, it is not from an instinctive feeling, but rather from a sophisticated mind. As before said, this fact is not sufficient to disprove a metaphysical system which would represent legislature, judge, criminal, and the whole world, as forced to do what they do by an irresistible succession of cause and effect. But ethically and politically it is sufficient to justify a practical assumption of freedom. And in any system it must at all events be taken account of.

This may be illustrated by the case of those who are practising for some contest or action.-for they keep on exercising their powers. Now not to know that the several states of mind arise from particular developments of the powers is absolute idiocy.' This passage contains exactly the same theory of the formation of moral states as that given at the beginning of Book II. But it is written independently of the former passage-in that separate way, which must be called a marked peculiarity of Aristotle's writings.

to be intemperate.' Aristotle would not say himself that any one 'wished to be intemperate,' that is, wished it in the general, in the abstract, for its own sake. But here he points out that those who do not wish to be intemperate yet take the steps that lead inevitably to this. He argues that the means make the end free; the outset, the conclusion; the parts, the whole. Afterwards (§ 22) he allows that the general state is not so entirely in our power as the particular act. With regard to the former it is rather true to say that we are responsible for it, than that we choose it. A paradox then still remains, that men produce by voluntary acts that which they do not wish. The resolution of this is to be found in Eth. VII. iii.. where it is shown that right moral acting consists in allowing the act of the moment to be sufficiently influenced by universal considerations. Error and vice, on the contrary, consist in suffering the universal idea, the general conception of what is good and desirable, to stand in abeyance.

14 προεμένω δ' οὐκέτι] 'But after he has thrown his health away, he has no longer a choice.' To 'give away' is the only sense in which προέσθαι is used in the Ethics. Cf. IV. i. 9, IX. i. 7, &c.

17-20 This complex argument will be perhaps made most clear, if divided into the following separate members. (1) El δέ τις λέγοι—αὐτῷ is the general protasis. Suppose it to be said that all aim at what appears to them good, but that their ideas and impressions are beyond their control, being dependent in each case on the character of the individual. (2) On this an alternative follows: either (el μέν οδν-αίτιος) the individual is the cause of his own character, and so accordingly of his ideas, or (3) let us see what the consequences will be if we allow that the individual is not the cause of his own character (el ôè μή-εὐφυία). In this case no one will be responsible for doing wrong: wrong will reduce itself to mere ignorance, the knowledge of the good to a happy gift of nature. (4) But these extreme deductions are overthrown (εί δὲ ταῦτ' ἐστίν — ὁπωσδήποτε) by its being shown that they will equally disprove the voluntariness of virtue, as well as that of vice. (5) The argument is concluded by summing up the results of the previous discussions (είτε δή-ομοίως γάρ). In whatever sense virtue is said to be free, whether as implying that the idea of the end is in our power, or only that there is something free and individual in the taking of means,-in exactly the same sense will vice be free, for these two opposite terms stand on exactly the same footing.

φαινομένοῦ ἀγαθοῦ, τῆς δὲ φαντασίας οὐ κύριοι, ἀλλ' ὁποῖός ποθ' ἔκαστός ἐστι, τοιοῦτο καὶ τὸ τέλος φαίνεται αὐτῶ·

17 της δέ φαντασίας οὐ κύριοι] 'But are not masters of their impression,' Parragía is a special word, denoting something between sense and intellect (φαντασία γαρ έτερον καλαίσθήσεως και διανοίας αυτή τε ου γίγνεται άνευ αίσθήσεως, καὶ άνευ ταύτης ούκ έστιν ὑπόληψις. De An. 111. iii. 5), It denotes, in short, the sensuous impression of an object. Aristotle says that we may have a false φαντασία even where we have true opinions, as, for instance, our parraola of the sun makes it a foot in diameter, while our belief is that the sun surpasses in magnitude the habitable world (φαίνεται δέ και ψευδή, περί

ων αμα υπόληψιν άληθη έχει, οίον φαίνεται μέν ὁ ήλιος ποδιαίος, πεπίστευται δ' είναι μείζων της οίκουμένης. De An. III. iii. 15). Фантавіа is closely allied with uvnun, it belongs to the same part of the mind (De Memor. i, 9). Memory and pavτασία are something short of intellect-Aristotle attributed them to the lower animals. Cf. Metaphys. I. ί. 3: τὰ μέν οὖν ἄλλα ταῖς φαντασίαις ξή και ταις μνήμαις, έμπειρίας δέ μετέχει μικρόν. Cf. also Eth. VII. iii. 11. Brutes and the incontinent are said to follow their parraglas, De An. III. iii. 21 : καὶ διὰ τὸ ἐμμένειν καὶ όμοίως είναι ταις αισθήσεσι, πολλά κατ' αύτας πράττει τα ζώα, τα μέν δια τό μη έχειν νοῦν, οἶον τὰ θηρία, τὰ δὲ διά τὸ ἐπικαλύπτεσθαι τὸν νοῦν ἐνίστε πάθει ή νόσοις ή ύπνω, οδον οἱ ἄνθρωποι. Cf. Eth. VII. vii. 8. We find the word φαντασία not as yet settled into a psychological formula in Plato's Theætetus, p. 152 B, where the doctrine of Protagoras is shown to imply that everything is as it appears, and that this appearing is identical with sensation. Σ. τὸ δέ γε φαίνεται αίσθάνεσθαί έστιν; Θ. "Εστι γάρ. Σ. Φαντασία άρα καὶ αίσθησις ταύτὸν ἐν τε θερμοίς και πάσι τοίς τοιούτοις, οΐα γάρ αλοθάνεται ξκαστος, τοιαθτα έκάστω και κινδυνεύει είναι. Aristotle, giving a scientific account of it in the De Anima, separates it, as we have seen, from sensation on the one hand, and reason on the other. The term does not correspond with any of our regular psychological terms. In relation to the fancy and the imagination, it represents the material for these, the brain-images out of which the creations of fancy (as well as the phantasmagoria of dreams) are conεί μεν οὖν έκαστος έαυτῷ τῆς Εξεώς ἐστί πως αἴτιος, καὶ της φαντασίας έσται πως αυτός αίτιος Μεί δε μή, ουθείς αυτώ αίτιος τοῦ κακὰ ποιείν, ἀλλὰ δι' ἄγνοιαν τοῦ τέλους ταῦτα πράττει, διὰ τούτων, οδόμενος αὐτῷ τὸ ἄριστον ἔσεσθαι. ή δὲ τοῦ τέλους ἔφεσις οὐκ αὐθαίρετος, ἀλλὰ φῦναι δεῖ ὥσπερ όψιν έχοντα, ή κρινεί καλώς καὶ τὸ κατ' ἀλήθειαν ἀγαθὸν αιρήσεται, και έστιν ευφυής ῷ τοῦτο καλῶς πέφυκεν τὸ γαρ μέγιστον και κάλλιστον, και ο παρ' έτέρου μη οίον τε λαβείν μηδε μαθείν, άλλ' οίον έφυ, τοιούτον έξει, και το εί καὶ τὸ καλώς ταῦτο πεφυκέναι ή τελεία καὶ άληθινή αν είη εὐφυία, εὶ δη ταῦτ' έστιν ἀληθη, τί μῶλλον ή ἀρετή της 18 κακίας έσται εκούσιον; αμφοίν γαρ όμοιως, τω αγαθώ καὶ τῶ κακῶ, τὸ τέλος Φύσει ἡ ὁπωσδήποτε φαίνεται καὶ κείται, τὰ δὲ λοιπὰ πρὸς τοῦτ' ἀναφέροντες πράττουσιν όπωσδήποτε, είτε δη το τέλος μη φύσει εκάστῷ φαί- 19 νεται οιονδήποτε, άλλά τι και παρ αυτον έστιν, είτε το μέν τέλος φυσικόν, τω δε τὰ λοιπὰ πράττειν εκουσίως τὸν σπουδαίον ή άρετη έκο σιόν έστιν, οὐθέν ήττον καὶ ή κακία έκούσιον αν είη όμοίως γάρ και τω κακώ ύπάρχει το δί αύτον εν ταις πράξεσι και εί μη εν τω τέλει, εί ούν, 20 ωσπερ λέγεται, εκούσιοί είσιν αι άρεται (και γάρ των έξεων συναίτιοί πως αὐτοί ἐσμεν, καὶ τῷ ποιοί τινες είναι τὸ τέλος Aristotle, not entering at all into the philosophy of the imaginative faculties, merely apeaks of characle as furnishing a necessary element to thought (rocir abs lorus drev characle as furnishing a necessary element to thought (rocir abs lorus drev characle as furnishing a necessary element to thought (rocir abs lorus). From what has been said it is easy to see the special appropriateness of the word in the above passage to denote an impression or idea of the good received passively, and in itself erroneous.

21-22 These sections form the junction between the somewhat isolated treatise on the Voluntary and Aristotle's discussion of the separate virtues. They bear marks of having been added for the express purpose of forming a junction. For after a general statement of the theory of virtue in section 21 there is a résumé of some points with regard to the voluntariness of actions and habits, which is just what a man might have been likely to add after reading over his own treatise, and thinking that it required a word or two of elucidation.

'But actions and habits are not equally voluntary, for we are masters of our actions from the beginning to the end because we know all the particulars, but we can only control the beginning of our habits, while the gradual addition made by each particular step is unperceived, as is the case also with illnesses.'

—εἰσίν] 'Let us therefore resume
our discussion of the separate virtues,

stating what they are, with what actions they are concerned, and in what manner. It will at the same time appear how many there are.' On the assumed completeness of Ariscotle's list of the virtues, see note on Eth. II. vii. I, and the plan of Book IV.; cf. also Eth. III. x. 1, note.

και πρώτον περί άνδρείας] Aristotle's admirable account of courage is to some extent indebted to the observations of Plato, while in some points again it is a protest against the Platonic theory. In the Protagoras (pp. 349-351, 359-361) courage is identified with the science of the truly safe and the truly dangerous. In the Laches (pp. 198-201), however, written previously, it is argued that, if danger be 'future evil,' courage cannot be the science of this, for a science excludes all consideration of time, so, if courage be a science at all, it must be the science of good and evil universally. Thus Plato merges courage in that universal wise consciousness, which he considered the true ground of morality. In the Republic (p. 430 B), courage is said to be the maintenance of "Ότι μὲν οὖν μεσότης ἐστὶ περὶ φόβους καὶ θάρρη, ήδη 6 καὶ πρότερον εἴρηται, φοβούμεθα δὲ δηλον ὅτι τὰ φοβερά, 2 ταῦτα δ' ἐστὶν ὡς ἀπλῶς εἰπεῖν κακά' διὸ καὶ τὸν φόβον ὑρίζονται προσοδικίαν κακοῦ. φοβούμεθα μὲν οὖν πάντα 3 τὰ κακά, οἶον ἀδοξίαν πενίαν νόσον ἀφιλίαν θάνατον, ἀλλ' οὐ περὶ πάντα δοκεῖ ὁ ἀνδρεῖος εἶναι' ἕνια γὰρ καὶ δεῖ φοβεῖσθαι καὶ καλόν, τὸ δὲ μὴ αἰσχρόν, οἶον ἀδοξίαν' ὁ μὲν γὰρ φοβούμενος ἐπιεικὴς καὶ αἰδήμων, ὁ δὲ μὴ φο-right principles in spite of the distractions of danger. By Aristotle, courage is more definitely fixed as a condition of the moral side of man's nature, and as implying not only a consciousness, but a conscious choice of the highest moral good. Its sphere is limited to war, and thus a rather special and restricted character is given to the virtue. At the same time a reverence is shown for the nobleness of courage beyond what we find in Plato. And deep human observations are made which are in the best style of Aristotle's moral writing.

VI. 1-2 περί φόβους και θάρρηταθτα δ' έστιν ώς άπλως είπειν κακά: διό και τον φόβον δρίζονται προσδοκίαν κακοῦ] These points are accepted from Plato, cf. Protag. p. 358 D: προσδοκίαν τινά λέγω κακοῦ τοῦτο, εἴτε φόβον elte déos kaleîre. Laches, p. 198 B: ἡγούμεθα δ' ἡμεῖς δεινά μὲν είναι & καὶ δέος παρέχει, θαρραλέα δὲ & μη δέος παρέχει δέος δὲ παρέχει οὐ τὰ γεγονότα ούδὲ τὰ παρόντα τῶν κακῶν, άλλὰ τὰ προσδοκώμενα δέος γάρ είναι προσδοκίαν μέλλοντος κακού. . . . τούτων δέ γε την επιστήμην ανδρείαν προσαγορεύεις; κομιδή γε. The subject of the present chapter is the proper sphere of courage. ήδη και πρότερον, Eth. II. vii. 2.

courage is extended to all those objects which are here expressly excluded from it-dangers by sea, illness, political conflicts, even the encountering of temptation. Bouldμενος γάρ σου πυθέσθαι μη μόνον τούς έν τῷ ὁπλιτικῷ ἀνδρείους, άλλά καὶ τούς έν τω Ιππικώ και έν ξύμπαντι τώ πολεμικώ είδει, και μη μόνον τούς έν τώ πολέμω, άλλα και τούς έν τοις πρός την θάλατταν κινδύνοις άνδρείους δντας, καί δσοι γε πρός νόσους και δσοι πρός πενίας ή και πρός τὰ πολιτικά άνδρείοι είσι, και έτι αδ μη μόνον δσοι πρός λύπας ανδρείοι είσιν ή φόβους, άλλα και πρός έπιθυμίας ή ήδονας δεινοί μάχεσθαι, και μένοντες ή άναστρέφοντες . . . είσι γάρ πού τινες, ω Λάχης και έν τοις τοιούτοις ανδρείοι. Aristotle treats all such applications of the word άνδρείος as merely metaphorical (λέγεται δ' ύπό τινων άνδρεῖος κατά μεταφοράν), to these he opposes the proper use of the word (kuplus 8h λέγοιτ' åν, § 10) as belonging peculiarly to war.

ένια γὰρ δεί φοβείσθαι καὶ καλόν] Cf. Eth. 111 i. 24: δεί δὲ καὶ ὁργίζεσθαι ἐπί τισι καὶ ἐπιθυμεῖν τινῶν, ότο τγεἰας καὶ μαθήσεως. It admits of discussion how much, independently of a merely permissive attitude in the will and reason, the instincts of fear, anger, and desire may be positively called out and even created by considerations and suggestions of the reason, or how far their place death, and about things which suddenly ($\text{tr}\delta\gamma_{tr}a$) bring on death, —and such are especially the affairs of war. No doubt the brave man, when he is upon the sea, or upon a sickbed, will be brave: but his bravery will not be that of a sailor. Landsmen in danger of drowning give men in danger of drowning give all hope of safety, and feel repugnance at the thought of such a death; while sailors are made confident by their experience. Besides, men put forth their courage on occasions where prowess may be shown or where to die is glorious; but in death at sea or from sickness neither of these qualities is to be found.' In this passage Aristotle was evidently not alluding to death in a sea-fight, but to being drowned in a shipwreck. At Salamis 'the deck' was a 'field of fame' (ἐν οῖς ἀλκὴ ἡ καλοὺ τὸ ἀποθανεῦν).

VII. This chapter discusses courage as being a mean state with regard to daring and fearing. Setting aside terrors which are too great for human nature to bear, the brave man is calm (ἀνέκπληκτος), and endures or fears all things in their due measure according to the true standard, his aim being to attain the noble. Thus he is distinguished from the extremes by whom these proportions are violated. The extremes, by a refinement which Aristotle does not extend to the other virtues (cf. note on Eth. 11. vii. 2), are fourfold. (1) Deficiency of fear, producing a character which has no name. (2) Excess of fear = cowardice.
(3) Deficiency of daring = cowardice.
(4) Excess of daring = rashness. Two of these terms are identical, and one is nameless, so that the extremes really reduce themselves to cowardice and rashness (§ 12). Some excellent remarks are introduced on the characters of the boastful man and the rash man.

I τὸ δὲ φοβερὸν—θαρραλέα] Having said where fear and courage are to be looked for, we next observe that fear admits of degrees, so that courage is proportionate. 'Now the Fearful is different to different persons, independently of our calling some things fearful beyond human endurance. These latter are fearful to every man in his senses, but dangers that are not beyond human endurance differ both in magnitude and in degree, a difference found also in the things that give courage.'

6 τέλος δὲ—ἀνδρείαν] This difficult section must be taken in connection with what has gone before. Aristotle is determining the characteristics of a brave act. He here says δὲ πάσης ἐνεργείας ἐστὶ τὸ κατὰ τὴν ἔξιν. καὶ τῷ ἀνδρείος δὲ ἡ ἀνδρεία καλόν. τοιοῦτον δὴ καὶ τὸ τέλος ὁρίζεται γὰρ ἔκαστον τῷ τέλει. καλοῦ δὴ ἔνεκα ὁ ἀνδρείος ὑπομένει 7 καὶ πράττει τὰ κατὰ τὴν ἀνδρείαν. τῶν δ' ὑπερβαλλόντων ὁ μὲν τῆ ἀφοβία ἀνώνυμος (ἔρηται δ' ἡμῖν ἐν τοίς πρότερον ὅτι πολλά ἐστιν ἀνώνυμα), εἰη δ' ἄν τις μαινόμενος ἡ ἀνάλγητος, εἰ μηθὲν φοβοῖτο, μήτε σεισμὸν μήτε τὰ κύματα, καθάπερ φασὶ τοὺς Κελτούς. ὁ δὲ τῷ θαρρεῖν δ ὑπερβάλλων περὶ τὰ φοβερὰ θρασύς. δοκεῖ δὲ καὶ ἀλαίζῶν εἰναι ὁ θρασὺς καὶ προσποιητικὸς ἀνδρείας. ὡς οῦν ἐκεῖνος περὶ τὰ φοβερὰ ἔχει, οὕτως οῦτος βούλεται φαίνεσο σθαι ἐν οἰς οὖν δύναται, μιμεῖται. διὸ καὶ εἰσὶν οἱ πολλοὶ αὐτῶν θρασύδειλοι ἐν τούτοις γὰρ θρασυνόμενοι τὰ φοβερὰ οὐχ ὑπομένουσιν. ὁ δὲ τῷ φοβεῖσθαι ὑπερβάλλων δειλός καὶ γὰρ ῦ μὴ δεῖ καὶ ὡς οὐ δεῖ, καὶ ὑπερβάλλων δειλός καὶ γὰρ ῦ μὴ δεῖ καὶ ὡς οὐ δεῖ, καὶ ψὰρρα ῦναὶ ὡς οὐ δεῖ, καὶ ψὰρρα μὰρος καὶ ὑπερβάλλων δειλός καὶ γὰρ ῦ μὴ δεῖ καὶ ὡς οὐ δεῖ, καὶ ψπερβάλλων δειλός. καὶ γὰρ ῦ μὴ δεῖ καὶ ὡς οὐ δεῖ, καὶ ψαρρα ἀναρος ἐνερβάλλων δειλός καὶ γὰρ ῦ μὴ δεῖ καὶ ὡς οὐ δεῖ, καὶ ψπερβάλλων δειλός καὶ γὰρ ῦ μὴ δεῖ καὶ ὡς οὐ δεῖ, καὶ ὑπερβάλλων δειλός καὶ γὰρ ῦ μὴ δεῖ καὶ ὡς οὐ δεῖ, καὶ ψπερβάλλων δειλός καὶ γὰρ ῦνος ἐνερβάλλων δειλός καὶ γὰρ ῦν μὰρος καὶ ὑπερβάλλων δειλός καὶ ψαρος ἐνερβάλλων δειλός καὶ γὰρ ῦν μὰρος καὶ τὰνος ἐνερβάλλων δειλός καὶ γὰρος ἐνερβάλλων δειλός καὶ γὰρος ἐνερβάλλου δειλος καὶ γὰρος ἐνερβάλλου δειλος καὶ γὰρος ἐνερβάλλου δειλος καὶ γὰρος ἐνερβάλλου δειλος καὶ τὸν καὶ τὸν τὸν ἐνερβάλλου διο δείλος καὶ γὰρος ἐνερβάλλου ἐνερβάλλου that 'the End-in-itself, or perfection, of a particular moral act will be identical with that which belongs to the formed moral character. The End-in-itself for courage, as a whole, is the idea of the beautiful. The idea of the beautiful, therefore, must be that End-in-itself which a man proposes to himself in each separate act of bravery in order to constitute it brave.' In short, the meaning comes to this, 'what makes an act truly brave, is that, like the perfect state of bravery, it aims at the beautiful.' The term τέλος is used in a sense between that of 'perfection' and 'motive,' or rather as implying both (see Vol. I. p. 226, and cf. Eth. III, i. 6, note). Ενέργεια, in πάσης ένεργείας, is opposed to Egis as 'act' to 'state.' The phrase τὸ κατά τὴν ἔξιν τέλος occurs again III. ix. 3: où uhv alla δόξειεν αν είναι τὸ κατά την άνδρείαν τέλος ήδύ. The whole notion that a moral act can only be considered good when it exhibits the qualities of the formed moral character has been already brought forward, 11. iv. 3.

καὶ τῷ ἀνδρείψ δὲ-ἀνδρείαν] ' Now to the brave man courage is something morally beautiful. Of this nature, then, must be the end of courage, for it is the end of a thing which in each case determines its character. Therefore the beautiful is the end for the sake of which the brave man endures and does whatever is brave.' The argument is as follows: Moral beauty is what characterises bravery, therefore it is the end of bravery (because final and formal causes coincide), therefore it should be the end of each brave act. The above explanation agrees with that given by the Paraphrast, except that he does not appear to supply relos with to κατά την έξιν. His words are, τούτο γάρ τέλος έστι πάσης ένεργείας της κατ' άρετήν, τὸ κατά τὸν λόγον της έξεως γίνεσθαι οίον αί κατά δικαιοσύνην πράξεις τέλος έχουσι το κατά τον λόγον της έξεως της δικαιοσύνης πράττεσθαι καὶ αι κατά την ανδρίαν πάντα τὰ τοιαῦτα ἀκολουθεῖ αὐτῷ. ἐλλείπει δὲ καὶ τῷ θαρρείν άλλ' έν ταις λύπαις ύπερβάλλων μάλλον καταφανής έστιν. δύσελπις δή τις ο δειλός πάντα γάρ φο-11 βείται. ὁ δ' ἀνδρείος ἐναντίως το γὰρ θαρρείν εὐέλπιδος. περί ταυτά μεν οῦν ἐστίν ος τε δειλός καὶ ὁ θρασύς καὶ 12 ό ἀνδρείος, διαφόρως δ' έχουσι πρὸς αὐτά οι μεν γὰρ ύπερβάλλουσι καὶ έλλείπουσιν, ὁ δε μέσως έχει καὶ ώς δεί και οι μέν θρασείς προπετείς, και βουλόμενοι προ των κινδύνων εν αὐτοῖς δ' ἀφίστανται, οι δ' ἀνδρεῖοι εν τοῖς έργοις όξεις, πρότερον δ' ήσύχιοι. καθάπερ οὖν είρηται, 13 ή ανδρεία μεσότης έστι περί θαρραλέα και φοβερά, έν οίς είρηται, καὶ ὅτι καλὸν αἰρεῖται καὶ ὑπομένει, ἡ ὅτι αἰσχρὸν το μή. το δ' αποθνήσκειν φεύγοντα πενίαν ή έρωτα ή τι λυπηρον ούκ ανδρείου, αλλά μαλλον δειλού μαλακία γάρ το φεύγειν τὰ ἐπίπονα, καὶ οὐχ ὅτι καλὸν ὑπομένει, ἀλλά φεύγων κακόν.

13 Aristotle denounces suicide committed on account of poverty, or love, or anything grievous, as the act rather of a coward than of a brave man. Taking a broad human view of life, he does not sympathise with or discuss the sentimental deaths of the Cynic philosophers (see Vol. I. Essay II. p. 174). Suicide was afterwards dignified by the Stoics with the name of εξαγωγή, 'ushering oneself out of the world.'

VIII. This chapter discusses the spurious kinds of courage, classification we find the germ in Plato's Protayoras, p. 351 A: θάρσος μὲν γὰρ καὶ ἀπὸ τέχνης γίγνεται ἀνθρώποις καὶ ἀπὸ θυμοῦ τε καὶ ἀπὸ μανίας, ἀνπρεία δὲ ἀπὸ φύσεως καὶ εὐτροφίας τῶν ψυχῶν γίγνεται. The five shades  $(\tau \rho \delta \pi \omega)$  mentioned by Aristotle are: apparent courage produced (1) from a regard to the opinions of society, (2) from experience of the particular danger, (3) from anger, (4) from a sanguine mind, (5) from ignorance.

1 πρώτον μέν ή πολιτική] This phrase is to be found in Plato's Republic, p. 430 c, where it probably originates, but it is there used in a different sense from the present. Plato meant by the term 'civil courage' to distinguish the true courage of a civilised man from all merely brutal instincts. Δοκείς γάρ μοι την δρθην δόξαν περί των αὐτων τούτων άνευ παιδείας γεγονυίαν, τήν τε θηριώδη και άνδραποδώδη, ούτε πάνυ νόμιμον ήγεισθαι, άλλο τέ τι ή άνδρείαν καλείν. 'Αληθέστατα, ήν δ' έγώ, λέγεις. 'Αποδέχομαι τοίνυν τοῦτο άνδρείαν είναι. Και γάρ άποδέχου, ην δ' έρω, πολιτικήν γε, και όρθως άποδέξει.

Aristotle meant by 'civil courage' that daring which is prompted, not by an independent desire for the beautiful, but by a regard to reputation, and to the fame or disgrace, and every punishment, awarded by society to brave or cowardly actions respectively.

διὰ τὰ ἐκ νόμων ἐπιτίμια] The laws relating to cowardice are alluded to, Eth. v. i. 14.

και διά τοῦτο-Εντιμοι] 'And for this cause men appear to be more brave in communities where cowards are held in dishonour, and the brave in honour.' Aristotle does not actually assert that real courage is capable of cultivation by the influence of society. But if we do not put too fine a meaning on the word courage, there is no doubt that it flourishes most in warlike ages and communities. And, in short, with all but the very few, individual virtue generally springs out of the feelings of society; what is first outward, afterwards takes root in the mind.

2 τοιούτοις δὲ — ἐμεῖο] 'Now just such men does Homer depict, as, for instance, Diomed and Hector, (when the latter says,) "Polydamas will be the first to cast a reproach at me;"

and so Diomed, "Hector will some day, haranguing among the Trojans, declare,—Tydides, by me terrified, fled to the ships." Cf. Iliad.XXII. 100, VIII. 148, sq., where the line ends φοβούμενος Γκετο νῆας.

3 ωμοίωται δ'-brros But this courage is most like the kind which we described above, for it originates in virtue, namely, in a sense of honour (alδω), in a desire for the beautiful (since it aims at reputation), and in a fear of dishonour as of something base.' On the nature of aldis, see Eth. IV. ix. and the note on II. vii. 14. Most admirably does Aristotle touch off here in a few words the spirit of honour which is the nearest approach to, and, at all events in many of the relations of life, the best substitute for a genuine morality. In reading his words, we can hardly fail to be reminded of Burke's magnificent lament over the loss of the age of chivalry. 'The unbought grace of life, the cheap defence of nations, the nurse of manly sentiment and heroic enterprise, is gone! It is gone, that sensibility of principle, that chastity of honour, which felt a stain like a wound, which inspired courage whilst it mitigated ferocity, which ennobled whatever it touched, and under which vice itself lost half its evil, by losing all its grossness' (Reflections on the Revolution in France, p. 149). Just as Plato placed the philosopher above the man of honour (θυμοειδής, cf. Repub. p. 547-9), so Aristotle conceives of a courage higher and purer than that which emanates from the spirit of honour.

4 'Civil courage' is of two kinds: (I) that which depends on honour, (2) that which depends on fear. The latter may remind us of the description given by Plato (Phado, p. 68 D), where he speaks of most men being courageous from a sort of cowardice. There is a vast falling off between the first class and the second. To the second belongs the spirit of Asiatic slavery, which Burke contrasted with the spirit of chivalry (l.c.). instances here given are the compulsory measures used by the princes in the Trojan war to make the people fight, and similar devices used by the Persians, &c.

 the words are those of Agamemnon (Hind 11, 391).

5 † προστάττοντες] As Rassow observes, the emendation of Lambinus—ol προτάττοντες, 'those who set the soldiers in front of them and beat them if they fall back,'—seems certain.

τύπτοντες] As done by the Persians at Thermopylæ, Herod. VII. 223.

6 δοκεί δέ-έστω] 'Experience of particular dangers is also accounted a kind of courage; which gave Socrates occasion to think that courage was a science. Different men have experience in different dangers, and regular soldiers in the dangers of war. Now there are many unreal shows of danger in warfare, and professional soldiers, being perfectly accustomed to these, appear brave, because other men are deceived by appearances.' The second cause (after that of a regard for opinions) which gives rise to a semblance of courage, is experience, the quality of the practised veteran. The effects of this may be analysed and subdivided into (I) a familiarity with, and contempt for, much that is seemingly, but not really, terrible; (2) a skill of weapons, &c., giving both an offensive and a defensive superiority (ποιήσαι καὶ μὴ παθείν μάλιστα δύνανται έκ της έμπειplas).

ἐμπειρία ή περὶ ἔκαστα ἀνδρεία τις εἶναι· ὅθεν καὶ ὁ Σωκράτης ωήθη ἐπιστήμην εἶναι τὴν ἀνδρείαν. τοιοῦτοι δὲ ἄλλοι μὲν ἐν ἄλλοις, ἐν τοῖς πολεμικοῖς δ' οἰ στρατιῶται· δοκεῖ γὰρ εἶναι πολλὰ κενὰ τοῦ πολέμου, ἃ μάλιστα συνεωράκασιν οὖτοι· ψαίνονται δὴ ἀνδρεῖοι, ὅτι οὐκ ἴσασιν οἱ ἄλλοι 7 οἶά ἐστιν. εἶτα ποιῆσαι καὶ μὴ παθεῖν μάλιστα δύνανται ἐκ τῆς ἐμπειρίας, δυνάμενοι χρῆσθαι τοῖς ὅπλοις καὶ τοιαῦτα ἔχοντες ὁποῖα ἃν εἴη καὶ πρὸς τὸ ποιῆσαι καὶ πρὸς τὸ δθεν και ο Σωκράτης] Cf. Memorab. III, ix. 2, and Plato, Protag, p. 350, where it is agreed that those who dive most boldly are the professional divers, those who fight most boldly the professional soldiers, &c. This empirical view of courage forms one side, it is true, of the Socratic doctrine, but by no means the whole (see Vol. I. p. 107), and the statement about Socrates in the text is accordingly unfair. The statement is corrected by Eudemus in his Ethics (III. i, 13), where he well sums up the present part of the subject: "Eori δ' εξδη άνδρείας πέντε λεγόμενα καθ' ομοιότητα · τὰ αὐτὰ γὰρ ὑπομένουσιν, άλλ' οὐ διὰ τὰ αὐτά. Μία μέν πολιτική: αθτη δ' έστιν ή δι' αιδώ οδσα. Δευτέρα δ' ή στρατιωτική ' αύτη δὲ δι' ἐμπειρίαν και το είδέναι, ούχ ώσπερ Σωκράτης έφη, τὰ δεινά, άλλ' ὅτι (ἴσασι) τàs βοηθείας των δεινών.

πολλά κενά τοῦ πολέμον] This is the reading of Bekker, supported by a majority of the MSS., the Scholiast, the Paraphrast, Casaubon, &c. It is illustrated by Cicero, Epist. ad Att. v. 20: 'Seis enim dici quædam πανικά, dici item τὰ κενὰ τοῦ πολέμον,' where the editio princeps (Romana) has κοινά, another instance of similar confusion. Another reading, supported by six MSS., is 'τὰ καινὰ τοῦ πολέμου,' which would mean 'the surprises of war.' The phrase occurs in Diodorus Siculus, xx. 30: ἀληθὲτ εἶναι, ἄτι πολλά τά καινά τοῦ πολέμου, Cf. Thueyd. ΙΙΙ. 30: καὶ μὴ ἀποκνήσωμεν τὸν κίνδυνον, νομίσαντες ούκ άλλο τι είναι τὸ καινόν του πολέμου ή το τοιούτον, δ εί τις στρατηγός έν τε αὐτῷ φυλάσσοιτο και τοις πολεμίοις ένορων επιχειροίη, πλείστ' ἄν ὀρθοῖτο: where also the MSS. vary between καινόν and κενόν. It would seem, then, that The KEVA τοῦ πολέμου, and τὰ καινὰ τοῦ πολέμου. were both received formulæ, only with different senses. In the text above, either phrase might have been substituted for the other, according as it was more familiar to the transcriber. But 7à kerd alone makes good sense, for while the soldiers would get accustomed to the empty show, the noise and pageantry of war, it is not true to say that they would get accustomed to the surprises of war, these being exactly what not even the experienced could calculate upon. Perhaps there is no better setting forth of the κενά τοῦ πολέμου than in the speech of Brasidas, Thucyd. IV. 126, 4: οδτοι δέ την μέλλησιν μέν έχουσι τοις απείροις φοβεράν και γαρ πλήθει όψεως δεινοί και βοής μεγέθει αφόρητοι, ή τε διά κενής έπανάσεισις τών δπλων έχει τινά δήλωσιν απειλής προσμίξαι δέ τοίς ύπομένουσιν αύτὰ ούχ ὁμοῖοι.

συνεωράκασιν] The συν here seems to mean not 'together,' or 'at a glance,' but as in συγγινώσκω, σύνοιδα, &c., 'intimately,' 'privily,' 'familiarly.'

9 of στρατιώται δὲ—συνέβη] 'But regular troops lose heart when the danger is overpowering, and when they are inferior in numbers and equipment. In such cases they are the first to run away, while citizen troops remain and die, as actually happened at the Hermæum.'

etal τφ' Ερμαίφ] Of this affair the Scholiast gives the following account. Coronea had been betrayed to one Conomarchus of Phocis; an engagement took place in an open spot called the Hermœum; the Coronean citizens were killed to a man, while their Bœotian auxiliaries fled in a panic. Τὰ πολιτικά, by a common usage, is nearly equivalent to οἱ πολίται. Cf. Æsch. Persæ, 1. τάδε μὲν Περσῶν—πιστὰ καλείται, &c. Στρατιῶται, or mercenaries, in the time of Aristotle had not a high name. As common fighting men, the machines of war, they are opposed to the independent heroism of the brave man; see below, III. ix. 6. The present passage contrasts the courage of the man of honour with the hardiness of the veteran, which under any extraordinary pressure gives way. 'Citizen courage' in the instance mentioned cannot externally be distinguished from the very highest kind of courage.

10 καὶ τὸν θυμὸν δ'—ὀρμήν] 'The spirit of anger, too, men reckon as courage, and they who act through anger (like brutes turning on those who have wounded them) get the character of being brave, because the converse is true, and brave men are spirited. The spirit of anger is most keen for the encountering dangers, and hence Homer wrote:

μὲν οὖν ἀνδρεῖοι διὰ τὸ καλὸν πράττουσιν, ὁ δὲ θυμὸς συνεργεὶ αὐτοῖς· τὰ θηρία δὲ διὰ λύπην· διὰ γὰρ τὸ πληγῆναι ἡ φοβεῖσθαι, ἐπεὶ ἐάν γε ἐν ὕλη ἡ ἐν ἔλει ἡ, οὐ προσέρχονται. οὐ δή ἐστιν ἀνδρεῖα διὰ τὸ ὑπ' ἀλγηδόνος καὶ θυμοῦ ἐξελαυνόμενα πρὸς τὸν κίνδυνον ὁρμῶν, οὐθὲν τῶν δεινῶν προορῶντα, ἐπεὶ οὕτω γε κᾶν οἱ ὅχοι ἀνδρεῖοι εἶεν πεινῶντες· τυπτόμενοι γὰρ οὐκ ἀφίστανται τῆς νομῆς· καὶ οἱ μοιχοὶ δὲ διὰ τὴν ἐπιθυμίαν τολμηρὰ πολλὰ δρῶσιν. 12 οὐ δή ἐστιν ἀνδρεῖα τὰ δὶ ἀλγηδόνος ἡ θυμοῦ ἐξελαυνόμενα πρὸς τὸν κίνδυνον. φυσικωτάτη δ' ἔοικεν ἡ διὰ τὸν θυμὸν εἶναι, καὶ προσλαβοῦσα προαίρεσιν καὶ τὸ οῦ ἕνεκα ἀνδρεία εἶναι. καὶ οἱ ἄνθρωποι δὴ ὀργιζόμενοι μὲν ἀλγοῦσι,

For all such things appear to signify the awakening and outbreak of anger.' These quotations are obviously made from memory, and none of them are quite accurate. The first seems to be compounded of Il. XIV. 151, µέγα σθένος ξμβαλ' ἐκάστφ Καρδίη, and XVI. 529, μένος δέ οἱ ἔμβαλε θυμώ. The second appears to be meant for Il. v. 470. Φτρυνε μένος και θυμόν ἐκάστου. The third is Od. XXIV. 318, dvà pîvas δέ οὶ ήδη Δριμύ μένος προύτυψε. The last is not in Homer at all. This passage illustrates the progress of psychology towards distinctness, for it is impossible to translate it simply into English; θυμός means more than anger, or than any one modern word, for even with Aristotle it includes what we should call 'spirit.' But with Homer it meant (1) life, (2) spirit, (3) wrath, (4) heart, (5) mind. Aristotle in quoting Homer fails to remember this great indefiniteness, though there is no doubt that in Homer a simple and physical account is given of the manifestations of courage.

12 φυσικωτάτη δ' ξοικεν — είναι] 'Yet the sort that springs from anger appears most natural, and with purpose and motive added, it becomes genuine courage.' Taking this sentence in its context, it must be an apology for the ἀνδρεία διὰ θυμόν. Aristotle had said that anger makes a man brave only in the sense that a hungry ass is brave, obeying the goads of a blind instinct. He adds that the instinct of anger is part of our nature (cf. Eth. II. iii, 10, note, and VII. vi. 2), and that, rightly directed and brought under the control of the will and reason, it can be elevated into a moral state. It is remarkable on what a high level Aristotle places courage. It must be entirely, he says, prompted by a desire for what is morally beautiful (οἱ μὲν οδν ἀνδρεῖοι διὰ τὸ καλὸν πράττουσω); mere physical courage is only an assistance in realising this (ὁ δὲ θυμός συνεργεί αὐτοίς), and the prompting of anger, &c., will make men pugnacious, but not brave (ol & διά ταθτα μαχόμενοι μάχιμοι μέν, οὐκ ἀνδρείοι δέ). Perhaps Aristotle makes almost too great a separation between true courage and this 'spirited element,' which must be its physical basis. This is to be attributed (1) to his high moral tone, (2) to his analytical mode of treatment. In Shake-speare, as in Homer, courage is attributed to physical causes. It is made sometimes to depend on the action of the spleen, or it is connected with the gall. Cf. King John, Act. 11. Sc. 1:

'Rash, inconsiderate, fiery voluntaries,

With ladies' faces and fierce dragons' spleens.'

And Hamlet, Act II. Sc. 2, quoted below on Eth. 1v. v. 6.

13-15 The fourth kind of spurious courage is that which arises from a sanguine mind. This may be due to previous success, and gives a confidence like courage, but also like intoxication. Such confidence is liable to a collapse.

15 διὸ καὶ-ἔξιν] 'For this reason it seems braver to be fearless and untroubled in sudden perils than in such as may be anticipated. In the former case a man is brave more by habit, or in other words less by premeditation: for in foreseen dangers a man may calculate and reason out the course to be chosen, in sudden ones he must depend upon his habitual character.' This acute observation puts real courage in opposition to the case of a man puffed out with a sort of extraneous confidence. Take a man on a sudden, and you will find how brave he is. While Aristotle makes courage at quality of the moral will, he requires that it should be a settled habit, and a second nature of the mind, not prepared consciously to meet a particular emergency.

last place, men appear brave from not knowing their danger. Such persons are not far removed from the sanguine, but are inferior to them, because they have no self-confidence, as the sanguine have. This confidence enables the sanguine to stand their ground for a time; while those who have blundered into bravery, as soon as it appears that the danger is other than they had supposed, take to their heels, as was the case with the Argives, when they fell in with some Lacedemonians whom they took for men of Sicyon.' The last and poorest semblance of courage is when something daring is done unknowingly, and from a mistake. The instance given is mentioned by Xenophon (Hellenics, IV. 10). Some Spartans assumed the shields of some vanquished Sicyonians, and were at first contemptuously encountered by the Argives, who, when they discovered their formidable enemies, took to flight.

IX. This interesting chapter is on the connection of courage with pain and loss. The nobleness of courage chiefly depends on the sacrifice which it implies (ἐπίλυπον ἡ ἀνδρεία καὶ δικαίως ἐπαινεῖται). The brave man by encountering death consciously makes a sacrifice of the greatest magnitude, since he runs the risk of relinquishing a life which is eminently valuable, and, by reason of his virtue, full of happiness. Courage, then, is not to be called pleasurable, except as attaining to a satisfaction above all plea-) sure, attaining, in short, to the end of one's being (où ôh èv àmdoais rais άρεταις τὸ ἡδέως ἐνεργείν ὑπάρχει, πτην έφ' δσον τοῦ τέλους εφάπτεται). The conscious heroism of the brave! man distinguishes him from the reck. lessness of the mercenary; it disqualifies him, indeed, from becoming mere rank and file, a mere machine of discipline.

εὶ δὴ τοιοῦτόν ἐστι καὶ τὸ περὶ τὴν ἀνδρείαν, ὁ μὲν 4 θάνατος καὶ τὰ τραίματα λυπηρὰ τῷ ἀνδρείῷ καὶ ἄκοντι ἔσται, ὑπομένει δὲ αὐτά, ὅτι καλὸν ἡ ὅτι αἰσχρὸν τὸ μή. καὶ ὅσῷ ἀν μᾶλλον τὴν ἀρετὴν ἔχη πάσαν καὶ εὐδαιμονέστερος ἢ, μᾶλλον ἐπὶ τῷ θανάτῷ λυπηθήσεται τῷ τοιούτῷ γὰρ μάλιστα ζῆν ἄξιον, καὶ οὕτος μεγίστων ἀγαθῶν ἀποστερεῖται εἰδώς λυπηρὸν δὲ τοῦτο. ἀλλ' οὐδὲν ἦττον ἀνδρεῖος, ἴσως δὲ καὶ μᾶλλον, ὅτι τὸ ἐν τῷ πολέμῷ καλὸν doubt the end that belongs to courage is pleasant in itself, but this pleasant-ness is neutralised by the attendant circumstances, as happens likewise in the contests of the arena. The end at which the boxers aim, the garland and the honours, is pleasant; but the blows, and indeed the whole exertion, are painful and grievous to flesh and blood; so that by the multitude of intervening pains the incentive, which is small in itself, loses all appearance of being pleasant.

4 καὶ δοφ-αίρεῖται] 'And in proportion as a man possesses all excellence, and the happier he is, so much the more will he be pained at death, for to such a one life is especially valuable, and he will consciously be deprived of the greatest blessings. And this is painful. But he is not the less brave, nay, perhaps even more, because he chooses the noble in war in preference to those other goods.' These last words may remind us of the characteristic attributed by Wordsworth to his Happy Warrior, who is 'more brave for this, that he hath much to love.' The whole of Wordsworth's description may well be compared with that of Aristotle:

'Who, if he be called upon to face Some awful moment to which Heaven

has joined

Great issues, good or bad for human kind,

Is happy as a lover, and attired

With sudden brightness, like a man inspired;

And, through the heat of conflict, keeps the law

In calmness made, and sees what he foresaw;

Or if an unexpected call succeed, Come when it will, is equal to the

Come when it will, is equal to the need:

He who, though thus endued as with a sense

And faculty for storm and turbulence, Is yet a soul whose master-bias leaus To homefelt pleasures and to gentle scenes;

Sweet images! which wheresoe'er he be

Are at his heart, and such fidelity It is his darling passion to approve; More brave for this, that he hath much to love.'

The consciousness of the sacrifice to be made appears rather more prominent in Aristotle's brave man than in Wordsworth's. In saying this we must not forget that the word 'sacrifice,' in the moral sense of the term, expresses an idea that has grown up in the human mind subsequently to Aristotle. How nearly Aristotle, by the force of his penetration, realised it, the present chapter shows most remarkably.

Χ. Μετά δέ ταύτην-άρεταί] ' Next

let us speak of temperance, for these (namely,courage and temperance) seem to be the excellencies of the irrational parts of our nature,' This is almost the only indication which Aristotle gives of the system upon which he has arranged the several virtues in order; he places together, and first treats of, the development of the lower and more instinctive qualities. On the arrangement of the remaining virtues see the plan of Book IV. With regard to the first two, there is a want of any distinct principle in their arrangement. If it be said that they are based on θυμός and ἐπιθυμία, and that Aristotle begins at the bottom of the scale, why does he not begin with σωφροσύνη, since θυμός is higher than ἐπιθυμία (Eth. VII. VI.)? Again, as we have seen (ch. viii. § 12) θυμός is here considered rather as having an occasional connection with courage than as being the basis of it. But in fact Aristotle's Ethics are very little psychological in their character. In them psychology and morals are both in process of formation; we cannot therefore expect in so tentative and unfinished a work to find systematic arrangement. Aristotle probably began his list of the virtues with courage and temperance because they were two of the Greek cardinal virtues, and when he came to temperance, he said 'this comes γὰρ τῶν ἀλόγων μερῶν αὖται εἶναι αὶ ἀρεταί. ὅτι μὲν οὖν μεσότης ἐστὶ περὶ ἡδονὰς ἡ σωφροσύνη, εἴρηται ἡμῖν ἢττον γὰρ καὶ οὐχ ὁμοίως ἐστὶ περὶ τὰς λύπας ἐν τοῖς αὐτοῖς δὲ καὶ ἡ ἀκολασία φαίνεται. περὶ ποίας οὖν τῶν ἡδονῶν, νῦν ἀφορίσωμεν. διηρήσθωσαν δὲ αὶ ψυχικαὶ καὶ 2 αι σωματικαί, οἶον φιλοτιμία φιλομάθεια ἐκάτερος γὰρ next, since it also belongs to the irrational part of our nature.'

τῶν ἀλόγων μερῶν] The instincts, such as those of self-preservation, fear, desire, &c., can only be capable of excellence by being brought under a law (μεσότης, λόγος) of the intellect, having no law in themselves. This law of the intellect becomes the most important part of the conception of virtues, as form is more striking than matter. In Plato the law is put for virtue altogether, and thus, as we saw, he calls courage a science. Similarly in the Charmides, where temperance is discussed, the nearest definition that is given is 'self-knowledge,' though it is shown that mere 'self-knowledge' has no content, and would be a useless blank; therefore it is implied that knowledge of the good must be added to make the conception complete.

It is the extreme opposite of Plato's view to speak of temperance as 'a virtue of the instincts' (τῶν ἀλόγων μερῶν); the word μεσῶνης however in the next line implies what was omitted, namely, 'under a law of the intellect.'

The formula of Aristotle attributes a worth to the bodily instincts which would be opposed to asceticism.

μεσότης ἐστὶ περὶ ἡδονάς] Σωφροσύνη, which, in spite of the false etymology given in Plato's Cratylus, 411 κ, and Eth. VI. V. 5, meant originally 'sound-mindedness' (in German Besonnen-heit), soon came to mean temperance with regard to pleasures. In this sense it is often popularly defined by Plato, cf. Repub. p. 430 Ε: κόσμος πού τις-ή σωφροσύνη έστι και ήδονων τινών καὶ ἐπιθυμιῶν ἐγκράτεια, Sympos. p. 196 C: είναι γάρ ομολογείται σωφροσύνη τὸ κρατείν ήδονών και έπιθυμιών, &c. Aristotle's procedure in discussing it is first to ascertain definitely its object. Pleasures are either bodily or mental. With mental pleasures temperance and intemperance are not concerned. Nor again with all bodily pleasures-not those of hearing, nor of smell; but only the merely animal pleasures (ὧν και τὰ λοιπά ζωα κοινωνεί) of touch and taste. Even taste, as an object of intemperance, reduces itself to touch; and with regard to touch we must exclude the manly and human satisfaction felt in exercise, &c. (chapter xi.) Desires of the kind in question are either common, or special and acquired (Tôioi και ἐπίθετοι); in the former, excess is the only kind of error possible; in the latter all kinds of errors are committed. The only pains with which temperance and intemperance can be concerned are pains arising from the want of certain pleasures; these pains the intemperate man feels to excess. While intemperance thus consists in excess, there is no such thing as deficiency in the sense for the above-named pleasures; thus there is no name for the opposite extreme to intemperance. With due regard to his health, and the means at his disposal, and acting under the law of the beautiful (xi. 8), the temperate man preserves a balance.

2 διηρήσθωσαν - διανοίας] 'We must take a distinction between the bodily pleasures and such as are mental, like ambition and the desire of knowledge. The man who has either of these feelings takes pleasure in the object of his desire without the body being at all affected, but only the mind.' The writing is loose here, constituting a σχήμα πρὸτ τὸ σημαινόμενον. Transitions as from φιλοτιμία to φιλότιμοι are common. Cf. below, ch. xi. § 3: διὸ λέγονται οδτοι γαστρίμαργοι, where there is nothing preceding which answers to οδτοι, only a general description of a course of action.

4-5 While Aristotle justly says that the words temperance and intemperance do not apply to the pleasure felt in colours, forms, painting, music, and acting, it is strange that he should have spoken of these at all as bodily pleasures. Such a way of speaking shows an early and immature psychology.

6 Pleasures of smell are not the objects of intemperance, except accidentally, as by association, reminding people of eating, &c. Eudemus quotes a witty remark on the subject. Eth. Eud. 111. ii. 10: ἐμμελῶς ἔφη Στρατόνικος τὰς μέν καλὸν δίςτω, τὰς δὲ ἢδύ.

7 Brutes, says Aristotle, have no pleasures of hearing, or smell, or sight, except accidental ones, namely,

τας αισθήσεις ήδονη πλην κατά συμβεβηκός, οὐδε γάρ ταις όσμαις των λαγωών αι κύνες γαιρουσιν, αλλά τη βρώσει. την δ' αισθησιν ή όσμη εποίησεν, οὐδ' ό λέων τη φωνή τοῦ βοός, ἀλλὰ τῆ ἐδωδῆ· ὅτι δ' ἐγγύς ἐστι, διὰ τῆς φωνης ήσθετο, και χαίρειν δη ταύτη φαίνεται. όμοίως δ' οὐδ' ίδων η εύρων έλαφον η άγριον αίγα, άλλ' ὅτι βοράν έξει, περί τὰς τοιαύτας δη ήδονας ή σωφροσύνη και ή 8 ακολασία έστιν ων και τα λοιπά ζωα κοινωνεί, όθεν ανδραποδώδεις και θηριώδεις φαίνονται αυται δ' είσιν άφη και γεύσις. φαίνονται δη και τη γεύσει έπι μικρον ή 9 οὐθέν χρησθαι της γάρ γεύσεώς έστιν ή κρίσις των χυμών, όπερ ποιούσιν οι τους οίνους δοκιμάζοντες και τὰ όψα άρτύοντες. οὐ πάνυ δὲ χαίρουσι τούτοις, η οὐχ οί γε ακόλαστο:, αλλά τη απολαύσει, ή γίνεται πάσα δι' άφης καὶ ἐν σιτίοις καὶ ἐν ποτοῖς καὶ τοῖς ἀφροδισίοις λεγομένοις. διὸ καὶ ηὕξατό τις ονοφάγος ῶν τὸν φάρυγγα αὐτῷ 10

when sounds or scents indicate to them their prey or their food. It may be questioned whether this is absolutely true, whether, for instance, brutes are not capable of some pleasure from musical sounds. appears to be the case with lizards and snakes; and horses are fond of bells. It is said that the cat likes the smell of mint. Dogs like the smell of carrion, apparently for its own sake, this being their taste. With brutes the senses are the intellect, and thus by the well-known law that as an organ increases in fineness of perception, it decreases in sensitiveness to pleasure and pain,-we may conceive how it is that the fine perceptive organs of brutes are to them in a less degree the instruments of pleasure. See Sir W. Hamilton, Reid's Works, pp. 880 and 886.

ώστε λέων έχάρη μεγάλφ έπλ σώματι κύρσας.

εύρων ή έλαφον κεραόν ή άγριον αίγα. VOL. II. 10 διὸ καὶ ηθξατό τις ὀψοφάγος]
The name of this glutton is recorded by Eudemus (III. ii. 10), who paraphrases the present passage as follows: διὸ οἱ ὁψοφάγοι οὐκ εθχονται τὴν γλῶτταν ἔχειν μακρὰν ἀλλὰ τὸν φάρυγγα γεράνου, ἄσπερ Φιλόξενος ὁ Ἑρύξίδος. Athenæus mentions the same story (VIII. 26), quoting the verses—

Φιλόξενος ποθ', ώς λέγουσ', ὁ Κυθήριος εὔξατο τριῶν ἔχειν λάρυγγα πήχεων.

Aristotle uses the word φάρνγγα here in its loose sense for the 'throat,' as λάρνγξ (which properly meant the top of the windpipe) was also loosely employed by the ancients to mean the whole throat. Speaking scientifically Aristotle confined the term φάρνγξ to mean the trachea or windpipe, distinguishing it from the assophagus or gullet, of. De Part. An. III. iii. I: δ μὲν οῦν φάρνγξ τοῦ πνεύματος ἔνεκεν πέφυκεν'—δ δ' οἰσοφάγος ἐστὶ δι' οῦ ἡ τροφή πορεύεται εἰς τὴν κοιλίαν.
The latter was the term properly required above. Aristotle seems to μακρότερον γεράνου γενέσθαι, ως ήδόμενος τη άφη. κοινοτάτη δη των αισθήσεων καθ' ην η ακολασία και δόξειεν αν δικαίως επονείδιστος είναι, ότι ουχ η άνθρωποί εσμεν 11 υπάρχει, αλλ' η ζώα. το δη τοιούτοις χαίρειν και μάλιστα αγαπαν θηριώδες. και γαρ αι ελευθεριώταται των δια της

2 διὸ—τυχόντων] 'Hence (this choice of particular foods, &c.) appears merely capricious. In reality, however, it has something natural in it, for different things are pleasant to different people, and all men have their preferences.' Aristotic attributes the very diversity of tastes to a law of nature, which no doubt exists,—and to a wise purpose, else what a fearful rivalry there would be in the world. Some MSS. for πάσω read πασω. It seems common for transcribers, when they do not understand a sentence, to play fast and loose with πάs and τιs: see below, Eth. v. vii. 4.

produces him his pain.' This is stated as if it were a sort of disgraceful paradox, which takes place in intemperance.

<sup>7</sup> οὐ πάνν γίνονται] Aristotle, from his experience as a Greek, might have been justified in asserting that a deficiency in the sense for pleasures 'could hardly be said to exist.' It is not so certain that the same would be true in all periods of the world. It is not so certain that the monkish turn of mind does not occasionally diminish to an unhappy extent the natural and human feelings, so as to impair the kindliness, the geniality, and the good sense of mankind.

S We see how indefinite after all Aristotle has left the standard of temperance; he refers it merely to the blank formula of ών δεί and το καλόν. In so leaving it, however, he appeals to a sense in each man's own mind. There is a relative element to be considered, the health or fortune of the individual (πρὸς ὑγίειαν, μὴ ὑπὲρ τὴν οὐσίαν), and there is also something that appears absolute amidst all that is relative (τὸ καλόν).

δ γλρ οὕτων ἔχων] This is an awkward piece of writing. Οὕτων refers to those phrases which have been negatived—παρά τὸ καλὸν ἡ ὑπὲρ τὴν οὕσίαν.

XII. Which is most voluntary, cowardice or intemperance? a suitable question to conclude a Book which opened with a theory of the voluntary and proceeded to discuss courage and temperance. Thus far there is method. Courage and temperance are considered very much throughout in relation to each other, and here they are considered in relation to the voluntary. On the other hand, the subject of this chapter is closely connected with the theory of the formation of habits (Eth. II. i.-ii.), and also with the questions mooted above (Eth. III. v.) as to the voluntariness of vicious habits. Standing then as it does isolated, it forms an instance of the immaturity of Aristotle's moral investigations.

Intemperance is more voluntary than cowardice, inasmuch as it consists in choosing pleasure, while cowardice is under a sort of compulsion, flying from pain. (2) Again it is easier by practice to learn to resist temptation, than it is to learn to withstand danger, for the opportunities are frequent and free from risk. Hence intemperance is the more disgraceful of the two. (3) These vices are in a peculiar way different from each other, for cowardice as a whole is more voluntary than its parts. Intemperance as a whole is less voluntary than its parts.

2 καὶ ἡ μὲν λύπη—ποιεῖ] 'And while pain distracts and overturns

Φύσιν, ή δε ήδονη οὐδεν τοιούτον ποιεί, μάλλον δ' εκούσιον. διὸ καὶ ἐπονειδιστότερον καὶ γὰρ ἐθισθηναι ράον πρὸς αὐτά. πολλά γὰρ ἐν τῶ βίω τὰ τοιαῦτα, καὶ οἱ ἐθισμοὶ ἀκίνδυνοι. έπι δέ των Φοβερων ανάπαλιν. δόξειε δ' αν ούχ όμοιως 3 έκούσιον ή δειλία είναι τοίς καθ' έκαστον αυτή μέν γάρ άλυπος, ταθτα δε δια λύπην εξίστησιν, ώστε και τα όπλα ρίπτειν καὶ τάλλα ἀσχημονείν διὸ καὶ δοκεί βίαια είναι. τω δ' ἀκολάστω ἀνάπαλιν τὰ μεν καθ' έκαστα έκούσια, 4 έπιθυμούντι γὰρ καὶ ὀρεγομένῶ, τὸ δ' ὅλον ἢττον οὐθείς γαρ επιθυμεί ακόλαστος είναι, το δ' όνομα της ακολασίας ς και έπι τὰς παιδικάς άμαρτίας Φέρομεν έχουσι γάρ τινα όμοιότητα, πότερον δ' από ποτέρου καλείται, οὐθεν πρὸς τὰ νῦν διαφέρει, δήλον δ' ὅτι τὸ ὕστερον ἀπὸ τοῦ προτέρου. οὐ κακῶς δ' ἔοικε μετενηνέχθαι κεκολάσθαι γὰρ 6 δεί το των αισχρών ορεγόμενον και πολλήν αιξησιν έχον, τοιούτον δε μάλιστα ή επιθυμία καὶ ὁ παῖς κατ' επιθυμίαν γάρ ζωσι και τὰ παιδία, και μάλιστα έν τούτοις

the mental balance of him who experiences it, pleasure does nothing of the kind. Φύσις here denotes the perfect or normal state: see above, Eth. Π. i. 3, note.

3 δόξειε δ' dy-έξιστησιν] ' But cowardice is not equally voluntary with (i.e. is more voluntary than) its particular acts, for in itself it is painless, while its particulars distract the mind with pain.' It seems curious to speak of cowardice in this abstract way as distinct from all particular acts of cowardice. It is, however, true that cowardice is not, like intemperance, a growing chain upon the mind. Each cowardly act, while it leaves the mind irresolute and so prone to fresh cowardice, on the other hand brings experience and renders the mind more familiar with danger. Thus cowardice, which at first was involuntary, tends to become more and more voluntary and deliberate, the more it is continued in; but intemperance, which at first was voluntary, becomes, the longer it lasts, more and more involuntary and a mere bondage.

5-6 τὸ δ' δνομα-δρεξις] ' Now the name intemperance (or unrestrainedness) we apply also to the faults of children, for these have some resemblance to it. Which is called from which, matters not for our present purpose; obviously that which is later in conception is called from that which is earlier. And it seems no bad metaphor, for that which hankers after what is base, and which has a mighty capacity for development, requires to be chastened, and this is just the character of desire and of the child. Children live entirely by desire, and have the longing for what is pleasant most strongly.' Eudemus (Eth. Eud. III. ii. I) commences his account of intemperance with this etymology. He points out that droλαστος is capable of two meanings,

7 ή τοῦ ἡδέος ὅρεξις· εἰ οὖν μὴ ἔσται εὐπειθὲς καὶ ὑπὸ τὸ ἄρχον, ἐπὶ πολὺ ἥξει· ἄπληστος γὰρ ἡ τοῦ ἡδέος ὅρεξις καὶ πανταχόθεν τῷ ἀνοήτφ, καὶ ἡ τῆς ἐπιθυμίας ἐνέργεια αὕξει τὸ συγγενές, κὰν μεγάλαι καὶ σφοδραὶ ὧσι, καὶ τὸν λογισμὸν ἐκκρούουσιν. διὸ δεῖ μετρίας εἶναι αὐτὰς καὶ 8 ὁλίγας, καὶ τῷ λόγφ μηθὲν ἐναντιοῦσθαι. τὸ δὲ τοιοῦτον εὐπειθὲς λέγομεν καὶ κεκολασμένον· ὤσπερ γὰρ τὸν παῖδα δεῖ κατὰ τὸ πρόσταγμα τοῦ παιδαγωγοῦ ζῆν, οὕτω καὶ τὸ 9 ἐπιθυμητικὸν κατὰ τὸν λόγον. διὸ δεῖ τοῦ σώφρονος τὸ ἐπιθυμητικὸν συμφωνεῖν τῷ λόγφ· σκοπὸς γὰρ ἀμφοῖν τὸ καλόν, καὶ ἐπιθυμεῖ ὁ σώφρων ῶν δεῖ καὶ ὡς δεῖ καὶ ὅτε· οὕτω δὲ τάττει καὶ ὁ λόγος. ταῦτ' οῦν ἡμῖν εἰρήσθω περὶ σωφροσύνης.

'he that has not been chastened,' and 'he that cannot be chastened.' His account of the metaphor implied in the word appears to be lost. He says (§ 3), διεγράψαμεν πρότερον πῶσ τὴν ἀκολασίαν ὁνομάζοντες μεταφέρομεν, but in Eth. Eud. II. ili, to which he alludes, there is apparently a lacuna. Aristotle declines to decide which is the primary and which the metaphorical use of the word; but there can be no doubt that the punishment and unrestrainedness of children is the more concrete and the primary idea.

7 el οδν-ἐναντιοῦσθαι] 'If then this thing be not obedient and subjected to the governing element, it will develop vastly; for the longing for what is pleasant is insatiable in him that is foolish, and it seeks satisfaction from all quarters; and the exercise of desire increases its native powers, and if the desires grow great and vehement, they expel all reasoning in the end. Wherefore the desires should be moderate and few, and nowise opposed to the law of reason.' Εὐπειθές is indefinite; it might refer either to ή ἐπιθυμία or ὁ παῖς. Aristotle speaking indistinctly had the idea of ἐπιθυμία most present to his Out of this etymology of mind. 'intemperance' he develops anew the relationship which ought to exist between the passions and the reason, The passions should be to the reason as a child to his tutor. This analogy was already suggested in Eth. I. xiii. 19: διττόν έσται καί τὸ λόγον έγον, τὸ μέν κυρίως και έν αύτω, το δ' ώσπερ τοῦ πατρὸς ἀκουστικόν τι,

PLAN OF BOOK IV.

WITH only two exceptions, this Book follows faithfully the programme drawn out in the seventh chapter of Book II.

These exceptions are, that it inverts the order of the social virtues —Truth, Wit, and Friendship; and that, being at its close fragmentary or mutilated, it omits to discuss Indignation, and breaks off in the middle of a discussion upon Modesty.

The only question, then, that arises is-Can we find any logical sequence in Aristotle's list of the virtues as given in Book II. and followed out here? There are various principles on which a classification of the virtues might have been made; as, for instance, on a principle of psychological division, it might have been shown how the virtues are the proper development of man's nature in its various parts. Or, again, with a view to education, the virtues might have been arranged according to the most natural order of inculcation. Or, again, in point of excellence, the greater virtues might have taken precedence of the lesser ones. But no one broad principle of this kind is to be found in the arrangement made by Aristotle. It must always be remembered that his Ethics, while tending to advance psychology very greatly, are not composed upon a psychological system. Hence, though he said (Eth. III. x. 1) that Temperance must succeed Courage, because these both consisted in the regulation of the brute instincts, we do not find elsewhere any reference to a classification of the parts of man's nature. Aristotle, having clearly divided moral from intellectual excellence, does not carry out the same sort of division in discussing moral excellence. He seems to have taken up first the most prominent and striking qualities, according to the common notions in Greece -Courage, Temperance, and Liberality. Liberality suggested to him Magnificence-Magnificence, Great-souledness; and from this he proceeded to distinguish the more ordinary quality of Ambition. He then added, what had hitherto been omitted, the virtue of regulation of the temper; and pointed out that in social intercourse three excellent qualities are produced by bringing the demeanour under the control of the law of balance. Lastly, he was proceeding to show that even in the instinctive and untrained feelings of Modesty and Indignation, this same law exhibits itself, when, either from interruption, or from mutilation, the book came abruptly to a close.

I. I Aristotle's excellent account of liberality represents it as the balance between illiberality and prodigality. On the characters produced by these different qualities the most discriminating and happy remarks are made in the present chapter.

I οὐδ' αδ ἐν ταῖς κρίσεσυ] 'Nor again in decisions.' The Paraphrast adds ἄσπερ ὁ δίκαιος. Κρίσις here is used in a general sense; it may or may not be a legal decision. Cf. Eth. V. vi. 4: ἡ γὰρ δίκη κρίσις τοῦ δικαίου καὶ τοῦ ἀδίκου.

2 χρήματα δέ-μετρεῖται] «'Now YOL. II.

we call "property" all things whose value is measured by money.' In other words 'all things with an exchangeable value.'

3 τὴν δ' ἀσωτίαν – καλοῦμεν] 'But the term "prodigality" we sometimes apply in a complicated sense, for we call those who are incontinent and who lavish money on intemperance—prodigals.' Exactly the same usage has been confirmed in modern language by the associations of the parable of 'the Prodigal Son.'

destruction απώλειά τις αύτου είναι και ή της ουσίας Φθορά, ώς του ζην δια τούτων όντος. ούτω δη την ασωτίαν εκδεχόμεθα. 6 ών δ' έστὶ χρεία, έστι τούτοις χρησθαι καὶ εῦ καὶ κακώς. ό πλούτος δ' έστὶ των χρησίμων έκάστω δ' άριστα χρηται ο έχων την περί τοῦτο άρετην· καὶ πλούτω δη χρήσεται άριστα ὁ έχων την περί τὰ χρήματα ἀρετήν. 7 ούτος δ' έστιν ο έλευθέριος. χρησις δ' είναι δοκεί χρημάτων δαπάνη και δόσις ή δε ληψις και ή φυλακή κτήσις μάλλον. διὸ μάλλόν έστι τοῦ έλευθερίου τὸ διδόναι οἶς δεί ή λαμβάνειν όθεν δεί και μη λαμβάνειν όθεν οὐ δεί. της γαρ άρετης μάλλον το εδ ποιείν ή το εδ πάσχειν, καὶ τὰ καλὰ πράττειν μάλλον ή τὰ αἰσχρὰ μὴ πράττειν: 8 οὐκ ἄδηλον δ' ὅτι τη μεν δόσει ἔπεται το εὖ ποιείν καὶ τὸ καλά πράττειν, τη δε λήψει το εδ πάσχειν η μη αἰσχροπραγείν. καὶ ή χάρις τῷ διδόντι, οὐ τῷ μὴ λαμ-9 βάνοντι, καὶ ὁ ἔπαινος δὲ μάλλον, καὶ ῥάον δὲ τὸ μη for "prodigal" ought to denote a man who has one fault, the habit of wasting his substance. The word literally means "he who destroys himself," and the wasting of one's substance may well be thought a kind of self-destruction, for life depends upon substance. This accordingly is the sense in which we take the word "prodigality."' Aristotle attributes some weight here to the etymology of ασωτος, arguing that the man who destroys his property, destroys himself, and he who destroys himself is beyond salvation (ἄσωτος). Βούλεται elvat is exactly analogous to the English word 'means.' Cf. Eth. III. i. 15, Τὸ δ' ἀκούσιον βούλεται λέγεσθαι κ.τ.λ. In Eth. v. v. 14, βούλεται is used in a slightly different sense to denote not the 'meaning' of a word, but a ' tendency' in things, δμως δὲ βούλεται μένειν μαλλον.

7 Liberality or 'the virtue connected with property' consists more in right giving and spending than in right receiving. The former is the positive and active side, the latter is the negative and passive side. Giving is the 'use' of money, receiving and keeping is mere 'possession.' And 'use,' as Aristotle tells us in the Rhetoric (1. v. 7), constitutes wealth proper, as being a sort of life and reality (ἐνέργεια), which mere possession is not. "Ολως δὲ τὸ πλουτεῦν ἐστὶν ἐν τῷ χρῆσθαι μαλλον ἡ ἐν τῷ κεκτῆσθαι: καὶ γὰρ ἡ ἐνέργειὰ ἐστι τῶν τοιοῦτων καὶ ἡ χρῆσες πλοῦτος.

'It is not hard to see that giving is an avenue to the doing of good and to noble action, while in taking we only receive a benefit or at most keep clear of doing a base action.' Αἰσχροπραγεῶν here corresponds with αἰσχροκέρδεα in § 41; an act of λῆψε may have the negative praise of having avoided this.

9 καὶ ῥᾶον δὲ –ἀλλότριον] 'And it is easier too to abstain from taking than it is to give; for men are less willing to give away (ήττον προΐενται λαβείν του δούναι. το γαρ οίκειον ήττον προίενται μάλλον ή οὐ λαμβάνουσι τὸ ἀλλότριον, καὶ ἐλευθέριοι δέ 10 λέγονται οι διδόντες οι δε μη λαμβάνοντες ουκ είς έλευθεριότητα επαινούνται, άλλ' ούχ ήττον είς δικαιοσύνην: οί δε λαμβάνοντες οὐδ' επαινοῦνται πάνυ. μάλλον) what is their own, than they are to abstain from taking what belongs to others.' Μάλλον is redundant; it goes to strengthen the comparative force of ἢττον. — Οὐ λαμβάνουσ corresponds to μὴ λαβεῦ just before, and makes up a positive notion to 'abstain from taking.' Aristotle attributes to men in general a character the reverse of that attributed by Sallust to Catiline, 'alieni appetens, sui profusus.'

11 ol δὲ λαμβάνοντες οὐδ' ἐπαινοῦνται πάνι] ' But they who receive are not praised at all.' Πάνυ means
'quite': οὐ πάνυ in the sense of
'hardly' is frequent in Aristotle; cf.
Είλ. 111. ii. 12-13: λαβεῖν ἢ φυγεῖν οὐ
πάνυ δοξάζομεν—δοξάζομεν & οὐ πάνυ Ισμεν: and οὐδὲ πάνυ appears to mean 'not at all,' the οὐδὲ being joined with the verb.

16 οὐκ ἀν εἴη—εὐεργετεῖσθαι] 'Nor would he be ready to ask favours, for it does not belong to the benefactor to be easily a receiver of benefits,' This is a manifestation of the spirit which runs through the virtuous characters of Aristotle-the spirit of manliness and nobility (ἀνδρώδης καί φιλόκαλος, cf. Eth. IV. iv. 3). It appears most strongly in the character of the great-souled man; see below, ch. iii. § 24. The principle of individuality, a sense of life and free action (ἐνέργεια), are with Aristotle the basis of morality, and the first requisite to nobleness seems to be self-respect. Now, a slight difference in the way in which this truth is stated will make it appear a pure or a selfish principle. Christianity says, 'It is more blessed to give than to receive,' implying that to gratify a feeling of love and kindness is better than any pleasure that the sense of gain could afford. But the Christian sentiment of love and charity, though unselfish, is not selfless.

17 τεῖσθαι. ὅθεν δὲ δεῖ, λήψεται, οἶον ἀπὸ τῶν ἰδίων κτημάτων, οὐχ ὡς καλὸν ἀλλ' ὡς ἀναγκαῖον, ὅπως ἔχη διδόναι. οὐδ' ἀμελήσει τῶν ἰδίων, βουλόμενός γε διὰ τούτων τισὶν ἐπαρκεῖν. οὐδὲ τοῖς τυχοῦσι δώσει, ἵνα ἔχη διδόναι οἶς δεῖ 18 καὶ ὅτε καὶ οῦ καλόν. ἐλευθερίου δ' ἐστὶ σφόδρα καὶ τὸ ὑπερβάλλειν ἐν τῆ δόσει, ὥστε καταλείπειν ἐαυτῷ ἐλάττω: 19 τὸ γὰρ μὴ ἐπιβλέπειν ἐψ' ἑαυτὸν ἐλευθερίου. κατὰ τὴν οὐσίαν δ' ἡ ἐλευθεριότης λέγεται· οὐ γὰρ ἐν τῷ πλήθει τῶν διδομένων τὸ ἐλευθέριον, ἀλλ' ἐν τῆ τοῦ διδόντος ἔξει, αϋτη δὲ κατὰ τὴν οὐσίαν δίδωσιν. οὐθὲν δὴ κωλύει ἐλευθεριώτερον εἶναι τὸν τὰ ἐλάττω διδόντα, ἐὰν ἀπ' ἐλαττόνων 20 διδῷ, ἐλευθεριώτεροι δὲ εἶναι δοκοῦσιν οἱ μὴ κτησάμενοι ἀλλὰ παραλαβόντες τὴν οὐσίαν· ἄπειροί τε γὰρ τῆς

For as all knowledge implies a subject as well as an object, so does every moral act or feeling imply the will and individuality of the actor. In the Christian sentiment there is so great a harmony between the object and subject, that the subjective side appears to be lost; but in reality it is only lost to be found again, it is diminished to be enhanced. Aristotle's statement would be, 'It is better to give than to receive, because it is more noble.' This has a slight tendency to give too much weight to the subjective side. In Aristotle's whole account we do not find a word about benevolence or love to others as prompting acts of liberality. We find no other motive but the 'splendour' (καλόν) of the acts themselves. What is said in the present section verges towards the selfish theory, which would ascribe such acts to the love of power inherent in man. In Hobbes (Leviathan, Book I. Chap. xi.) we find a bitter statement of the feelings with which benefits may be received. 'To have received from one, to whom we think ourselves equal, greater benefits than there is hope to requite, disposeth to counterfeit love; but really secret hatred. For benefits oblige, and obligation is thraldom; and unrequitable obligation, perpetual thraldom, which is to one's equal, hateful.' Cf. Eth. IX. vii.

17-19 Points in the character of the liberal man: he will take care of his own property in order that he may have means for his liberality. Hence, too, he will be discriminating in the objects of his favours; yet his tendency is to forget himself, to give largely, to leave hardly anything for himself; yet again, liberality does not depend on the largeness of the git, it is in proportion to the means of the giver—a less gift may be more liberal than a large one.

20 ἐλευθεριώτεροι δὲ—ποιηταί] 'We see that those are the most liberal who have not themselves acquired their property, but have inherited it; for they have never known what want is, nor are they restrained by that love of what we have ourselves produced, which belongs to all men, and is well exemplified in parents and poets.' On the philosophy of this remark, cf. Bih. IX. vii. 2-7. The remark itself comes almost verbatim from Plato's Republic, p. 330 B-C. Socrates asks Cephalus whether he made his money or inherited it, and gives as a reason for the question, οδ τοι ένεκα ήρόμην, ήν δ' έγώ, ὅτι μοι έδοξας οὐ σφόδρα άγαπᾶν τὰ χρήματα. Τοῦτο δὲ ποιοῦτιν ώς τὸ πολύ οἱ ἀν μὴ αὐτοί κτήσωνται: οἱ δὲ κτησάμενοι διπλῆ ἢ οἱ ἄλλοι ἀσπάζονται αὐτά' ἀσπερ γὰρ οἱ ποιηταί τὰ αὐτῶν ποιήματα καὶ οἱ πατέρες τοὺς παίδας άγαπῶνη, ταύτη τε δὴ καὶ οἱ χρηματισάμενοι περὶ τὰ χρήματα σπου-δάζουσιν, ὡς ἐργορ ἐαυτῶν, καὶ κατὰ τὴν χρείαν, ἦπερ οἱ ἄλλοι. From another cause, however, merchants, with their large fluctuating gains, seem often more liberal than the landowners, with their fixed incomes.

21 With perfect good sense Aristotle says that a very natural explanation may be given of the common railings you hear against fortune for not making 'the right people' (i.e. the liberal) rich. People can't expect to be rich who have hardly any care for money, and this is the characteristic of the liberal.

26-27 και εὐκοινώνητος - άρεσκόμενος] 'Further, the liberal man is easy to deal with in business transactions; for there is no difficulty in cheating him, owing to his disregard of money, and he is more annoyed at having omitted any proper expense than vexed at spending what is needless, nor does he approve the precepts of Simonides.' These remarks show a penetrating knowledge of mankind, but they do not exhibit liberality in the highest light. The gratification of a personal feeling is made rather too prominent, hence we miss the beauty of 'charity seeketh not her own.' With the present passage we may compare the description of equity in the Rhetoric (I. xiii. 15-10), part of which is τὸ ἀνέχεσθαι άδικούμενον. Various sentiments are attributed to Simonides, all testifying to the solid advantage of riches. Cf. Ar. Rhetoric, II. xvi. 2: δθεν καὶ τὸ Σιμωνίδου είρηται περί των σοφών καί πλουσίων πρὸς τὴν γυναίκα τὴν Ἰέρωνος ἐρομένην πότερον γενέσθαι κρεῖττον πλούσιον ἡ σοφὸν ' πλούσιον εἰπεῖν τοὸς σοφούς γὰρ ἔξη ὁρᾶν ἐπὶ ταῖς τῶν πλουσίων θύραις διατρίβοντας. Again, there is quoted by Plutarch a saying that 'the money-chest is always full, and the chest of the graces always empty;' and another, that 'avarice is the proper pleasure of old age.' On the philosophy of Simonides, see Vol. I. Essay II. pp. 95–96.

29 τῷ λαμβάνειν—μικροῖs] 'Illiberality exceeds in taking, only it must be in petty matters.' Grasping on a large scale gets another name than illiberality; cf. §§ 41-42.

30 τὰ μὲν οὖν—ἀνελευθέρου] 'The two sides of prodigality can hardly exist together; as it is not easy to give to everybody and receive from nobody; private persons, whom alone we reckon prodigals, soon find their substance failing them. For, in fact, the prodigal man may well be thought in no small degree superior to the illiberal. The commentators, from not seeing the train of thought in this passage, have made a difficulty about ἐπεί, which refers to the beginning of the sentence, the intermediate clauses ου γαὲρ ἀρᾶου—εἶναι being parenthetical. With οἶπερ καὶ δοκοῦσιν, cf. § 23.

31-32 Reasons are given why the prodigal is better than the illiberal man; namely, he may be cured by time, or by the failure of his means. His tendency to give is a principle which requires only to be harmonised to become a virtue. Lastly, he does more good than the illiberal man. Aristotle here is speaking of a better sort of prodigality (τοῦτον τὸν τρόπον άσωτος), which is only a slight overstepping of the bounds of liberality; but even with this restriction, it is much to be doubted whether prodigality does more good than illiberality. From wise acts of liberality much good may arise, but the common sort of prodigality, as Aristotle himself says, § 35, being prompted by folly and vanity, almost invariably goes to enrich the wrong people. If the case be even not so bad as this, the solid benefit which accrues from any tendency to capitalise money may surely be set against the chance good done by money given away indiscriminately or spent unproductively.

33 άλλ' οι πολλοι-άνελεύθεροι] 'But most prodigals, as we have implied already, take whence they ought not, and in this way are illiberal.' This is an instance of a phenomenon often to be observed in Aristotle's virtues and vices, that the 'extremes meet' (cf. IV. vii. 15, II. vii. 15). The rationale of this phenomenon appears to be that the extremes are both the result of the same principle, they are both different forms of selfishness. Selfishness can equally produce prodigal giving and meanness in receiving. Hence, if a man be selfish, though his tendency is to be prodigal, yet on occasion selfishness, which is his governing principle, will lead him to become illiberal. The fact is noticed by Eudemus, Eth. Eud. III. vii. 12: "Eori 8" έναντιώτερον τοις άκροις το μέσον ή έκεινα άλλήλοις, διότι τὸ μέν μετ' οὐδετέρου γίνεται αὐτῶν, τὰ δὲ πολλάκις

37 και συμφυέστερον-δοτικοί] 'This vice runs more in our blood than prodigality: the mass of men love to keep money, rather than to give it.' It may be doubted whether this assertion is universally true. Would it, for instance, be true of the Irish? Again, Aristotle hardly acknowledges enough the kindness that exists among men, and which made Kant wonder that there was 'so much kindness and so little justice' in the world. Aristotle, from his dislike to all that is sordid, and his admiration for the brilliant and noble qualities, takes perhaps too favourable a view of the vice of prodigality. Its connection with vanity, selfishness, and often utter heartlessness, he does not sufficiently notice, nor does he observe that lavish giving often proceeds from the want of a faculty—from an incapacity for estimating the worth of objects. Thus if illiberality be incompatible with a magnanimous spirit, prodigality is incompatible with absolute truth and justice.

38 Illiberality is widely spread, and has many forms; it contains two elements—excess of taking and defect of giving; but it does not always manifest itself in its entirety (οὐ πῶσιν ὁλόκληρος παραγίγνεται), sometimes one element exists separately from the other.

not easy to take what belongs to others, and not have others take what belongs to oneself-they are content, therefore, neither to take nor give. A second class are excessive in taking everything and from all quarters, as, for instance, those who ply illiberal trades, brothel-keepers, and all such like, and lenders of small sums at high interest. For all these take whence they ought not, and more than they ought.' This passage falls into two parts, of δ' αδ κατά την ληψιν corresponding to ol μέν γάρ έν ταις τοιαύταις. There are two subordinate divisions of the first part, namely, ol μέν διά τινα έπιείκειαν, and ol δ' αδ διά φόβον.

44 μείζον τε γάρ έστι κακον τής åσωτίας] Before (§ 32) Aristotle made the doubtful statement that prodigality does more good than illiberality. He now makes the positively untrue statement that illiberality does more harm than prodigality. His view is fallacious from an ignorance of the principles of political economy, and from not looking at the question with sufficient breadth. He regards prodigality as a short-lived evil which will be cured by time, and illiberality as inveterate. But in their consequences it is rather prodigality that is incurable, and illiberality transitory. Illiberality can always be remedied, and indeed it brings its own remedy, for saving produces wealth and capital, and these lift a man naturally and necessarily into a more expensive style of living, however much he may haggle over details. But prodigality causes personally, to the family, and to the nation, a loss of resources which is absolutely incurable.

II. Magnificence, the virtue next discussed, is a higher kind of liberality. In consists in spending money on a great scale with propriety (ev μεγέθει πρέπουσα δαπάνη ἐστίν). Thus there are two elements, greatness and propriety. The greatness is relative, being limited by the propriety, and the propriety is relative to the person, the circumstances, and the object. Magnificence will of course be prompted by a desire for what is noble. There will be something imaginative and striking about the effect it produces (τὸ δὲ μεγαλοπρεπές θαυμαστόν). Great and solemn occasions will be its proper sphere, the services of religion, the entertaining of foreigners, public works, gifts, and return-gifts. The well-born and illustrious will be the proper persons to exercise it. The house of the magnificent man will be of suitable splendour, everything he does will show taste and propriety: even in a gift to a child he will exhibit the idea of magnificence. The vulgar man, missing this happy nicety, will jar on our taste with his excessive splendour (λαμπρύνεται παρά μέλος), his object being evidently mere ostentation. The petty man, on the other hand, from timidity and constant fear of expense, will be always below the mark, and even after considerable expense will mar the whole effect by meanness in some point of detail.

2 τὸ δὲ μέγεθος—ἀρχιθεωρῷ] 'Now the greatness is relative, for there is not the same expense for a trierache as for the head of a sacred legation.' This latter office would of course demand peculiar splendour. The λειτουργίαι at Athens were exactly fitted to exercise the magnificence of the citizens.

τὸ πρέπον δὴ πρὸς αὐτόν, καὶ ἐν ῷ καὶ περὶ ā] 'The propriety accordingly must be relative to the person, the circumstances, and the object.' We have here nearly the same categories as were given, Eth. III. i. 16, where the points connected with an action are enumerated, τἰς τε δὴ καὶ τὶ καὶ περὶ τὶ ἢ ἐν τἰνι πράττει. On the suitableness of the person see below $$12-14. The circumstances are touched upon $$11, 15. The object

4 ή δὲ ὑπερβολή βαναυσία καὶ άπειροκαλία καὶ δσαι τοιαῦται] 'The corresponding excess is called "vulgarity," and "bad taste," and the like.' Bávavoos is said to be derived from βαθνος 'a forge' and αδω. Thus it means a metal-worker, or artisan. From the contempt felt by the Athenians for this kind of craft, Báravoos came to imply 'mean,' 'vulgar,' analogously to φορτικός. In Aristotle's Politics, there is a definition of what kind of work is strictly to be considered Bávavoos (VIII. ii, 4). Bávavoov δ' έργον είναι δεί τοῦτο νομίζειν καί τέχνην ταύτην και μάθησιν, όσαι πρός τας χρήσεις και τας πράξεις τας τής άρετης άχρηστον άπεργάζονται το σώμα των έλευθέρων ή την ψυχήν ή την διάνοιαν. The word βαναυσία is applied here to denote vulgarity in expenditure.

5 δὲ μεγαλοπρεπής — ἐμμελῶς] 'The magnificent man is a kind of artist, because he has an eye for the becoming, and can spend great sums tastefully.' The word ἐπατήμον here conveys the association of those qualities which were said to belong to a perfect work of art, Eth. II. vi. 9: Εἰ δὴ πῶσα ἐπιστήμη οὕτω τὸ ἔργον εῦ ἐπιτελεῖ, πρὸς τὸ μέσον βλέπουσα, κ.τ.λ.

6 ὅσπερ γὰρ—τῷ ἔργῳ] 'For as we said at the outset, a moral state is determined by its acts and its objects. Therefore the outlays of the magnificent man will be great and suitable. And the works on which he employs them will be of the same character, for only thus it will be possible to have a great outlay suitable to the work.'

έν ἀρχή] The allusion seems to be generally to the beginning of Book II.; perhaps Eth. II. ii. 8 is the nearest reference that can be given. But in the present place Aristotle is not speaking of the formation of habits out of acts, but rather of moral habits or states having a definite existence and reality only in acts and in the objective circumstances (ŵν ἐστίν) to which they (the moral states) refer. This view regards a moral state as a mere potentiality, which only attains definite and conscious reality by emerging into an act. The remark is apparently made to account for a concrete treatment of the virtue of magnificence. Elsewhere we have noticed (Eth. III. xii. 3 note) a complete separation made between the habit and the act.

10 ἀναγκαῖον δὴ—ἐν μεγέθει] 'It follows therefore that the magnificent man must also be liberal, for the liberal man spends what he ought and in the way he ought. But it is in these same particulars, which are common to magnificence and liberality. that the element of greatness which there is in the magnificent man appears, as for example in vastness of proportions, and with the same expense he will make the result more splendid. For a work is not to be esteemed for the same qualities as a possession. That possession is most prized which is worth most, as for instance gold, but that work which is great and noble. When we contemplate such a work, we admire; but the magnificent is always admirable; and in short magnificence is-excellence of some work, which is on a scale of grandeur.' The words ofor μέγεθος have vexed the commentators. One device that has been adopted is to omit the stop after μέγεθος and to translate the passage, Sed in his magnum est magnifici. veluti magnitudo liberalitatis circa hæc (reading ταθτα) versantis' (Mi-Or, without altering the punctuation, we might construe, taking οίον μέγεθος as epexegetic of τὸ μέγα,

But the greatness of the magnificent man, as it were a certain grandenr of scale, appears in these same particulars, which are common to magnificence and liberality. But the point Aristotle insists on is that magnificence differs from liberality not in degree. but in kind, being a display of more genius and imagination on the same objects, and thus with the same expense producing a more striking result. He gives as an instance of the means employed, 'vastness of size.' uéva is the moral greatness of the magnificent man, this takes as its exponent μέγεθος or physical bulk. Cf. Aristotle's definition of Tragedy (Poetic, vi. 2). The use of προϋπάρχειν here to denote that which exists already as an achievement in one's family is not unlike its use, Eth. I. xi. 4, to denote those produce it magnificently; for the character of such work is that it cannot be easily outdone, its magnificence being always in proportion to the outlay;' i.e. the feeling about such works will never be merely 'how costly they are !' but 'how great they are!' from an imaginative point of view : cf. \$ 10. The 'ball' and the 'bottle' seem to have been common toys. Dr. Fitzgerald compares the description of Cupid's toy in Apollonius Rhodius, Arg. III. 135, and Plato, Phædo, p. 110 Β, ώσπερ αὶ δωδεκάσκυτοι σφαίραι, ποικίλη, χρώμασι διειλημμένη. 20 τοιοῦτος—πολλά] 'Such now is the magnificent man, but he who exceeds and is vulgar—oxceeds, as was said before, in that he spends more than is right. He spends much upon trifles, and preserves no harmony in his splendour; he entertains his clubfellows with a wedding-feast, and when he has charge of a comic chorus, he makes them appear in purple, as the Megarians do. In all this extravagance he never aims at the beautiful, but only seeks to parade his riches, in the hope of being stared at; where he should spend much, he draws his purse-strings, where he should spend little, he squanders.' The last sentence shows that in vulgarity extremes meet, selfishness prompting both too much expense and too little; see above, chap. i. § 33, note. With  $\pi \alpha \rho \dot{\alpha} \mu \ell \lambda \sigma$  we may compare Shakspeare, Merry Wives, Act i. sc. 3. 'His filching was like an unskilful singer: he kept not time.'

olor έρανιστὰς] έρανος being a club where each member entertained in turn, or an entertainment where each guest contributed, it was of course bad taste to eclipse the rest in splendour.

tν τŷ παρόδω] The parode was the first song of the chorus sung at its entry. Naturally the comic chorus would not require rich purple dresses. The expense of a comic chorus at Athens appears to have been sixteen minæ (64L), that of a tragic chorus thirty minæ (120L); see Bentley on Phalaris,

III. Aristotle's famous description of the virtue of great-souledness (which he places as a mean between vanity and want of spirit) throws light upon the whole bearing of his moral system.

We must notice in it rather an admiring picture of what is than an investigation into what ought to be. Great-souledness is nothing else than a certain loftiness of spirit possessed by great men. It can only (in its fullest sense) belong to great men, for unless accompanied by qualities superior to those of the rest of the world, it would be simply ridiculous.

Aristotle takes this loftiness of spirit, and, considering it fine and admirable, points out the various traits in which it exhibits itself. And nothing can be more subtle or felicitous than many of his observations on this head But it is plain that great-souledness, as here represented, is not something which is prompted by duty; rather it stands quite beside the idea of duty. Greatness and the sense of moral obligation are essentially distinct, however much they may accidentally coincide.

The great-souled man has all virtues, says Aristotle (§§ 14-15).

But we find on nearer inspection that this means that he is above all those minor interests which might induce to vice; he does not care about money, so he will never cheat: he does not value even life very high, so he will not be a coward. Here then there is no self-subjection to a law. The great-souled man does not avoid vice because it is 'wrong' (in the modern sense), but simply because it is unworthy of him. Thus he is most essentially a law to himself and above all other law, Aristotle spoke of great-souledness as being a sort of culmination of the virtues (§ 16), and justly so, for it is the culmination of his moral system. As we before remarked (ch. i. § 16, note), his system is based on the idea of self-respect. Loftiness of spirit is the highest form of self-respect (µεγάλων έαυτον άξιοί, άξιος ών). This principle goes a long way in elevating the character and purifying the conduct, but its natural development is also a dislike (§§ 24-26) of all limitations of the individuality; in short, its natural development is a sort of noble pride.

Great-souledness, however fine may be the qualities that go to make it up, is essentially not a human attitude. As we have observed already, it is something exceptional, and in Aristotle's account of it we have a psychological portrait of a great man. Yet still this account shows Aristotle not to have been familiar with that conception of 'moral goodness' which has arisen out of later associations.

2 διαφέρει δ' οὐθέν-σκοπείν] ' Now it does not make the least difference whether we consider the state of mind, or the character that is produced by the state of mind.' The procedure adopted by Aristotle throughout is that of describing virtues in the concrete, though in no other case does he give so complete a personality as in describing the great-souled man. This procedure, while it gives graphic liveliness to his discussions, tends to make us forget that these virtues are not so much different kinds of character as different elements in the same character. A later development of Aristotle's ethical system calls attention to this point (cf. Eth. VI. xiii, 6). It has been said that the picture of a great-souled man here given to us must have been taken from life. Probably Aristotle traced different manifestations of the great-souled element in different people, and has here combined them.

such critics of beauty as the Greeks,

But why should we prove what is obvious, that the study of magnanimous minds is honour? And great men lay especial claim to honour, yet according to their desert,' Aristotle here fixes external honour as the object with which greatsouledness deals. Afterwards he sets it above all external honour (§ 17), άρετης γάρ παντελούς ούκ αν γένοιτο άξία τιμή. Honour is not good enough, but the world has nothing better to give.

Παρασείειν (i.e. τὰς χεῖρας) meant 'to works the hands in running.' Cf. De Incess. Animal. iii. 4, where the principle of the lever is shown to be involved in this motion. Διὸ καὶ οἱ πένταθλοι ἄλλονται πλεῖον ἔχοντες τοὺς ἀλτῆρας ἡ μὴ ἔχοντες, καὶ οἱ θέωντες θᾶντον θέουσι παρασείωντες τὰς χεῖρας 'γίνεται γάρ τις ἀπέρεισις ἐν τῷ διατάσει πρὸς τὰς χεῖρας καὶ τοὺς καρπούς.

'Now great-souledness appears to be, as it were, a sort of crown of the virtues; it enhances them, and it cannot come into existence without them. Hence it is hard to be great-souled in the true sense of the term, for this is impossible without nobleness and virtue.' The word 'magnanimity' is the conventional representative of μεγαλοψυχία, but it does not really answer to it. 'Magnanimity' often implies rather generosity, and what Aristotle calls ἐπεία, than that loftiness of spirit which he attributes to the μεγαλόψυχος.

καλοκάγαθίας] This abstract noun does not occur in Plato, who frequently uses the words καλός τε κάγαθός (written separately) in the common Athenian sense, denoting very much what we mean by 'a gentleman.' Aristotle uses the words τῶν ἐν βίω καλῶν κάγαθῶν (Eth. I. viii. 9) to denote generally 'what is noble and excellent in life.' He also introduces the present form, Eth. x. ix. 3, τους δέ πολλούς άδυνατείν πρός καλοκαγαθίαν προτρέψασθαι. In Pol. I. xiii. 4, he asks if both ruler and ruled must equally partake of raloκαγαθία. In these passages there is no special import given to the word. It seems to imply a sort of elevated virtue. Stahr translates the present place, "Es ist unmöglich ein Grossgesinnter zu sein, ohne die Totalität aller Tugenden." And St. Hilaire-"On ne peut l'être sans une vertu complète." This is, however, taking καλοκαγ in the Eudemian sense, on which see Vol. I. Essay I. p. 25-27.

'But the great-souled man despises justly (for his estimate is true), but most people do so at haphazard.' Throughout, the great man is justified in the high position he assumes by reason of the correctness of his estimate. Modern ideas of delicacy, to say the least, would proscribe this accuracy of self-appreciation, and the claims founded upon it.

24-26 He is glad to do a benefit and ashamed to receive one; he will wipe out a favour by doing a greater one in return; he will remember those whom he has benefited, but not those by whom he has been benefited; he will be in want of no one; he will serve any readily; he will be proud to the great, and easy with the lowly, &c. On the principle of independence, which appears here in an extreme form, see above, note on ch. i. § 16.

oöb of Λάκωνες] This is said to have been on the occasion of a Theban invasion into Laconia. Aspasius quotes from Callisthenes a mention of the circumstance. Xenophon is thought to allude to the same event (Hell. vi. v. 33), where, however, he makes the Spurtans enumerate their services.

27-34 A list of characteristics follows, completing the picture of the great-souled man. He will not compete for the common objects of ambition (τὰ ἐντιμα); he will only attempt great and important matters, he will seem otherwise inactive; he will be open in friendship and harred; really straightforward and deeply truthful, but reserved and ironical in manner to common people. Will live for his friend alone, will wonder at nothing, will bear no malice, will be no gossip (ωκ ἀνθρωπολόγος), will not be anxious about trifles, and will care more to possess that which is fine than that which is productive. His movements are slow, his voice is deep, and his diction stately.

28 είρωνα δὲ πρὸς τοὺς πολλούς] Bekker has introduced this reading on the authority of one MS. alone; all the rest read είρωνεία. Είρωνα is not strictly grammatical, but it is in accordance with the Aristotelian mode of writing; it comes in despite the nominative ἀληθευτικός, as a carrying on of the accusatives before used, καὶ ἀργὸν εἶναι—καὶ ὁλίγων πρακτικόν, &c.

35 οὐ κακοl—ἡμαρτημένοι δέ] 'Now it is true that these again are not bad, for they do no harm, but are only in error.' Οὐδέ refers to ch. ii. § 22. Vanity and want of spirit are, like pettiness and vularity, not very serious vices. Of the latter pair, speaking of the qualities and not the persons possessing them, he said they are κακία, but not disgraceful.

 $\delta \mu \hat{\epsilon} \nu \gamma \hat{a} \rho - \hat{a} \gamma \alpha \theta \hat{\omega} \nu$  'For the smallsouled man, though worthy of good things, deprives himself of his deserts, and seems to be harmed by not appreciating his own claims, and by ignorance of himself; else he would have aimed at the good things he had a claim to. Such characters, however, are not to be called foolish, but it is rather their energy that is deficient. Still this way of thinking seems to have a bad effect upon the character; for men's aims are regulated by their opinions of their merits, -but these draw back from noble actions and pursuits, thinking themselves unworthy; and in the same way they cut themselves off from external advantages.' From these considerations, and from the whole tendency of his system, Aristotle decides that small-souledness is worse than vanity (§ 37), and he also asserts that it is more common. Want of elevated aims, want of effort, of will, of individuality, these are indeed fatal deficiencies as regards the attainment of what is fine and noble in character. The conception of 'humility' is of course quite beside the system of Aristotle, but we may observe that it does not come into necessary collision with a condemnation of μικροψυχία. For this latter implies a want of moral aspiration. Now it is desirable to combine with humility the greatest amount of moral aspiration.

άλλὰ μᾶλλον ὁκνηροί] Another reading, supported by several MSS, is νοεροί, which the Scholiast explains by δριμεῖς καὶ ἐπινογτικοί. The Paraphrast, however, gives νωθροί, which supports the present reading. Νοεροί makes good sense, since it is true that want of spirit often accompanies an intellectual turn of mind, men's 'native hue of resolution' being

ή τοιαύτη δὲ δόξα δοκεί καὶ χείρους ποιεῖν ἔκαστοι γὰρ ἐφίενται τῶν κατ' ἀξίαν, ἀφίστανται δὲ καὶ τῶν πράξεων τῶν καλῶν καὶ τῶν ἐπιτηδευμάτων ὡς ἀνάξιοι ὅντες, ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ τῶν ἐκτὸς ἀγαθῶν. οἱ δὲ χαῦνοι ἤλίθιοι καὶ ἐαυτοὺς 36 ἀγνοοῦντὲς, καὶ ταῦτ' ἐπιφανῶς ὡς γὰρ ἄξιοι ὅντες τοῖς ἐντίμοις ἐπιχειροῦσιν, εἶτα ἐξελέγχονται καὶ ἐσθῆτι κοσμοῦνται καὶ σχήματι καὶ τοῖς τοιούτοις, καὶ βούλονται τὰ εὐτυχήματα φανερὰ εἶναι αὐτῶν, καὶ λέγουσι περὶ αὐτῶν ὡς διὰ τούτων τιμηθησόμενοι. ἀντιτίθεται δὲ τῆ 37 μεγαλοψυχία ἡ μικροψυχία μάλλον τῆς χαυνότητος καὶ γὰρ γίγνεται μαλλον καὶ χεῖρόν ἐστιν. ἡ μὲν οῦν μεγα- 38 λοψυχία περὶ τιμήν ἐστι μεγάλην, ὥσπερ εἴρηται.

'sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought,' Yet, on the other hand, it is possible that reepol has come to supplant διατρροί from a mistake arising from a fancied antithesis to ἢλίθιοι.

IV. Descending now from what is extraordinary to the common level, Aristotle discusses another virtue which bears the same relation to great-souledness as liberality does to magnificence, namely, the virtue of a laudable ambition. This is concerned with the desire for honour as it exists in ordinary men. There is no name for this virtue, but language testifies to the existence of extremes, hence we may infer a mean. There are two words, ambitious and unambitious; both these are made terms of reproach, thus implying that there must be a middle quality, in relation to which they are each extremes. Again, both are used as terms of praise, which shows that each in turn lays claim to the mean place, as setting itself off against its opposite.

1 καθάπερ ἐν τοῦ: πρώτοιε] Cf. Eth. Π. vii. 8. This expression might seem to suggest that the present passage was written after an interval; it is repeated in § 4.

4 έστι δ' ότε—μέσον] 'But sometimes we praise the ambitious man as ἐπαινοῦμεν ὡς ἄνδρώδη καὶ φιλόκαλον, τὸν δὲ ἀφιλότιμον ὡς μέτριον καὶ σώφρονα, ὥσπερ καὶ ἐν τοῖς πρώτοις ἔπομεν. δῆλον δ' ὅτι πλεοναχῶς τοῦ φιλοτοιούτου λεγομένου οὐκ ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ ἀεὶ φέρομεν τὸν φιλότιμον, ἀλλ' ἐπαινοῦντες μὲν ἐπὶ τὸ μαλλον ἢ οἱ πολλοί, ψέγοντες δ' ἐπὶ τὸ μαλλον ἢ δεῖ. ἀνωνύμου δ' οὕσης τῆς μεσότητος, ὡς ἐρήμης ἔοικεν ἀμφισβητεῖν τὰ ἄκρα' ἐν οἵς δ' ἐστὶν ὑπερβολὴ καὶ 5 ἔλλειψις, καὶ τὸ μέσον. ὀρέγονται δὲ τιμῆς καὶ μαλλον ἢ δεῖ καὶ ἢττον, ἔστι δ' ὅτε καὶ ὡς δεῖ ἐπαινεῖται γοῦν ἡ ἔξις αὕτη, μεσότης οῦσα περὶ τιμὴν ἀνώνυμος. φαίνεται δὲ πρὸς μὲν τὴν φιλοτιμίαν ἀφιλοτιμία, πρὸς δὲ τὴν ἀφιλοτιμίαν φιλοτιμία, πρὸς ἀμφότερα δὲ ἀμφότερά πως. ὅ ἔοικε δὲ τοῦτ' εἶναι καὶ περὶ τὰς ἄλλας ἀρετάς, ἀντικεῖσθαι δ' ἐνταῦθ' οἱ ἄκροι φαίνονται διὰ τὸ μὴ ἀνομάσθαι τὸν μέσον,

5 Πραότης δ' έστὶ μὲν μεσότης περὶ ὀργάς, ἀνωνύμου δ' ὅντος τοῦ μέσου, σχεδὸν δὲ καὶ τῶν ἄκρων, ἐπὶ τὸν μέσον manly and noble-spirited, and sometimes we praise the unambitious man as moderate and sober-minded, as mentioned in our first remarks. Now it is plain that as the term "lover of anything" is used in more senses than one, we do not always apply the term "lover of honour" to express the same thing, but when we praise, we praise that ambition which is more than most men's, and when we blame, we blame that which is greater than it should be. The mean state having no name, the extremes contend, as it were, for this unoccupied ground; but still it exists : for where there is excess and defect there must also be a mean.'

6 ξοικε δὲ τοῦτ' εἶναι καὶ περὶ τὰς ἄλλας ἀρετάς] Cf. Eth. II. viii. I-2.

V. The regulation of the temper (μεσότης περὶ ὁργάς) is the next subject for discussion. Aristotle confesses that there is no name for this, but he provisionally calls it mildness, though this term is also used to express a deficiency in the feeling of anger. Excess in this feeling has various forms, and accordingly various names; the passionate (δργίλοι), the hasty (ἀκρόχολοι), the sulky (πικροί), the morose (χαλεποί), all come under the same category as showing excessive or ill-directed anger. Aristotle does not here enter upon the philosophy of anger, inquire its final cause, and in accordance with this determine its right manifestation. He says it is human to avenge oneself (§ 12), and not to resent certain things is slavish (§ 6) and a moral defect, hence we must have a certain amount of anger. This amount must be duly regulated, but where the true mean is cannot be laid down in the abstract (οὐ ράδιον τῷ λόγω ἀποδοῦναι); it depends on the particular circumstances, and must be left to the intuitive judgment of the mind (ἐν τή αίσθήσει ή κρίσις).

3-6 βούλεται γάρ - ἀνδραποδώδες] 'For the term "mild man" means one that should be dispassionate and not carried away by his feeling, but should be angry in the way, at the things, and for so long a time, as the mental standard may have appointed. Yet this character seems rather to incline to error on the side of deficiency, for the mild man is more apt to pardon than to resent, But the deficiency is a moral fault (ψέγεται), whether it be called perhaps (715) want of anger, or whatever else. For men seem fools who do not feel anger at things at which they ought to feel it, or in the manner they ought, or at the time they ought, or with the persons they ought. Such a man seems to be devoid of feeling and of the sense of pain, and since nothing provokes him, he seems not to know how to defend himself : but to suffer insult or to stand by and see one's friends insulted is servile.'

βούλεται γάρ ὁ πρᾶος βούλεται appears to be used here in a doubtful sense, something between 'the word mild means,' &c., and 'the mild man has a tendency to,' &c. ; cf. ch. I. § 5. note.

τὸ δὲ προπηλακιζόμενον] Had the Ethics been composed on a psychological plan, what is said here might have been arranged under the head of θυμός, and would have been connected with the relation of θυμός to courage, which is discussed above, Eth. III. viii. 10-12. The present passage is admirably illustrated by Shakespeare's Hamlet, Act IL Scene 2:

'Am I a coward?

Who calls me villain? breaks my pate across?

Plucks off my beard and blows it in my face?

Tweaks me by the nose? gives me the lie i' the throat

But I am pigeon-liver'd, and lack gall

To make oppression bitter.'

7 ή δ' ὑπερβολή-γίνεται] 'Now the excess is possible under all heads, the wrong people, the wrong things, more, quicker, longer, than is right. However, these excesses cannot all coexist in the same man. This would be impossible. For evil destroys even itself, and if it exist in its entirety, it becomes unbearable.' Psychological reasons might be assigned why the same person cannot be passionate, peevish, and sulky. But Aristotle here gives an abstract generalisation -that the different forms of evil are mutually destructive, and that it is only by tempering evil with a certain admixture of good that its existence can be borne.

8 συμβαίνει δ'—ἀποπαύονται] 'This happens because they do not keep in their anger, but through their keenness make reprisals in an open way, and then they are done.' The words

ἢ φανεροί εἰσι can have nothing to do with the principle given in the Rhetoric, II. ii. 1, that anger desires to make itself manifestly felt, else we must have had ἢ φανεροί ἄν είγσαν.
The Paraphrast simply renders οἱ κατέχουαι τὴν ὁργὴν, οδὸὲ κρύπτουσιν, ἀλλὰ ἐξάγονται καὶ ἀμύνονται εὐθύν.

9 of ἀκρόχολοι] 'The hasty.' The older form of this word is aκράγολοι. The etymology appears to be dispos and χολή, as if 'on the point' or 'extreme verge of anger.' On the same analogy we find the word ἀκροσφαλής, 'on the verge of being overturned,' 'ricketty,' cf. Plato, Repub. p. 404 B. Plato speaks of passionate and peevish people as having become so through the enervating of an originally noble and spirited temperament. Cf. Repub. p. 411 B-413 : ἐἀν δὲ θυμοειδη (ἐξ άρχης λάβη), άσθενη ποιήσας τον θυμόν δξύρροπον άπειργάσατο, άπὸ σμικρών ταχύ ερεθιζόμενον τε καί κατασβεννύμενον. ἀκρόχολοι οῦν και δργίλοι ἀντί θυμοειδούς γεγένηνται, δυσκολίας Εμπλεοι. κ.τ.λ.

in their wrath. Now there is a natural termination, when one has wreaked one's resentment, since revenge stops anger by substituting a feeling of pleasure for that of pain. But if this does not take place, these people continue to feel their burden. Their feeling is not manifest, and so no one reasons them out of it, while to digest it internally requires time. Therefore such persons are exceedingly exatious both to themselves and to their best friends.' An admirable account of sulkiness, on which nothing more need be said.

13 ὁ δὲ καὶ ἐν τοῦς πρότερον εἰρηται] This refers to Εἰλ. II. ix. 7-9, which passage is with some amplification almost exactly repeated here. This part of the Εἰλιες is written with a constant reference to Book II., and yet as if the subject had been taken up again to be worked out after an interval.

VI. The next subject is the regulation of one's deportment in society, with regard especially to complacency or the reverse. This also is a balance between extremes, avoiding on the one side surliness (τὸ δύσκολον), and on the other side the conduct both of the weak assentor (ἄρεσκος), and of the interested flatterer (κόλαξ). The balance has no name, it is most like friendship, but differs from it in being devoid of affection, and being extended to all in proper degrees. There is a slight departure here from Book II. vii. 11-13, and it may be said that the present treatment is an improvement. Before (l.c.) it was said, there are three virtues connected with speech and action in society: the first is about what is true, the others about what is pleasant. But here the quality which concerns the deportment and whole spirit of a man in society is rightly treated as most generic, and placed first. In Book II. the name  $\phi_i \lambda i a$  is unreservedly given to the quality in question, but here no name is assigned, and only a resemblance to friendship is pointed out.

5 οὐ γὰρ ὁμοίως—λυπεῖη] 'For it is not fitting that we should pay the same regard to strangers as to familiars, nor again have we an equal title to put them to pain.' This latter clause is explained in §§ 7-9, where it is laid down that though the general object will be to give pleasure, yet that a man must bring himself to give pain on occasion, with a view to important moral consequences in the future. He would, of course, feel himself more bound to exercise this duty with regard to friends.

6-7 καθόλου - δυσχερανεί] 'We have said generally that (the good man) will associate with people as he ought, but we may add (8è) that, with a constant reference to what is beautiful and what is expedient, he will aim at not giving pain, or at contributing pleasure. The province of his virtue lies among the pleasures and pains that arise out of social intercourse, and wherever in giving pleasure he would dishonour or injure himself, he will make a difficulty, and rather choose to give pain than such gratification. And if there be something which will bring, to any considerable degree, disgrace or harm on the doer, while opposition will give him slight pain, (the good man) will not approve it, but will show his repugnance.' (1) It may be derogatory to oneself to show complacency. (2) It may be hurtful to some member of the company. These cautions show the moral and thoughtful spirit by which Aristotle would have conduct in society regulated. The following section prescribes the bearing of a finished gentleman, giving to all their due. It must not be forgotten that Aristotle himself had played the part, not only of a philosopher, but also of a courtier.

9 δύσκολος] Eudemus uses the word αὐθάδης to denote this character (Eth. Eud. III. vii. 4), in which he is followed by Theophrastus (Characters, c. 15) and the author of the Magna Moralia (I. xxix.). Eudemus makes the mean state σεμνότης, which is a departure from the present treatment.

VII. There follows another nameless excellence closely connected with the former, having still to do with demeanour in society; this, by a curious formula, is termed the regulation of boastfulness (ή της άλαζονείας μεσότης). The boastful man lays claim to honourable qualities which he does not possess, or to a greater degree than he possesses them (δοκεί προσποιητικός των ενδόξων είναι κ.τ.λ.), while the ironical man denies or understates his own merits. balance between these two is found in the straightforward character (αὐθέκαστός τις), who in word and deed neither diminishes nor exaggerates his own good qualities. Eth. II. vii. 12, the provisional name άλήθεια was given to this virtue, but here Aristotle points out that it is to be distinguished from 'truth,' in the more serious sense of the word, -that 'truth' which makes the difference between justice and injustice. What he is at present concerned with is merely a truthfulness of manner. though he confesses (§ 8) that this has a moral worth (enceckins), and that the man who is truthful in little things will also be truthful in more important affairs.

3 clowr This is an excessively difficult word to express in English. 'Ironical' has acquired an association of bitterness and taunting,- 'Dissembler' of craft. If we render it by 'over-modest' we trench upon the qualities of the μικρόψυχος, and imply too much that is connected with the whole character. Elpuvela as here spoken of is simply an affair of the manner; there appear to be two forms of it, one that refined species exhibited by Socrates, the other an affectation of humility which is really contemptible. There is perhaps no one English word to express these two forms, the only resource appears to be to use the word 'Ironical' in a restricted sense. Elpwr in Theophrastus (Char. I.) is used in a worse sense than in Aristotle, to denote one who dissembles for selfish motives, and whose whole life is artificial and deceitful.

τῶ λόγω, τὰ ὑπάρχοντα ὁμολογῶν είναι περὶ αὐτόν, καὶ ούτε μείζω ούτε ελάττω. έστι δε τούτων εκαστα καὶ ενεκά 5 τινος ποιείν και μηθενός. and hence a 'matter-of-fact' or 'straightforward' man.

5-6 fore 8ê -dagión] 'Now it is possible to practise both irony and boastfulness either with or without a particular motive. But in general a man speaks, acts, and lives, in accordance with his character, unless he have a particular motive, Falsehood is in itself base and reprehensible, and truth is noble and praiseworthy. And thus the truthful man, who occupies the mean, is praiseworthy, while those who strive to give a false impression of themselves are both reprehensible, and especially the boaster.' Aristotle first appears to assert that both irony and boastfulness are prompted generally by a particular motive, for, if it were not so, men would be simple and natural. Afterwards we are told that boastfulness is a condition of the will (ἐν τῆ προαιρέσει), that it aims at either gain or reputation,-that irony may spring from a motive of refinement, or again from vanity itself. These things however may aim at reputation and yet be instinctive, the desire for reputation forming part of men's natural impulses.

8 δόξειε δ' αν-έπαινετός] 'But this character appears to possess a moral excellence. For the lover of truth, who adheres to what is true even in things where it does not matter, will be still more truthful in affairs of importance, for he will surely avoid a lie when it appears as something base, when he avoided it before merely for its own sake,' The writing here is a little careless, since above, all lies were declared to be essentially base, but here a contrast seems to be drawn between the 'white lie' in society, and the base lie in affairs of importance. Aristotle probably intended in his account of Justice (§ 7) to treat more profoundly of Truth in its relation to the moral character. This intention, however, was never fulfilled.

10-12 ὁ δὲ μείζω-κέρδους] 'But the man who pretends to better qualities than he really possesses, if he has no motive, shows like a mean man, for else he would not have delighted in the falsehood, though he seems foolish rather than bad. Supposing there is a motive, if it be reputation or honour, the boaster is not to be severely blamed, but if it be money, directly or indirectly, his conduct is more discreditable. The boaster is not constituted by a given faculty, but by a particular condition of the will; for it is in accordance with his moral state, and by reason of his character, that he is a boaster, just as either from taking pleasure in falsehood itself, or from aiming at reputation or gain (in short, from the state of his will and moral character)-a man is called a liar.

<sup>12</sup> οὐκ ἐν τῷ δυνάμει—dλλ' ἐν τῷ προαιρέσει] Cf. the well-known passage Rhet. I. i. I.4, where the Sophist is said to be distinguished from the Dialectician not intellectually but morally, ὁ γὰρ σοφωτικὸς οὐκ ἐν τῷ δυνάμει ἀλλ' ἐν τῷ προαιρέσει.

<sup>13</sup> This is a very happy observation, that desire for reputation makes men pretend to virtue, power, and the like; but desire for gain makes them pretend to useful arts the possession of which cannot be tested; thus a man will give himself out to be a clever soothsayer or doctor.

'Ironical persons, in depreciating themselves, exhibit, it is true a certain refinement of character, for they do not appear to speak in that way for the sake of gain, but to avoid pomposity: but it must be confessed that these too especially disclaim qualities held in repute, as Socrates used to do. But they who make a pretence about things petty and obvious are called "humbugs," and are despised by every one. Sometimes this kind of conduct appears to be really pretension, as in the case of the Laconian dress; for both the excess and the extreme of deficiency are of the nature of boasting.

There appears to be a slight antithesis between χαριέστεροι μέν—and μάλιστα δὲ καὶ οδτοι, as if the disclaiming of honourable qualities were not so much to the credit of the Ironical. καὶ οδτοι seems to imply a reference to the great-souled man, who was described as having tendencies of the same kind, I. ii. § 27–28.

olov και Σωκράτης] On the Irony of Socrates, see Vol. I. Essay II. p. 157.

15 προsποιούμενοι] It is impossible to understand this in the sense of 'disclaiming' which the context requires. The Paraphrast supplies μὴ δύνασθαι, and explains it very clearly, as follows, δς δὲ οὐ μόνον τὰ μεγάλα καὶ ένδοξα άλλά και τὰ μικρὰ ἀπαρνεῖται, και ὰ δῆλός ἐστι δυνάμενος ταῦτα προσποιεῖται μὴ δύναςθαι. But προσποιούμενος can never have been consciously meant to stand for this. There must have been some slip about the writing. Two of the MSS. read μὴ προσποιούμενοι. This sort of variation in MSS. does not show what was the original reading, but only that the transcribers felt a difficulty.

VIII. 1 Ο δσης δὲ—τοιούτων ἀκούειν]
'Rest also being a part of human life, and an element of this being playful diversion, we find here likewise the sphere for a certain harmonious manner of intercourse, and the possibility of both speaking and hearing the right sort of things in the right way; though there will be a difference as to whether one is the speaker in such matters or listens to what is said.'

Aristotle considers the virtue of wit or tact (ε<sup>tr'</sup> ἐπιδέξιος ε<sup>tr'</sup> ἐντράπελος λέγεται) to be concerned with the amusing and sportive element in society, and to be a balance between buffoonishness that sacrifices all propriety to the ludicrous, and dulness that is incapable of either making or appreciating a joke. Aristotle does not here enter into the philosophy of the ludicrous, or inquire what is a joke and why it pleases. Nor does he lay down any canons for the regulation of wit, except such general ones as that 'nothing should be said which is unworthy of a gentleman' (πότερον οὖν τὸν εὖ σκώπτοντα ὁριστέον τῷ λέγειν ὰ πρέπει ἐλευθερίφ;), that the hearer must not be shocked, &c. On the whole he leaves it indefinite, saying that tastes differ, and the educated man will be a law to himself. His account of wit then is negative, and abstract, though perfectly just as far as it goes.

Ι διαγωγής μετά παιδιάς] διαγωγή is the passing of time, hence 'diversion.' Cf. Μεταρήμς. I. i. 15: πλειόνων δ' εύρισκομένων τεχνών, καὶ τών μέν πρὸς τάναγκαῖα τῶν δὲ πρὸς διαγωγήν οὐσῶν. Είλ. Ι. τ. 3: καταφείγουσι δ' ἐπὶ τὰς τοιαύτας διαγωγάς τῶν εὐδαιμονίζομένων οἱ πολλοί.

3 βωμολόχοι] This name seems originally to have belonged to the vile creatures who lay in wait at the altars to purloin the offerings, and hence to have been applied to those who thought nothing too low forthem, buffoons who would descend to anything.

ol δ' εμμελῶς—τὰ ἤδη] 'But they whose jocularity is in good taste are called witty, by a name that implies their happy turns; for such motions of wit seem to belong to the moral character, and characters, like bodies, are judged by their movements.' Aristotle here calls attention to the etymology of εὐτράπελος, as he did before to that of ἀσωτος. Ch. i. § 5.

4 ἐπιπολάζοντος — χαρίεντες] 'But as the ludicrous meets us at every turn (ἐπιπολάζοντος, cf. Eth. I. iv. 4), and most people take pleasure in sport and jesting more than they ought, even buffoons get the name of witty, just as though they were fine witts.'

In the former it is coarse language that provokes laughter, in the latter it is rather inuendo; which makes no small difference with respect to decorum.' This interesting remark is in accordance with what we know from other sources of the comparative tameness of the new comedy in relation to the license of the old. Cf. Horace, A. P. 231 sqq.

9 οὐ δὴ πᾶν—σκώπτειν] 'Therefore he will not give utterance to every jest, for the jest is a sort of reviling, and the lawgivers forbid certain kinds of reviling—they ought perhaps to have forbidden (certain) jests.' Ένια must be understood as carried on from λοεδορεῦν to σκώπτειν. Aristotle could never have wished that jesting altogether should be forbidden by the law.

ὁ δη χαρίεις-έαυτώ] 'This then will be the attitude of the refined and liberal man, he being as it were a law to himself.' Aristotle usually escapes from pure indefiniteness and relativity by asserting that the standard in each case is to be found in the good, the wise, the refined man. This standard is evidently the expression of the universal reason of man. It is not to be supposed that wit, beauty, or goodness are mere matters of taste, as Aristotle would seem for a moment to imply (ή και τό γε τοιοῦτον ἀδριστον; άλλο γάρ άλλω μισητόν τε και ήδύ). When he adds afterwards that the educated man must be the standard of appeal, he means that the laws of reason must decide. And these might, had Aristotle thought it worth his while, have been more drawn out in reference to the question under discussion.

verbal repetition of what was said, Eth. II. vii. II-I3. They appear like an after-thought as compared with Eth. IV. vi. I.

We perhaps ought hardly to quit the present subject without alluding to the remarks which Aristotle has elsewhere thrown out on the nature of wit and of the ludicrous. The most striking are Rhet. II. xii. 16, where he defines wit as 'chastened insolence,' ή γάρ εὐτραπελία πεπαιδευμένη υβρις έστίν, and his account of the ludicrous, that it consists in a thing being out of place, anomalous, ugly and faulty, though not in such a way as to cause any sense of apprehension or pain. Poet, v. 2 : Τὸ γὰρ γελοίον έστιν άμάρτημά τι και αίσχος άνώδυνον και οὐ φθαρτικόν, οδον εὐθὺς τὸ γελοίον πρόσωπον αίσχρόν τι καί διεστραμμένον ἄνευ ὀδύνης. This definition, which is to the highest degree penetrating, has been made by Coleridge the text for his admirable dissertations on wit and humour. See Literary Remains, Vol. I.

IX. 1-2 Hepl δὲ αἰδοῦς—εῖναι]
'Modesty we can scarcely with propriety describe as a virtue; for it seems to be rather a feeling than a moral state; at least it is defined to be a kind of fear of evil report; and in its effects it is analogous to the fear of danger, for persons who are ashamed blush, and those who are in terror of death grow pale. Both affections then appear to be in a manner corporeal, which is the mark rather of feelings than of states.' Aristotle, following out the programme given, Eth. II. vii. 14-15, arrives now at the place for discussing two instances of the law of the balance existing in the instinctive feelings of the mind (év τοῖς πάθεσι μεσότητες), namely modesty and indignation. But from some cause his work is interrupted here; indignation (Néμεσις) is not treated of at all, and the discussion on modesty is left unfinished. There is no mention of the extremes, shamelessness (dvaioxvvrla) and shamefacedness (κατάπληξις), which are specified in Book II. (l. c.) and in Eth. Eud. III. vii. 2. After stating that only to certain ages is 'modesty' suitable, and that only in a certain provisional sense (ἐξ ὑποθέσεως) can it be called a virtue, the chapter abruptly ends, a couple of sentences having been added by some later hand which give an appearance of finish to the book and awkwardly connect it with the opening of Book V.

3-5 alôws is the apprehension of shame, joined of course with a capacity for strongly feeling it; neither modesty nor any other English word seems adequately to convey the force of albus. Aristotle speaks of it as a desirable quality in tender age, before the character is formed. But in maturer life the necessity for it, and therefore its merit, ceases to exist. It might be said that sensibility to shame ought to be preserved with regard to acts that are conventionally (κατά δόξαν) and not really (κατ' άλήθειαν) disgraceful; but Aristotle says that any possibility of feeling shame must be avoided altogether, so that the former acts must not be done.

PLAN OF BOOK V.

HITHERTO all has been perfectly coherent and regular in the Ethics of Aristotle. Down to the ninth Chapter of Book IV., though all the parts may not have been composed at the same time, yet all belong to the same plan, and bear every mark of being the work of the same author. But the MS, of Book IV, seems suddenly to have broken off in the middle of a subject. Whether this was owing to mutilation, or to original incompleteness, there are now no means of saving. What is clear to us from internal evidence is, that the editor has at this point commenced supplying a lacuna; and accordingly three whole books are now introduced, which, though bearing a close resemblance to the style of Aristotle, and probably conveying, with only slight modifications, his actual system, yet belong to the Ethics of Eudemus, Aristotle's disciple, and thus have only an imperfect coherence with the present work. The chief arguments by which it is demonstrated that Books V., VI., VII., are only 'copies' from Aristotle by one of his school have been given, Essay I. pp. 50-71, and need not here be recapitulated.

The present Eudemian book on Justice may bear the same relation to Aristotle's theory of Justice, now lost, as the Eudemian theory of Pleasure in Book VII. bears to Aristotle's theory of Pleasure given in Book X. Or, on the other hand, Aristotle's account of Justice may never have been actually written, and may only have existed as orally imparted to the School; in which case the present book would claim a slightly more original character, being built up by Eudemus out of Aristotelian materials, but not on the lines of any one treatise. The extent to which parts of this book appear to have been suggested by passages in the Politics of Aristotle (see ii. 11, iii. 1–14, v. 6, vi. 4–5, and notes) would rather favour the latter supposition. But we trace the same endeavour to slightly improve on the conclusions of the Politics, which Eudemus elsewhere so often exhibits to improve upon the Ethics of Aristotle. We observe here also indications that the Peripatetic School had been busy in working out the beginnings of political economy as made by Plato and Aristotle. The theory of money, value, and price, given in chap. v., is in its way excellent. The Eudemian books, however, have all a peculiar indistinctness which taxes the reader's thought to divine their exact bearing. But on consideration, the outlines of a method appear to show themselves through the mist. And accordingly the following parts may perhaps be discerned in Book V.

- (1.) Justice having been defined to be 'a state of mind that wills to do what is just,' the first part of the book is concerned with determining what is the just? (τὸ δίκαιον as distinguished from δικαιον δίναιον as distinguished from δικαιον δίναιον (). The abstract principle of 'the just' may either be identified with all law, and therefore with all morality; or it may be restricted to its proper sense, fair dealing with regard to possessions, &c. (τὸ ἴσον). In this restricted sense 'the just' finds its sphere either in distributions of the state, or in correcting the wrongs done in dealings between man and man. Though justice is not retaliation pure and simple, yet in all commerce, &c., there is a sort of retaliation. Ch. i.—v. § 16.
- (2.) Having settled the nature of 'the just,' it follows to discuss 'justice,' or this same principle manifested in the mind of the individual. This part of the subject is very imperfectly carried out. We miss the graphic impersonations of the virtues with which the fourth book of Aristotle's Ethics is filled. We find nothing but a few barren remarks on voluntariness as necessary to make an act unjust, and deliberate purpose to constitute an unjust character. There is a large digression here on the proper sense of the word 'justice.' Justice, it is said, can only properly exist between citizens; it is a mere metaphor to talk of justice in families, &c. Ch. v. § 17—Ch. viii.
- (3.) Certain questions are added, the answers to which go to supply deficiencies in the definition hitherto given of justice. The leading question is, Can one be injured voluntarily ? and the answer to this shows that justice implies a relation between two distinct wills and interests. It is again repeated that justice must be a settled state of the character; thus the just man could not at will be unjust. The subject is concluded by an assertion that justice is essentially a human quality. Ch. ix.

- (4.) An appendix follows on the nature of Equity, which is a higher and finer justice, dealing with exceptional cases and acting in the spirit, not in the letter of the law. Ch. x.
- (5.) Ch. xi. might be called superfluous and out of place. It touches on the already settled question, Can a man injure himself? But the want of a lucidus ordo is universally characteristic of the Eulemian Ethics; and this chapter adds some after-thoughts on suicide as an act of injustice, and on the metaphor of justice between the higher and the lower faculties.

Owing, probably, to the want of distinctness in it, this book has not made so much impression on the world as some of the Nicomachean books with which it has been incorporated. The distinction between 'distributive' and 'corrective' justice is, however, sometimes referred to, as, for instance, by Lord Bacon in the 'Advancement of Learning.' This and the other distinctions which the book brings out belong rather to politics or political economy than to morals. The remaining contributions to the subject here made—such as the showing that injustice implies a conflict of wills—may have been useful as a clearing up of language at the time when the book was written.

Hildenbrand, in his Geschichte und System der Rechts- und Staatsphilosophie, complains of the meagre account of Contracts given in this book, especially as contrasted with the full disquisition in the Laws of Plato.

What is still more to be complained of and regretted is, the insufficient account of Justice—from an ethical point of view, as a state of the soul—with which we have here to content ourselves.

I. This chapter proposes and opens the discussion upon the nature of justice and injustice. The chief points it contains are as follows. (I.) Justice and injustice must stand opposed to each other, as being two contrary states of mind. From the nature of one, we may infer its contrary the nature of the other, and if the one term be used in a variety of senses, the other term will be used in a corresponding variety of senses. (2) The term 'unjust man' is used in two senses, to denote one who is lawless, and one who is unfair. Therefore the term 'just' must denote both lawful and fair. (3) The lawful (τὸ νόμιμον) is simply all that the state has enacted for the welfare of its citizens. Therefore, in one sense, 'justice' means fulfilling all the requirements of law. Thus it is nothing else than perfect and consummate virtue. In this general sense justice is different from virtue only in the point of view which one would take in defining it.

I ποία μεσότης] Aristotle proposed the question about the two kinds of justice, 'in what sense are they mean states?' πῶς μεσότητές εἰσν (Εὐλ. 11. vii. 16), which is slightly different from the above. Cf. ch. v. § 17 of this book.

2 ή δὲ σκέψις - προειρημένοις] 'And let our inquiry be according to the same method as what has preceded.' This probably refers to the way in which the moral virtues have been treated in the preceding Book of the Eudemian Ethics. There is nothing distinctive about this method, or different from the procedure of Aristotle. What is most specially alluded to at present must be the fixing of the meaning of terms, which is now resorted to with regard to justice, and which was more or less employed before, Cf. Eth. Eud. III. v. 1-3, where the general method and the style of the writing has great affinity to the present opening. Περί δέ μεγαλοψυχίας έκ των τοῦς μεγαλοψύχοις ἀποδιδομένων δεί διορίσαι τὸ ίδιον (e conj. 4 οὐδὲ γὰρ τὸν αὐτὸν — μόνον] '(And I have specified them thus), for it is not the same with developed states as it is with sciences and faculties. A faculty or a science appears to be the same of contraries, but a contrary state does not include its contraries, as, for instance, from health only healthful things and not the contraries of health are produced.' Tap refers to the mention of both justice and injustice separately, and as opposed to each other. The writer accounts for this by saying that a δύναμις admits of contraries, but a & & s not (see Vol. I. p. 241). The style above is somewhat careless, for we first have ἐπιστήμη

5-6 Though a state does not include its contrary, yet its contrary may be inferred from it; and the state itself may be known by its particular manifestations (ἀπὸ τῶν ὑπο-κεμκένων), just as a bedily condition is known from the symptoms. If the name of a state be used in more senses than one (πλεοναχῶς), it follows usually that the name of its contrary will be used in more senses than one.

ἀπὸ τῶν ὑποκειμένων] As we might say, 'from its facts,' the ὑποκείμενα being the singular instances in which a general notion is manifested. The meaning is, that τὰ δίκαια are to δικαισσύνη as good symptoms are to good health. Τῶν ὑποκειμένων is an instance of the logical formulæ with which the writing of Eudemus abounds.

7 σθαι, οἷον εἰ τὸ δίκαιον, καὶ τὸ ἄδικον. ἔοικε δὲ πλεοναχῶς λέγεσθαι ἡ δικαιοσύνη καὶ ἡ ἀδικία, ἀλλὰ διὰ τὸ

7 FOIKE DE-KNEIOUGIVI 'Now the term "justice" appears to be used in more senses than one, and so does the term injustice, but, because there is a close resemblance between the ambiguous senses, the ambiguity escapes notice, and the case is not the same as with things widely differing, where the ambiguity is comparatively plain (δήλη μᾶλλον). A physical difference appealing to the eye (κατά την ιδέαν) is widest, as, for instance, the word "key" is used ambiguously to denote the clavicular bone of animals, and that with which men lock doors.' While the general upshot of this passage is clear enough, the writing is in itself very indistinct. Hence in translation it has been necessary to use expansion, To say that 'their equivocation escapes notice because it is close' goes beyond the legitimate bounds of compression. Cf. the obscure and probably corrupt passage above cited from Eth. Eud. ΙΙΙ. ν. Ι : ώσπερ γάρ και τὰ ἄλλα κατὰ την γειτνίασιν και δμοιότητα μεχρί τοῦ λανθάνειν πόρρω προϊόντα.

κατὰ τὴν ἰδέαν] This seems to mean 'in external form.' Cf. Eth. I. viii. 16: ὁ τὴν ἰδέαν παναίσχης.

κλείς] There is a pun attributed to Philip of Macedon—cf. Plutarch, Reg. t Imp. Αρορλίλ., Philippi IX.—which, it has been thought, may be here alluded to: τῆς κλειδός αὐτῷ κατεαγείσης ἐν πολέμω καὶ τοῦ θεραπεύοντος ἰατροῦ πάντως τι καθ΄ ἡμέραν αἰτοῦντος, λάμβανε, ἔφη, ὅσα βούλει, τὴν γὰρ κλεῦν ἔχεις.

8-11 The word 'unjust' is used in three different senses to denote the lawless man, the greedy man, and the unfair man. The word 'just' may mean either the lawful man or the fair man. In this statement there is something illogical, for we notice at once that there are only two senses of the word 'just' to match the three senses of 'unjust.' We find in § 10, that unfairness (To arisov) is a generic term, including both greediness (πλεοvekla) and also the collateral notion of selfishly avoiding evil. In short, to divide 'unjust' into lawless. greedy, and unfair, is a cross division. Evidently there are on each side two terms: '(1) justice is divided into lawfulness or universal justice, and (2) fairness about property, or particular justice. Injustice is divided into (1) lawlessness or universal injustice, and (2) unfairness about property, or particular injustice,

9 êmel δê - ayaθá] 'Now, since the unjust man is greedy, he will be concerned with things good, not all, but the "goods of fortune," which abstractedly are always goods, but which are not so always to the individual. (Men pray for these and follow after them, but they ought not to do so; they ought to pray that what are abstractedly goods may be so to them, and they ought to choose the things which are good for them),' The goods of fortune are those which all men desire, though it is not certain that they will prove goods to them. The phrase τὰ ἀπλῶς ἀγαθά is an Eudemian formula. See Vol. I. Essay I. p. 63. The difficulties connected with prayer, arising out of human ignorance, form the subject of Plato's Second Alcibiades. They are also alluded to, Laws, III. p. 687. At the end of Phædrus is given the prayer of Socrates (279 B): *Ω φίλε Παν τε και άλλοι δσοι τήδε θεοί, δοίητέ μοι καλώ γενέσθαι τάνδοθεν . έξωθεν δ' όσα έχω, τοῖς έντὸς εῖναί μοι φίλια. πλούσιον δὲ νομίζοιμι τὸν σοφόν. τὸ δὲ χρυσοῦ πλήθος εἴη μοι ὅσον μήτε φέρειν μήτε ἄγειν δύναιτ' ἄλλος ἡ ὁ σώφρων.

12-15 In one sense all that is lawful is just; the law aiming at the good of all, or of a part, of the citizens, speaks on all subjects, and more or less rightly enjoins the practice of all the virtues. Justice, then, in this sense, may be said to be the practice of entire virtue towards one's neighbour.

13 στοχαζόμενοι ή τοῦ κοινή συμφέροντος κ.τ.λ.] Cf. Ar. Pol. III. vii. 5: ή μὲν γὰρ τυραννίε ἐστι μοναρχία πρὸς τὸ συμφέρον τὸ τοῦ μοναρχοῦντος, ἡ δὶ διιγαρχία πρὸς τὸ τῶν εὐπόρων, ἡ δὲ δημοκρατία πρὸς τὸ συμφέρον τὸ τῶν ἀπόρων. The term νομοθετική (§ 12) occurs again in the Eudemian book, Eth. vi. viii. 2. The view given here of law, which is expressed still more strongly below, ch. xi. § 1, is quite different from modern views. Law is here represented as a positive system κατ' ἀρετὴν ἢ κατ' ἄλλον τινὰ τρόπον τοιοῦτον ὅστε ἔνα μὲν τρόπον δίκαια λέγομεν τὰ ποιητικὰ καὶ ψυλακτικὰ τῆς εἰδαιμονίας καὶ τῶν μορίων αὐτῆς τῆ πολιτικῆ κοινωνία.

14 προστάττει δ' ὁ νόμος καὶ τὰ τοῦ ἀνδρείου ἔργα ποιεῖν, οἶον μὴ λείπειν τὴν τάξιν μηδὲ φείγειν μηδὲ ρίπτειν τὰ ὅπλα, καὶ τὰ τοῦ σώφρονος, οἶον μὴ μοιχεύειν μηδ ὑβρίζειν, καὶ τὰ τοῦ πράου, οἶον μὴ τύπτειν μηδὲ κακηγορεῖν, ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ κατὰ τὰς ἄλλας ἀρετὰς καὶ μοχθηρίας τὰ μὲν κελεύων τὰ δ' ἀπαγορεύων, ὀρθῶς μὲν ὁ κείμενος ὀρθῶς, 15 χείρον δ' ὁ ἀπεσχεδιασμένος. αὕτη μὲν οὖν ἡ δικαιοσύνη ἀρετὴ μέν ἐστι τελεία, ἀλλ' οὐχ ἀπλῶς ἀλλὰ πρὸς ἕτερον. καὶ διὰ τοῦτο πολλάκις κρατίστη τῶν ἀρετῶν εἶναι δοκεῖ ἡ

(though the instances quoted of its formulæ are all negative, μη λείπειν την τάξιν, &c.), aiming at the regulation of the whole of life, sometimes, however, with a bias of class-interests, and sometimes only roughly executed (ἀπεσχεδιασμένος). This educational and dogmatic character of the law was really exemplified to the greatest extent in the Spartan institutions. Athens rather prided herself (according to the wise remarks which Thucydides puts into the mouth of Pericles) on leaving greater liberty to the individual. But Plato and Aristotle both made the mistake of wishing for an entire state-control over individual life.

14 τὰ τοῦ ἀνδρείον] Cf. Eth. III. viii. 1-2. Enactments of the kind here mentioned form part of the system given in Plato's Laws, pp. 943-4. Modern statutes of military discipline against desertion, &c., furnish an exact parallel to these ancient laws, if we only consider that in the Greek cities the whole state was more or less regarded as an army.

15 αὔτη μὲν οὖν — ἔτερον] 'Now this justice is complete virtue, not absolutely, however, but in relation to one's neighbour.' There is a careless transition here from τὰ νόμιμα and τὰ δίκαια to ἡ δικαιοσύνη. Correct writing would have required ἡ κατὰ ταῦτα δικαιοσύνη or a similar phrase. Generally speaking, this first part of the Book is about τὰ δίκαια as distinguished from ἡ δικαιοσύνη (see Plan of Book V.)

15-20 Hence justice is often thought the best of the virtues, brighter than the evening or the morning star, the sum of all other excellence. It is the use of virtue, and not in relation to oneself alone, but also towards others. Hence it has been defined 'others' profit,' As he is the worst man who is bad both to himself and others, so he is the best who is good to himself and to others. This kind of justice is not a part of virtue, but the whole; it can only be distinguished from virtue when you come to define it, and discover that you must take a different point of view for each,

πας δέ τ' άνηρ άγαθός, Κύρνε δίκαιος έών.

It is, however, also attributed to Phocylides, and may have been the common property of many early moralists.

πρὸς ἔτερον] Fritzsche quotes Eurip. Heracl. 2:

ὁ μὲν δίκαιος τοις πέλας πέφυκ' ἀνήρ.
 ὁ δ' εἰς τὸ κέρδος λῆμ' ἔχων ἀνειμένον,
 πόλει τ' ἄχρηστος καὶ συναλλάσσειν βαρός,

ή πάσας άναγκαῖον άκολουθεῖν τὰς ἄλλας,

16 ἀρχὴ ἄνδρα] The same sentiment is expressed by Sophocles, Antig. 175 sq.

17 ἀλλότριον ἀγαθόν] Repeated below, ch. vi. § 6. Cf. Plato's Repub. I. p. 343 C: ἀγνοεῖς ὅτι ἡ μἐν δικαιοσύνη καὶ τὸ δικαιον ἀλλότριον ἀγαθόν τῷ ὅντι, τοῦ κρείττονός τε καὶ ἀρχοντος συμφέρον, οἰκεἰα δὲ τοῦ πειθομένου τε καὶ ὑπηρετοῦντος βλάβη (see Vol. I. Essay II. p. 150). The sophistical and sneering definition of justice is here repeated without comment, being accepted as a testimony to the unselfish character of justice.

20 τί δὲ διαφέρει—ἀρετή] 'But what the difference is between virtue and this kind of justice is clear from what we have said already. They are the same, only conceived diffeέστι μèν γὰρ ή αὐτή, τὸ δ' είναι οὐ τὸ αὐτό, ἀλλ' ἢ μèν πρὸς ἔτερον, δικαιοσύνη, ἢ δὲ τοιάδε ἔξις ἀπλῶς, ἀρετή.

τὸ δ' είναι οὐ τὸ αὐτό] This logical formula occurs again Eth. vi. viii. I, where it is said that wisdom and politics are the same state of mind, only their essence is differently conceived (τὸ μέντοι είναι οὐ ταύτὸν αὐταῖς). On the force of εἶναι, see Eth. II. vi. 17, note. In both of these Eudemian passages, where it is said of two things that 'they are the same, only their elras is different,' we must understand that the results are the same, but the essential nature, the causes, and what the Germans would call the Grund-begriff, or fundamental conception, are different, Thus the first idea about justice (in the widest sense) is, that it is a relation to others. The first idea about virtue is, that it is a regulation of the mind. There is a slightly different application of the formula, Arist. De Anima, III. ii. 4: ή δὲ τοῦ αἰσθητοῦ ένέργεια καί της αίσθήσεως ή αὐτή μέν έστι και μία, τὸ δὲ είναι οὐ ταὐτὸν αὐταῖς. 'Now the present existence of an object is identical with and inseparable from the present existence of the sensation of it, but yet in conception these differ from each other fundamentally.' Here we have two distinct sides or 'moments' represented as, though logically distinct, vet inseparable.

Plato in discussing justice had first to clear the subject of sophistical notions, and to prove that justice did not depend alone upon human institutions, but far more on the nature of the human soul. Thus he concluded by defining it to be a just balance in the mind itself. The Peripatetic starting-point is different. It is assumed that justice proceeds from the development of man's nature as a 'political creature.' Also it is assumed that in political institutions there is something which is absolute and not merely conventional (Eth. v. vii, 1-5). Then the only question is, what are the exact limits of justice itself? To which the answer is, that we may either regard it in the broadest sense as including the whole of right dealing with others, or, more restrictedly, as right dealing in respect of property and advantages of all kinds.

II. This chapter consists of three parts. (1) It brings arguments to prove the existence of a particular kind of injustice, relating chiefly to property, from which the existence of a particular kind of justice might also be inferred, §§ 1-6. (2) It sets aside universal justice as not being the object of discussion to the present book, §§ 7-II. (3) It divides particular justice into two kinds, distributive and corrective, §§ 12-I3.

1-6 The arguments brought to prove the existence of a particular kind of injustice reduce themselves apparently to an appeal to language.

 We speak of the coward as 'doing wrongly' (ἀδικεῦν); also we speak of the man who takes more than his share as 'doing wrongly;' μοχθηρίας ο ένεργων αδικεί μέν, πλεονεκτεί δ' οὐδέν, οἷον ο ρίλας την ασπίδα δια δειλίαν ή κακώς είπων δια χαλεπότητα ή ου βοηθήσας χρήμασι δι' ανελευθερίαν όταν δέ πλεονεκτή, πολλάκις κατ' οὐδεμίαν των τοιούτων, άλλά μην οὐδε κατά πάσας, κατά πονηρίαν δε γε τινά (ψεγομεν γάρ) καὶ κατ' αδικίαν. ἔστιν ἄρα γε ἄλλη τις αδικία 3 ώς μέρος της όλης, και άδικόν τι έν μέρει του όλου αδίκου τοῦ παρά τὸν νόμον. ἔτι εἰ ὁ μέν τοῦ κερδαίνειν ἔνεκα 4 μοιχεύει καὶ προσλαμβάνων, ὁ δὲ προστιθεὶς καὶ ζημιούμενος δι' επιθυμίαν, ούτος μεν ακόλαστος δόξειεν αν είναι μάλλον ή πλεονέκτης, εκείνος δ' άδικος, ακόλαστος δ' ού. δήλον άρα ότι διὰ τὸ κερδαίνειν. ἔτι περὶ μὲν τάλλα 5 πάντα άδικήματα γίνεται ή έπαναφορά έπί τινα μοχθηρίαν αεί, οίον εὶ εμοίχευσεν, επ' ακολασίαν, εὶ εγκατέλιπε τον παραστάτην, έπὶ δειλίαν, εὶ ἐπάταξεν, ἐπ' ὁργήν εὶ δ' εκέρδανεν, έπ' οὐδεμίαν μοχθηρίαν άλλ' η έπ' άδικίαν.

(2) A crime committed for the sake of gain is called a 'wrong' distinctively, rather than by the name it would have had, were this motive of gain not present.

(3) While all other wrongs (ἀδικήματα) are referred each to some evil principle, such as cowardice, intemperance, and the like; acts of unjust gain are referred to no other principle except 'injustice,' which accordingly must be used in a special sense and denote a special vice in the mind.

The statement of the first of these arguments in the text is extremely confused. It is put in such a way that it would as well prove any other vice as \( \pi \) Arce\( \xi \) at to be particular injustice. Suppose we substituted 'idleness' in the text for 'grasping;' it would then be true to say, 'When a man is idle, he often errs in none of the other vices, certainly not in all, but yet he acts with a certain faultiness (for we blame him) and wrongly (κατ' άδικίαν). Hence there is a kind of wrong separate from universal injustice, '&c. However, this is only a matter of statement; there is no doubt that άδικία with regard to property means something special, and different from άδικία in the sense of wrong-doing in general. In English 'injustice' is not used to mean vice generally; though its opposite 'just' is occasionally used in the translation of the Bible as equivalent to 'righteous,' and in a sense answering pretty nearly to that of νόμιμος.

4 êτι el δ μὲν-κερδαίνεν] Again if one man commits an adultery for the sake of gain, making a profit by it, and another man does the same for lust, lavishing money (προστιθείς) and incurring loss; the latter would rather be deemed intemperate than covetous, the former would be called unjust, but not intemperate; evidently because of his gaining by it.' Fritzsche (upon i. 14) quotes Aceschines Socraticus, II. 14; δοκεί δ' dν σω άνθρωποτ εί μοιχεύει τὸς τῶν πέλαις

6 ἄστε—σπουδαῖοτ] 'So that it is plain that there is a particular kind of injustice distinct from the universal kind, having the same name by reason of a kindred nature (συώσυμοτ), because its definition falls under the same genus. For both have their whole force consisting in a relation to others, but the one is concerned with honour, property, or safety (or by whatever one name one might sum up all such things), and is prompted by the pleasure of gain, but the other has to do with the whole sphere of virtue.'

συνώνυμος] What logic calls 'analogona' We before had the word όμωνυμία to denote 'equivocation' (c. i. § 7), see Eth. I. vi. 12, and note; and cf. Ar. Categor. i. 3: Συνώνυμα δέ λέγεται ών τό τε βνομα κοινόν και δ κατά τοϋνομα λόγος της οὐσίας ὁ αὐτός. 9 έπει δέ -δικαιοσύνης But as (έπεl) 'unequal' and 'more' are not the same, but stand related to each other as part to whole (for 'more' is a species of 'unequal'), so (kal) the unjust principle and habit belonging respectively to the two kinds we have mentioned are not the same but different, this from that, the one being as part, the other as whole. For this injustice (about property) is a part of universal injustice, and the correspondent justice is a part of universal justice.' The only way to give any meaning to this indistinct passage is to consider what is said about 'more' and 'unequal' to have nothing to do with πλεονεξία, but simply to be an illustration of a part included by a whole. Particular justice includes all the generic qualities of universal justice, την δλην ἀρετην τεταγμένη δικαιοσύνη καὶ ἀδικία, ή μὲν τῆς ὅλης ἀρετης οὖσα χρησις πρὸς ἄλλον, ή δὲ τῆς κακίας, ἀφείσθω. καὶ τὸ δίκαιον δὲ καὶ τὸ ἄδικον τὸ κατὰ ταύτας φανερὸν ὡς διοριστέον· σχεδὸν γὰρ τὰ πολλὰ τῶν νομίμων τὰ ἀπὸ τῆς ὅλης ἀρετης πραττόμενά ἐστιν· καθ ἐκάστην γὰρ ἀρετην προστάττει ζῆν καὶ καθ' ἐκάστην μοχθηρίαν κωλύει ὁ νόμος. τὰ δὲ ποιητικὰ τῆς ὅλης 11 ἀρετης ἐστὶ τῶν νομίμων ὅσα νενομοθέτηται περὶ παιδείαν τὴν πρὸς τὸ κοινόν. περὶ δὲ τῆς καθ' ἔκαστον παιδείας, καθ' ῆν ἀπλῶς ἀνηρ ἀγαθός ἐστι, πότερον τῆς πολιτικῆς ἐστὶν ἡ ἐτέρας, ὕστερον διοριστέον· οὐ γὰρ ἴσως ταὐτὸν ἀνδρὶ τ' ἀγαθῷ εἶναι καὶ πολίτη παντί. τῆς δὲ κατὰ 12 μέρος δικαιοσύνης καὶ τοῦ κατ' αὐτὴν δικαίου ἐν μέν ἐστιν

no less than as a particular virtue it includes all the generic qualities of universal virtue. Some MSS. read  $i\pi\epsilon l$   $\delta i$   $\tau \delta$   $i\pi cor \kappa al$   $\tau \delta$   $\pi a \rho d \omega \rho \omega \rho$ , from not understanding the force of the illustration applied in  $i\pi\epsilon l$ . It is no wonder that confusion should have been caused when the writer was at so little pains to avoid it.

10-11 We may set aside justice in the wider sense as being identical with the exercise of virtue, and also the principle on which it depends (και τὸ δίκαιον δὲ), this being simply the inculcation of virtue by the state. (The question as to whether private education is the same as public, whether the good man is the same as the good citizen, may be discussed hereafter.)—This seems to be the train of thought, the whole of § 11 being parenthetical. σχεδόν γάρ τὰ πολλὰ κ.τ.λ. is a mere repetition of ch. i. § 14.

τὰ δὲ ποιητικά—παιτί] 'Now the enactments productive of entire virtue are those which have been made with regard to education for public life. With regard to individual education, according to which one is not a good citizen, but simply a good man, we must afterwards determine whether it belongs to politics or some other province. For perhaps the idea of the good man is not the same as that of the citizen in every case.'

υστερον διοριστέον] This is an unfulfilled promise in the Eudemian Ethics as they stand. The question here started seems to have arisen out of the discussions in Politics III. iv. and III. xviii., as to whether the virtue of the man and the citizen is the same, which, on the whole, Aristotle would answer in the affirmative; and he also lays it down decisively that all education should be public, i.e. under the control of government and reduced to a common standard. Aristotle's treatise on education was however unfinished, the eighth book of the Politics being a fragment. Eudemus would seem to have wished to take up the question where Aristotle left it. and-with the view of giving a separate existence to Morals as a scienceto ask whether there is not a kind of education, not falling within the province of Politics, which aims at producing the virtues of the individual man, as distinct from those of the citizen. But the Eudemian Ethics είδος τὸ ἐν ταῖς διανομαῖς τιμῆς ἢ χρημάτων ἢ τῶν ἄλλων ὅσα μεριστὰ τοῖς κοινωνοῦσι τῆς πολιτείας (ἐν τούτοις γὰρ ἔστι καὶ ἄνισον ἔχειν καὶ ἴσον ἕτερον ἐτέρου), ἐν δὲ τὸ

12-13 Particular justice is now divided into distributive and corrective justice. For all details connected with these two forms, see the following chapters. It is here said that 'voluntary transactions' (τὰ ἐκούσια συναλλάγματα), 'such as buying, selling, lending, pledging, using, depositing, and hiring,' come under the head of corrective justice, as well as 'involuntary transactions.' By this must be meant that the rectification of acts of injustice committed under these various heads falls to be made by corrective justice. Buying and selling, as we learn from ch. v., are, or ought to be, arranged on the principle of geometric proportions, and thus resemble cases of distributive justice, It is only where cheating or mistake has occurred, that buying and selling would be brought under corrective justice.

III. This chapter, without formally announcing its subject, treats of distributive justice. The main points with regard to it are as fol-Justice implies equality, and not only that two things are equal, but also two persons between whom there may be justice. Thus it is a geometrical proportion in four terms; if A and B be persons, C and D lots to be divided, then as A is to B, so must C be to D. And a just distribution will produce the result that A + C will be to B + D in the same ratio as A was to B originally. In other words, distributive justice consists in the distribution of property, honours, &c., in the state, according to the merits of each citizen.

With regard to this principle, though the text is not explicit, yet it appears to be (1) really applicable in all cases of awards made by the state, (2) ideally to be capable of a wider application as a regulative principle for the distribution of property and all the distributions of society. As to the history of the doctrine, we find it shadowed out by Plato in the great idea of a harmony and proportion ruling in the world; cf. Gorgias, p. 507 E; paol 8' oi σοφοί, ῶ Καλλίκλεις, καὶ οὐρανὸν καὶ γῶν καὶ θεούς και άνθρώπους την κοινωνίαν συνέχειν και φιλίαν και κοσμιότητα καί σωφροσύνην και δικαιότητα, και τὸ δλον τοῦτο διὰ ταῦτα κόσμον καλοῦσιν, ω έταιρε, ούκ άκοσμίαν, ούδε άκολασίαν. σύ δέ μοι δοκείς ού προσέχειν τὸν νοῦν τούτοις, και ταῦτα σοφὸς ών, άλλά λέληθέ σε ότι ή Ισότης ή γεωμετρική και έν θεοίς και έν άνθρώποις μέγα δύναται σύ δέ πλεονεξίαν οίει δείν άσκείν γεωμετρίας γάρ άμελείς. There is a still nearer approach to the present doctrine in Laws, p. 757 B, where it is said that there are two kinds of equality; one is a mere equality of number and measure, the other is the 'award of Zeus,' the equality of proportion. Την δέ άληθεστάτην και άριστην Ισότητα οὐκέτι βάδιον παντί ίδειν. Διὸς γάρ δη κρίσις έστί και τοις άνθρώποις άει σμικοά μέν έπαρκεί · πάν δέ δσον αν έπαρκέση πόλεσιν ή και ιδιώταις, πάντ' άγαθὰ άπεργάζεται. τῷ μέν γὰρ μείζονι πλείω, τῷ δέ ἐλάττονι σμικρότερα νέμει, μέτρια διδούσα πρὸς τὴν αὐτῶν φύσιν έκατέρω · και δή και τιμάς melfoor mer mods apertur del melfors. τοις δε τούναντίον έχουσιν άρετης τε καί παιδείας τὸ πρέπον έκατέροις άπονέμει κατά λόγον.

It is remarkable that the terms 'distributive and corrective justice' are not found in the Politics of Aristotle, though this distinction and the various points connected with it in reality belong much more to political than to ethical science. However, though the name of distributive justice does not occur, yet the idea of it is fully developed in Politics, III. c. ix.-a passage from which it is not improbable that the present chapter may be partly taken, though an interpolated reference (καθάπερ είρηται πρότερον έν τοις ήθικοις) gives the passage in the Politics a fallacious appearance of having been written later, and of having accepted conclusions from the present book. Far rather it is likely that the conception of 'distributive justice,' having been received as a conception from Plato, and farther worked out by Aristotle in his Politics, only became stereotyped into a phrase in the after-growth of his system, at the end of his own life, or in the exposition of his views made by Eudemus. It is in speaking of the 'oligarchical and democratical principles of justice' that Aristotle says: (§ 1) # deres yap άπτονται δικαίου τινός άλλα μέχρι τινός προέρχονται, και λέγουσιν οὐ πᾶν τὸ κυρίως δίκαιου. Οξον δοκεῖ ίσον τὸ δίκαιον είναι, καὶ ἔστιν, άλλ' οὐ πᾶσιν άλλά τοις ίσοις. και τὸ άνισον δοκεί δίκαιον είναι, και γάρ έστιν, άλλ' ού πασιν, άλλα τοις ανίσοις. οι δὲ τοῦτ' άφαιροθσι, τὸ οίς, και κρίνουσι κακώς. τὸ δ' αίτιον ὅτι περὶ αὐτῶν ἡ κρίσις. σχεδον δ' οἱ πλεῖστοι φαῦλοι κριταὶ περὶ των οίκείων. "Ωστ' έπει το δίκαιον τισίν, και διήρηται τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον έπί τε των πραγμάτων καί ols, † καθάπερ είρηται πρότερον έν τοῦς ἡθικοῦς, την μέν του πράγματος Ισότητα όμολογούσι, την δέ οίς άμφισβητούσι. The conclusion is (Pol. III. ix, 15) that they who contribute most to the joint-stock of virtue and good deeds in the state are entitled to a larger share in the control of affairs than those who base their claims upon any other kind of superiority.

I-4 These sections are full of

μέσον, τὸ δίκαιον μέσον τι αν είη. ἔστι δὲ τὸ ἴσον ἐν έλαχίστοις δυσίν· ανάγκη τοίνυν τὸ δίκαιον μέσον τε καὶ ίσον είναι [καὶ πρός τι] καὶ τισίν, καὶ ἢ μὲν μέσον, τινῶν (τώντα δ' έστὶ πλείον καὶ έλαττον), η δ' ίσον έστι, δυοίν, 5 ή δε δίκαιον, τισίν. ανάγκη άρα το δίκαιον εν ελαχίστοις είναι τέτταρσιν οίς τε γάρ δίκαιον τυγχάνει ον, δύο έστί, 6 καὶ ἐν οἶς τὰ πράγματα, δύο. καὶ ἡ αὐτὴ ἔσται ἰσότης, οίς καὶ ἐν οίς ὡς γὰρ ἐκείνα ἔχει τὰ ἐν οίς, οὕτω κὰκείνα έχει εί γὰρ μη ἴσοι, οὐκ ἴσα έξουσιν, ἀλλ' ἐντεῦθεν αί μάχαι καὶ τὰ ἐγκλήματα, ὅταν ἡ ἴσοι μὴ ἴσα ἡ μὴ 7 ἴσοι ἴσα ἔχωσι καὶ νέμωνται. ἔτι ἐκ τοῦ κατ' ἀξίαν τούτο δήλον το γαρ δίκαιον έν ταίς διανομαίς όμολογοῦσι πάντες κατ' ἀξίαν τινὰ δεῖν εἶναι, τὴν μέντοι ἀξίαν οὐ τὴν αὐτὴν λέγουσι πάντες ὑπάρχειν, ἀλλ' οἱ μὲν δημοκρατικοί έλευθερίαν, οί δ' ολιγαρχικοί πλούτον, οί δ' 8 εὐγένειαν, οἱ δ' ἀριστοκρατικοὶ ἀρετήν. ἔστιν ἄρα τὸ δίκαιον ἀνάλογόν τι. τὸ γὰρ ἀνάλογον οὐ μόνον ἐστὶ confused writing. It is said 'since the unjust is unequal, there must be a mean, which is equal; justice must be equal; the equal is a mean, therefore justice must be a mean. As being equal justice implies two terms, as being a mean two extremes, as being just two persons, therefore it must be in four terms, &c.' The general meaning is clear, but the statement, especially in § 4, is very faulty. A confusion is made by the introduction of the idea of uégov with regard to justice, which at the present part of the argument was not required. 6 εί γὰρ μη ίσοι, κ.τ.λ.] Cf. Ar.

7 ετι εκ τοῦ-ἀρετήρ] 'Again this is clear from the principle of equality according to standard; for all agree that justice in distributions must be according to standard, but men are not unanimous in declaring the same standard. While the democrats declare freedom, those who are for an oligarchy declare wealth or birth, and those who are for an aristocracy (in the highest sense) declare virtue.' This is apparently taken from the saying in Aristotle's Pol. III. ix. 4: Οὶ μέν γὰρ ᾶν κατά τι ἄνισοι ὢσιν, οδον χρήμασιν, όλως οίονται άνισοι είναι, οί δ' αν κατά τι ίσοι, οδον έλευθερία, δλως loos. Cf. 1b. III. ix. 15. 'Freedom' here of course means being above the condition of a slave. To make this the ground for political claims would be analogous, from A.'s point of view, to instituting manhood suffrage. For a slave is less than man; cf. 1b. § 6, where it is said that slaves and the lower animals could not constitute a state διὰ τὸ μὴ μετέχειν εὐδαιμονίας μηδέ του ζην κατά προαίρεσιν.

8-14 ἐστιν ἀρα—ἀγαθοῦ] 'The just then is something proportionate. The proportionate is not restricted to pure number alone, but applies to everything that admits the idea of number. Proportion is an equality of ratios, and implies four terms at the least. Now it is plain that "discrete proportion" is in four terms; but so also is "continuous proportion," for it uses the one of its terms as two, and names it twice over, thus, -as a is to b, so is b to c. b then is twice named, and if it be set down twice over, the proportionate terms will be four. But justice also implies four terms at least, and an equality of ratios: for the two persons and the two things are divided in similar proportion. (The formula) then will be, "as the term a is to b, so is c to d;" and alternando, "as a is to c, so is b to d," and so too the whole to the whole, which the distribution couples, and if the terms be thus united, it couples them justly. The joining therefore of a to c and of b to d in distribution is just, and this justice is a mean between violations of proportion. For proportion is a mean, and the just is proportionate. Mathematicians call this kind of proportion geometrical, for in geometrical proportion the whole is to the whole as each separate term is to each. This proportion is not "continuous" for it has no one term standing in a double relationship. Well, then, the just is that which is thus proportionate, and the unjust is a violation of proportion, which takes place either on the side of more or less. And this is actually the case, for he that does an injury has more than his share, while he that is injured has less than his share of what is good.' This passage gives a formula for distributive justice in mathematical language, which comes in short to this, that in all awards of the state, the result should be proportionate to the separate worth of the citizens.

8 μοναδικοῦ ἀριθμοῦ] 'Number expressed in ciphers,' 'abstract number,' in German, unbenannte Zahl. Fritzsche refers to Euclid El. VII. def. 1. The terms introduced in this chapter seem to be neither lines, nor numbers, but algebraic quantities,

15-16 A repetition of ch. i. § 10.

IV. This chapter is on corrective justice, which is said to apply to the transactions between men whether voluntary or involuntary. Corrective justice goes on a principle, not of geometrical, but of arithmetical preportion; in other words, it takes no account of persons, but treats the cases with which it is concerned as cases of unjust loss and gain, which have to be reduced to the middle point of equality between the parties. Justice is a mean, and the judge a sort of impersonation of justice, a mediator, or equal divider. The operation of justice, bringing plaintiff and defendant to an equality, may be illustrated by the equalising of two unequal lines. The names, 'loss' and 'gain,' are, however, often a mere metaphor borrowed from commerce.

The term 'corrective justice' (τὸ διορθωτικόν, or, as it is afterwards called, § 6, τὸ ἐπανορθωτικόν δίκαιον) is itself an unfortunate name, because it appears only to lay down principles for restitution, and therefore implies wrong. Thus it has a tendency to confine the view to 'involuntary transactions,' instead of stating what must be the principle of the just in all the dealings between man and man. In the present chapter, it is remarkable that although we are told at first that 'voluntary transactions' belong to corrective justice, yet all that is said applies only to the 'involuntary transactions;' and at last we are told that the terms used are 'a metaphor from voluntary transactions'-as if these were something quite distinct. It may be said, however, that bargains, and voluntary dealings in general, have no respect of persons (κατά τὴν άριθμητ, άναλ.), and thus have something in common with civil and criminal law. Bacon, in the Advancement of Learning, Book II., refers to the two heads of Justice here given, under the names 'commutative and distributive.'

I τὸ δὲ λοιπὸν ἐν] This excludes all possibility of the writer having conceived another kind of justice, to be called 'catallactic' or some such name, as it has been sometimes fancied. Τὸ διωρθωτικὸν δικ. implies not merely 'regulative,' but strictly 'remedial' justice; διδρθωμα is used to signify a remedy in Arist, Pol. III. xiii. 23, where it is said of ostracism, βέλτιον μέν οθν τὰν νομοθέτην ἐξ ἀρχής οθτω συστήσαι την πολιτείαν ώστε μη δείσθαι τοιαύτης Ιατρείας · δεύτερος δὲ πλοῦς, ἀν συμβή, πειρασθαι τοιούτω τινί διορθώματι διορθούν.

2 τὸ μέν γάρ-είσενεχθέντα] 'For distributive justice deals always with the goods of the state according to the proportion we have described; for if the distribution be of common goods, it will be according to the proportion which the different contributions bear to one another.' Τὰ εἰσενεχθέντα is thus explained by the Paraphrast, άναλόγως έκάστω δίδωσι κατά την άξιαν έκάστου και την εισφοράν, ην είς τὸ κοινόν συνετέλεσεν έπει οὐ πάντες δμοιοι, οὐδὲ πάντες όμοίως εἰσφέρουσιν. Possibly the remark in the text was taken from Aristotle, Pol. III. ix. 15: διόπερ δσοι συμβάλλονται πλείστον els την τοιαύτην κοινωνίαν, τούτοις της πόλεως μέτεστι πλείον.

3 κατά την ἀριθμητικήν] This term occurs Eth. II. vi. 7. 'Arithmetical proportion' denotes a middle term or point of equality, equidistant from two extreme terms; thus, 6 is the mean, according to arithmetical proportion, between 4 and 8. In Eth. Π. (l.c.) it is called μέσον τοῦ πράγuaros, which implies that it has no respect of persons. So corrective justice is here said to regard each case impersonally as an affair of loss and gain, and between these it strikes the middle point. It is the moral worth of persons that is ignored (el έπιεικής φαθλον κ.τ.λ.), for we find afterwards, ch. v. §§ 3-4, that a consideration of the position and circumstances of persons does come in to modify the estimate of the loss sustained from an indignity, &c.

9 διὰ τοῦτο—διχαστής] 'Hence, too, justice gets its name, because it is a dividing in twain (δίχα), as though it were written not δίκαιον, but δίχαιον, and the judge is one who divides in twain.' This etymology, though ingenious, is false. The earlier notion connected with bign seems not to have been one of decision, arbitration, or justice, but rather of 'showing,' 'instruction, 'rule,' 'manner.' The word is derived from a root our., which appears in δείκνυμι, and the Latin indico, index, judex (the law-shower), &c, Plato, in the Cratylus, p. 412 D. gives a sportive etymology of δίκαιον, in accordance with the spirit of the work. Justice is there said to be the 'permeating,' 70 old low, with a κ added for euphony. 'Επεὶ ἐπιτροπεύει τὰ ἄλλα πάντα διαϊόν, τοῦτο τὸ δνομα έκλήθη δρθώς δίκαιον, εύστομίας ένεκα την τοῦ κ δύναμιν προσλαβόν.

10-12 έπαν γάρ-ΓΔ] 'For, of two equal lines, if a part be taken from the one and added to the other, that other will exceed the first by twice this part; for if it had been subtracted only from the one and not added to the other, that other would have exceeded the first by only once this part. Therefore the line which is added to exceeds the mean by once the part added, and the mean exceeds the line subtracted from by once the part added. By this we learn what we must take from the term which has more, and what we must add to that which has less. We must add to that which has less the amount by which the mean exceeds it, and we must take from the largest term the amount by which the mean is exceeded. Let AA, BB, and CC be equal to one another; from AA take AE, and add CD to CC; then the whole DCC exceeds EA by CD and CZ; and therefore it exceeds BB by CD.' The figure required is as follows:

τέστι δέ-τοιοῦτον] This clause exists in all the MSS. The Paraphrast explains it here to signify that the same principles of corrective justice are applicable to the arts and commerce, &c. But when the clause is repeated with a different context in the next chapter, the Paraphrast, no doubt feeling a difficulty about the repetition, does not again touch it. In its present position the clause has no meaning, in the next chapter it is an important remark. All we can say about its appearance here is that it is an evidence of the same sort of unskilful interpolation which shows itself in chapter xi., and also in sundry other parts of Books v., vi., and VII.

13-14 έλήλυθε δέ-βστερον] 'Now these names, "loss and gain," have

έαυτοῦ κερδαίνειν λέγεται, τὸ δ' ἔλαττον τῶν ἐξ ἀρχῆς ζημιοῦσθαι, οἶον ἐν τῷ ἀνεῖσθαι καὶ πωλεῖν καὶ ἐν ὅσοις 14 ἄλλοις ἄδειαν ἔδωκεν ὁ νόμος. ὅταν δὲ μήτε πλέον μήτ' ἔλαττον ἀλλ' αὐτὰ δι' αὐτῶν γένηται, τὰ αὐτῶν φασὶν ἔχειν καὶ οὕτε ζημιοῦσθαι οὕτε κερδαίνειν: ὤστε κέρδους τινὸς καὶ ζημίας μέσον τὸ δίκαιόν ἐστι τῶν παρὰ τὸ ἐκούσιον, τὸ ἄσον ἔχειν καὶ πρότερον καὶ ὕστερον.

come from voluntary exchange. For having more than one's own is called "gaining," and having less than at the commencement is called "losing," as, for instance, in buying and selling, and all the other things in which the law gives one immunity. But when the things are neither more nor less, but on a level (airà δι' airūn), then men say they have their own, and neither lose nor gain. Thus justice is a mean between a sort of gain and loss in involuntary things; it is the having the same afterwards as before.'

ἐν ὅσοις ἄδειαν] In commerce of all kinds, the law allows one to gain as much as one can. In involuntary transactions, the law allows no gain to be made, but brings things always back to their level. This non-interference of the law with bargains becomes, if carried out, the principle of free-trade.

άλλ' αὐτὰ δι' αὐτῶν γένηται] This has puzzled the commentators. Felicianus interprets it 'sed sua cuique per se ipsa evaserint;' Argyropulus, 'sed sua per se ipsa sunt facta;' Lambinus, 'sed paria paribus respondent.' What the phrase must mean is plain, whether grammatically it can mean this is another question. It must mean 'neither more, nor less, but equal to itself.' Perhaps it may be construed 'but result in being themselves by means of reciprocity,' i.e. by mutual giving and taking, ἐαυτῶν being equivalent to ἀλλήλων.

V. This chapter, commencing with a critical notice of the Pythagorean definition of justice, that 'justice is retaliation,' shows it to be inadequate, and then goes off into an interesting discussion upon the law of retaliation as it exists in the state. Proportionate retaliation, or an interchange of services, is said to be the bond of society. The law of proportion regulates exchange, and settles the value of the most diverse products. Money measures and expresses value, and turns mere barter into commerce. The chapter concludes with some general remarks on the relation of justice as a quality to the just as a principle.

I δοκεῖ δὲ— ἀλλφ] 'Now some think that retaliation without further qualifying (ἀπλῶs) is justice, as the Pythagoreans said, for they defined justice simply as retaliation on one's neighbour.' On the rude and inadequate attempts at definition made by the Pythagoreans, cf. Ar. Metaph. I. v. 16: ὑρίζωντό τε γὰρ ἐπιπολαίως, καὶ ῷ πρῶτῷ ὑπάρξειεν ὁ λεχθείς δρος, τοῦτ' εἶναι τὴν οὐσίαν τοῦ πράγματος ἐνόμιζον, ὥσπερ εἴ τις οἴοιτο ταὐτὸν είναι διπλάσιον καὶ τὴν δυάδα, διότι πρῶτον ὑπάρχει τοῦς δυσὶ τὸ διπλάσιον. Their inadequate account of justice was doubtless owing not only to an imperfect logical method, but also to the immature political and social ideas of the day. Demosthenes mentions a law of retaliation given by Zaleucus to the Locrians (Timoer. p. 744): ὅντος γὰρ αὐτόθι νόμου, ἐἀν τις ὀφθαλμὸν ἐκκόψη, ἀντεκκόψαι παρασχεῖν τὸν ἐαυτοῦ. In the Mosaic code the same rude principle appears, Exod. xxi. 24, Levit. xxiv. 20, Deuteron. xii. 21.

2 It is obvious that simple retaliation cannot be the principle of distributive justice; the state does not win battles for its generals, &c. Nor is it that of corrective justice: (1) because the same treatment is different to different individuals; (2) because an involuntary harm must not be requited like a voluntary one.

3 τὸ 'Pαδαμάνθυσς] Necessarily a primitive idea of justice.

note. Rank is here looked at as a kind of property. It is not a question of individual goodness or badness, but an officer being struck loses more than a common soldier being struck in return, so that retaliation is in that case not justice.

6 άλλ' έν μέν-συμμένουσιν] 'But in commercial intercourse, at all events, this kind of justice, namely, retaliation, is the bond of union-on principles, not of equality, but proportion, for by proportionate requital the state is held together. Men seek to requite either evil or good; to omit the one were slavery, to omit the second were to fail in that mutual interchange by which men are held together.' On mutual need as the basis for civil society, cf. Plato, Repub. p. 369 B: ylyverai rolvuv πόλις, ἐπειδή τυγχάνει ἡμῶν ἔκαστος ούκ αὐτάρκης, άλλὰ πολλών ἐνδεής. A recognition of this principle might be called the first dawning of political economy; from it several deductions are made in the text above as to the nature of value, price, and money. These, though rudimentary, are able 7 συμμένουσιν. διὸ καὶ Χαρίτων ἱερὸν ἐμποδὼν ποιοῦνται, τι' ἀνταπόδοσις ἢ τοῦτο γὰρ ἴδιον χάριτος · ἀνθυπηρετησαί τε γὰρ δεῖ τῷ χαρισαμένῳ, καὶ πάλιν αὐτὸν ἄρξαι 8 χαριζόμενον. ποιεῖ δὲ τὴν ἀντίδοσιν τὴν κατ' ἀναλογίαν ἡ κατὰ διάμετρον σύζευξις, οἶον οἰκοδόμος ἐφ' ῷ Α, σκυτοτόμος ἐφ' ῷ Β, οἰκία ἐφ' ῷ Γ, ὑπόδημα ἐφ' ῷ Δ. δεῖ οὖν λαμβάνειν τὸν οἰκοδόμον παρὰ τοῦ σκυτοτόμου τοῦ ἐκείνου ἔργου, καὶ αὐτὸν ἐκείνῳ μεταδιδόναι τὸ αὐτοῦ. ἐὰν οὖν πρῶτον ἢ τὸ κατὰ τὴν ἀναλογίαν ἴσον, εἶτα τὸ ἀντιπεπονθὸς γένηται, ἔσται τὸ λεγόμενον. εἶ δὲ μή, οὐκ ἴσον, οὐδὲ συμμένει· οὐθὲν γὰρ κωλύει κρεῖττον εἶναι τὸ θατέρου

7 διδ-γαριζόμενον] 'Hence, too, it is that men build a temple of the Graces in their streets, that there may be reciprocity. For this is the property of grace, one must serve in return one who has done a favour, and again be in turn the first to confer favours.' Seneca (Benef. 1. 3) mentions with some disdain the various symbolical meanings which were supposed to be expressed by the figures of the Graces, and on which Chrysippus appears to have written an elaborate treatise. Of course no English word will exactly answer to χάρις.

8 ποιεῖ δὲ — σύξευξιτ] 'Now the joining of the diagonal of a square gives us proportionate return.' The diagram supposed to be drawn is as follows:

The joining of the diagonal gives each producer some of the other's work, and thus an exchange is made, but the respective value of the commodities must be first adjusted, else there can be no fair exchange. What, then, is the law of value? It is enunciated a little later (§ 10). δεί τοίνυν - τροφήν. 'As an architect (or a farmer it may be) is to a shoemaker, so many shoes must there be to a house or to corn.' That is, the value of the product is determined by the quality of the labour spent upon it. The sort of comparison here made between the quality of farmer and shoemaker seems connected with a Greek notion of personal dignity and a dislike of Bavavola. But in the following section a view more in accordance with Political Economy is taken .- for it is said that all products must be measured against one standard, and that this is in reality 'demand' ($\chipsi{\chipsi{per}}(a)$. It is demand, then, or in other words the higgling of the market, which determines how many shoes are to be given for a house. But the result ought to be such ($12$) that the architect + the number of shoes that he will receive (or the equivalent of these in money) will be to the shoemaker + a house, as the architect was to the shoemaker, originally. That is, each producer will have got his deserts.

9 ἐστι δὲ τοῦτο—Ισασθῆναι] Cf. ch. iv. § 12, note. 'Now this is the case with the other arts also (i.e. beside those of the architect and shoemaker), for they would have been destroyed if there had not been the producer producing so much, and of a certain kind, and the consumer (τὸ πάσχον) consuming just the same quantity and quality. For out of two the same are the consumer of the same quantity and quality.

does, and, in short, out of persons who are different from one another, and not equal; these, then, require to be brought to an equality.' The division of labour, the mutual dependence of the arts, and the correspondence of supply and demand, are here well stated. The terms  $\pi o c \bar{v} \nu$  and  $\pi d \sigma \chi o \nu$  may probably have some reference to the  $d v r \pi e \pi o v \theta \delta v$ , which is the subject of the chapter.

11 οίον δ' ὑπάλλαγμα τῆς χρείας τὸ νόμισμα γέγονε κατὰ συνθήκην) 'Now money is a sort of representative of demand conventionally established.' This excellent definition was not altogether new; Plato had already said (Κεριιδ. p. 371 Β): άγορὰ δὴ ἡμῶν καὶ νόμισμα ξύμβολον τῆς άλλαγῆς ἑνεκα γενήσεται ἐκ τούτου. The present chapter is disfigured by repetitions. Thus cf. § 15: τοῦτο δ' ἐξ ὑποθέσεως ΄ διὰ νόμισμα καλεῖται. The saying (§ 10) τὸ νόμισμὰ ἐλήλυθε καὶ γίνεται πως μέσον, is repeated

12 έσται δη άντιπεπονθός-γίνεσθαι] 'Retaliation, then, will take place when the terms have been equalised, and the production of the shoemaker has been made to bear the same relation to that of the farmer, as a farmer himself does to a shoemaker. We must not, however, bring the parties to a diagram of proportion after exchange has taken place, else the one extremity of the figure will have both superiorities assigned to it, but at a moment when the parties still retain their own products. They are thus equal and capable of trading, for proportionate equality can be established between them.' This vexed passage appears to describe the steps in a commercial transaction. There being a mutual need between producers of a different kind, their products require to be equalised. This is done by reducing the goods to a standard of inverse proportion, As a farmer to a shoemaker, so shoes to corn; thus, if a farmer's labour be 5 times better than a shoemaker's, then 5 pair of shoes = a quarter of corn; or if a pair of shoes = 10 shillings, then a quarter of corn = 50 shillings. When this process of equalisation has been effected (ὅταν ἰσασθη),—which is done by 'demand' or the higgling of the market,-then simple retaliation, or 'tit for tat,' begins. After an exchange has been made, or, in short, after the price of an article has once been expressed in money, it is no longer the time to talk of 'the quality of labour,' or for either side to claim an advantage on this account. If he did he would have 'both superiorities' reckoned to him, i.e. his own superiority over the other producer, and the superiority of his product over that of the other (see § 8, οὐθὲν κωλύει κρείττον είναι τὸ θατέρου ξργον). Having enjoyed the superiority of price already, in which the quality of labour was an element, he would now proceed to claim the superiority of labour by itself, which would thus be reckoned to him twice over. "Όταν ἀλλάξωνται can mean nothing else than 'when they have exchanged,' oray with the agrist implying a completed act. It seems unnecessary to say that the value of a thing is not to be settled after it is sold. Rather it is after the goods have come to market, and had a market price put upon them, that considerations of their production must cease. The expression, therefore, is not clear, but the above interpretation seems the most natural that

The words άλλ' όταν έγωσι τὰ αὐτών are opposed to δταν άλλάξωνται. punctuation therefore has been altered above, in concurrence with Fritzsche and with the learned paper by Mr. H. 13 δri δ' ἡ χρεία—Ισασθῆται] 'And that mutual want like a principle of unity binds men together, this fact demonstrates, namely, that when men are not in want of each other, whether both parties or one be thus independent, they do not exchange; whereas, when some one else wants the commedity that a man has (they effect an exchange), one party wanting, for instance, wine, and the other being willing to give it for an export of corn: and then an equality has to be brought about. Some MSS., and the Paraphrast, read έξαγωγήν, 'and giving for it an export of corn.' Διδύκαι έξαγωγήν, 'to grant an exportation,' occurs in Theophrast. Char. xx.: διδομένης έαυτψ έξαγωγής ξύλων ἀτελεοῦς.

It is true that money is under the same law as other commodities; for its value fluctuates, but still its tendency is to remain more fixed than other things.' On these excellent remarks nothing farther need be said. The term eyyunths is quoted from the sophist Lycophron by Aristotle, Pol. III. ix. 8, in application to the law.

IV. ix. 7. The merely conventional character of money is strongly stated by Aristotle, Pol. I. ix. II: "Ore δὲ πάλιν λῆρος εἶναι δοκεῖ τὸ νόμισμα καὶ νόμιος παντάπασι, φύσει δ΄ οὐθέν, ὅτι μεταθεμένων τε τῶν χρωμένων οὐθενὸς ἄξιον οὐδὲ χρήσιμον, κ.τ.λ.

17 τ μèν οῦν—clρηται] 'We have now stated what is the nature of the unist and the just abstractedly.' A fresh division of the book commences here; after discussing the various kinds of justice objectively, that is, as principles which manifest themselves in society, the writer proceeds to consider justice subjectively, that is, as manifested in the character of individuals, ἡ δικαιοπραγία—ἀδικεῖσθαι] 'Just treatment is plainly a mean between injuring and being injured. Δικαιοπραγία is formed on the analogy of εὐπραγία, and as εὖ πράττευ is used ambiguously to denote both 'doing' and 'faring well' (cf. Łth. r. iv. 2), so δικαιοπραγία includes both the doing and the receiving justice.

ή δὲ δικαιοσύνη μεσότης κτ.λ.]

Justice is a mean state or balance in a different sense from the other virtues. It is not a balance in the mind, but rather the will to comply with what society and circumstances pronounce to be fair (τοῦ μέσουἐ στίν). Justice, according to this view, is conpliance with an external standard. While in courage, temperance, and the like, there is a blooming of the individual character, each man being a law to himself, in justice there is an abnegation of individuality, in obedience to a standard which is one and the same for all. It must be remembered that the account of έπιείκεια in this book supplements

otherwise over-legal character.

That is, an unjust award may be made by giving a person too much good as well as too little, and too little evil as well as too much. Injustice is here said to be an extreme ότι ὑπερβολῆς ἐστίν, just in the same way as justice was before said to be a mean state one μέσου έστίν. .

VI. This chapter, which is written confusedly after the manner of Eudemus, apparently has for its object to restrict the term justice yet more definitely than has hitherto been done. We are now entering on the second division of the book, and the question is, what will constitute an individual unjust? This question tends to elucidate the nature of justice and injustice as individual qualities. But before answering it, there is a digression. It must be remembered, says the writer, that we are treating of justice in the plain sense of the word, that is, civil justice, not that metaphorical justice which might be spoken of as existing in families. On the nature of this justice, proper or civil justice, and on the metaphorical kinds, some remarks are given.

γὰρ ἄν συγγένοιτο γυναικὶ εἰδὸς τὸ ἢ, ἀλλ' οὐ διὰ προαι2 ρέσεως ἀρχὴν ἀλλὰ διὰ πάθος. ἀδικεῖ μὲν οὖν, ἄδικος δ' ἀλλά τι δίκαιον καὶ καθ' ὁμοιότητα. ἔστι γὰρ δίκαιον, οῖς καὶ νόμος πρὸς αὐτούς· νόμος δ', ἐν οῖς ἀδικία· ἡ γὰρ

3 πως μέν οὖν-πρότερον] The allusion is to ch. v. § 4-6, and the meaning appears to be simply, in the variety of cases that may occur, punishment by simple retaliation will not do. The sentence, however, appears irrelevant. 4 δεί δὲ μὴ-κατ' ἀριθμόν] 'Now we must not forget that the object of our inquiry is at once justice in the plain sense of the word (amlas) and justice as existing in the state. But this exists amongst those who live in common, with a view to the supply of their mutual wants, free and equal, either proportionately or literally.' Τὸ ἀπλῶς δίκαιον is opposed to καθ' όμοιότητα. It is not meant here to separate τὸ ἀπ. δίκ. from τὸ πολ. δίκ., rather it is implied that they are both the same. The only justice that can be called so without a figure of speech is that between fellow-citizens, who have mutual rights and some sort of equality, cf. Ar. Pol. III. vi. II, where it is said that all constitutions that aim at the common advantage όρθαὶ τυγχάνουσιν οὖσαι κατὰ τὸ ἀπλῶς ôlkatov. Proportionate equality belongs to aristocracies and constitutional governments, numerical or exact equality to democracies. Cf. Ar. Pol. VI. ii. 2.

4-5 έστι γάρ δίκαιον - τύραννος] 'For what is just exists among those who live under a common law, and law is where there is injustice (for legal judgment is a decision between the just and the unjust). wherever there is injustice there is wrong dealing, but it does not follow that where there is wrong dealing there is injustice, Wrong dealing consists in allotting oneself too much absolute good and too little absolute evil; and hence it is that we do not suffer a man to rule, but the impersonal reason, for a man does this for himself (i.e. rules, cf. ἐτέρφ ποιεί below), and becomes a tyrant.' This passage does not give the origin of justice, but the signs by which you may know it. Justice could not be said to depend on law (especially as law is said to depend on injustice, for we should thus argue in a circle), but where law exists you may know that justice exists. The argument then is that justice exists between citizens who have a law with each other, and not between father and children between whom there is no law. Law implies justice because it springs out of cases where a sense of wrong has been felt.

èν οίς δ' ἀδικία κ.τ.λ.] This seems to mean that law has not arisen merely from the fact of unequal dealings (àδικείν), but from a sense of the violation of a principle (aδικία). Thus the principle of justice is prior to all law and not created out of it. Τοῦτο δ', i.e. τὸ ἀδικείν. Following up this conception of the à priori character of justice, the writer says we must be governed not by a man, who may act selfishly, but by an impersonal standard of the right. That selfish rule is tyranny, Aristotle asserts in Pol. III. vii. 5: \u00e4 μέν γάρ τυραννίς έστι μοναρχία πρός τὸ συμφέρον τὸ τοῦ μοναρχοῦντος. Cf. also Pol. III. xvi. 3: τὸν ἄρα νόμον άρχειν αίρετώτερον μάλλον ή των πολιτών ένα τινά. - ὁ μὲν οὖν τὸν νοῦν κελεύων ἄρχειν δοκεί κελεύειν άρχειν τὸν θεὸν καὶ τοὺς νόμους, ὁ δ' άνθρωπον κελεύων προστίθησι καί θηρίου. ή τε γάρ ἐπιθυμία τοιοῦτον, και ὁ θυμὸς άρχοντας διαστρέφει και τους άρίστους άνδρας. διόπερ άνευ δρέξεως νους ο νόμος έστίν.

6 ἐπεὶ δ' οὐθὲν—γέρας] The apodosis to ἐπεὶ is μασθὸς άρα. From οὐ γὰρ to πρότερον is parenthetical. 'But since he does not seem to gain at all, if he is a just man (for he does not allot to himself more of the absolutely good than to others, unless it be proportional to his own merits, and hence he acts for others, and justice thus is said to be the good of others); we must give him some reward, and this comes in the shape of honour and reverence.'

καθάπερ έλέχθη τὸ πρότερον] The reference is to ch. i. § 17.

8 τὸ δὲ—δμοιον. 'Now the justice of masters and parents is not identical with what we have gone through (τούτοις i.e. άπ. καὶ πολιτ. δίκ.), but is only analogous to it.'

9 διδ — ἄρχεσθαι] 'Hence a man cannot have a spirit of wrong towards

himself; nor civil justice or injustice; for this is, as we have said ($\bar{p}$), according to law and among those who can naturally have law; namely, those, as we said ($\bar{p}\alpha a\nu$), who have an equality of ruling and being ruled.'

VII. Continues the discussion as to the nature of civil justice, in which there are two elements, the natural (φυσικόν) and the conventional (νομικόν). They are distinguished, and arguments are brought against the sophistical position that all justice is merely conventional. The chapter as above is not conveniently divided. We need not have had a fresh commencement with § I, τοῦ δὲ πολιτικοῦ, which is a carrying on of the same digression before made; and we might well have had the end of a chapter at § 5, κατά φύσιν ή άρίστη, after which there is a return to the main question as to justice and injustice in the acts and the characters of individuals. In his later edition Bekker makes one undivided chapter including Chaps. VI., VII., VIII., of the present edition.

I τοῦ δὲ πολιτικοῦ— διαφέρει] 'Now in civil justice there is a natural element and a conventional element; that is natural which has the same force everywhere, and does not depend on being adopted or not adopted (τῷ δοκεῦ ἢ μή); while that is conventional which at the outset does not matter whether it be so or differently, but when men have instituted it, then matters,' The distinction here drawn is like that between lows and Koupos νόμος in Aristotle's Rhetoric, I. xiii., and also that between moral and positive laws in modern treatises, Natural justice is law because it is right, conventional justice is right because it is law. Τὸ νομικόν is not to be confused with τὸ νόμιμον (cf. ch. i. § 8), which is justice expressed in the law, and which is nearly equivalent to πολιτικόν δίκαιον, containing therefore both the natural and conventional elements. In the early stages of society all law is regarded with equal reverence, Afterwards, in the sceptical period, the merely conventional character of many institutions is felt, and doubt is thrown on the validity of the whole fabric. Afterwards the proper distinction is made, and the existence of something above all mere convention is recognised. The idea of 'nature' as forming the basis of law, which was started in the school of Aristotle, was afterwards developed by the Stoics, and still further drawn out by Cicero and the Roman jurists. It became a leading formula in the Roman law, and hence has influenced the modern school of continental jurists, until a reaction was made against it by Bentham.

2 δοκεί δέ-όρωσιν] 'Now some think that all institutions are of this character, because, while the natural is fixed and has everywhere the same force (as fire burns equally here and in Persia), they see the rules of justice altered.' Καὶ ἐνθάδε καὶ ἐν τοῖς Hépouis. This appears to have been a common formula, cf. Plato, Minos, p. 315 Ε: έγω μέν (νομίζω) τά τε δίκαια δίκαια και τὰ ἄδικα ἄδικα. οὐκοῦν και παρά πασιν οθτως ώς ένθάδε νομίζεται; -ναί, -ούκοθν και έν Πέρσαις; -και έν Πέρσαις. In the same dialogue, p. 513, are given specimens of the different laws and customs in different times and places (D): Mupla &' du Tis έχοι τοιαύτα είπεῖν, πολλή γάρ εύρυχωρία της αποδείξεως, ώς ούτε ήμεις ημίν αύτοις άει κατά ταύτά νομίζομεν ούτε άλλήλοις ol άνθρωποι. The variety of customs and ideas is brought forward by Locke and Paley to disprove the existence of an innate 'moral sense.' This variety is generally overstated, and the list of aberrations is mainly obtained from the usages of barbarous tribes. On the origin of the opposition between 'nature' and 'convention,' and on the use made of this by the Sophists, see Vol. I. Essay II. p. 149.

3 τοῦτο δ'-ού φύσει] ' But this is not the case (i.e. that justice is mutable), though it is so to a certain extent. May be among the gods justice is immutable; but with us, although there is somewhat that exists by nature, yet all is mutable. Though this does not do away with the distinction between what is by nature and what is not by nature.' The writing here is very compressed, άλλ' έστιν ως, i.e. τὰ δίκαια κινούνται, to which also οὐδαμῶς afterwards must be referred. The answer given to the sophistical argument against justice consists in denying the premiss that 'what is by nature is immutable.' This might be the case, it is answered, in an ideal world (παρά γε τοῖς θεοῖς), but in our world laws are interrupted, and the manifestation of them is less perfect (κινητόν μέντοι παν). Again, 'nature' must be taken to mean not only a law but a tendency (see note on Eth. II, i. 3), as, for instance, the right hand is 'naturally,' but not always, stronger than the left, while merely conventional institutions exhibit no natural law (οὐ φύσει άλλά παρά γε τοῦς θεοῦς] Of course there is nothing theological in this allusion. In Εth. x. viii. 7, the notion of attributing justice to the gods is ridiculed. The present mention of the gods is not meant to convey anything about their nature, it merely contrasts a divine or ideal state with the human and actual. An exactly similar mention of the gods is made below, ch. ix. § 17.

ΧΧΧΙΝ. 21): λέγω δ΄ οΐον εἰ τῆ ἀριστερὰ μελετῶμεν πάντες del βάλλειν, γινοίμεθ΄ ἀν ἀμφιδέξιοι. In either case, the sense is nearly the same, πάντας implying 'any one

From the primary difference in governments will follow manifold other differences in conventional usages. For the Aristotelian idea of the one best government, see Politics III. vii., III. xv., &c.

We have a transition of subject now, a return from the digression on civil justice to inquire into individual responsibility, &c. The transition is made by saying that the principles of justice and injustice (to δίκαιον and to άδικον) are universals and differ from just and unjust acts. At first the writer makes δικαίωμα stand to δίκαιον, as άδίκημα to άδικον. Afterwards he substitutes δικαιοπράγημα as a more correct word, inasmuch as δικαίωμα had another special meaning to denote the setting right of injustice-legal satisfaction. It is not improbable that Eudemus here is correcting phraseology of Aristotle, who at all events in his Rhetoric, I. xiii. I, uses δικαίωμα as the opposite of ἀδίκημα, merely to denote a just action. Tà à' dounhuara warra καί τὰ δικαιώματα διέλωμεν, κ.τ.λ.

VIII. The general principles of justice having now been defined, the question is what constitutes justice and injustice in the individual? In one word the will. This chapter adds some needless remarks on the nature of the voluntary, and distinguishes between the different stages of a wrong done, according to the amount of purpose which accompanied it. The same act externally might be a misfortune, if happening beyond calculation; a mistake, if through carelessness; a wrong, if through temptation; the act of an unjust man, if through deliberate villany (§§ 6-8). This distinction is illustrated by the legal view with regard to acts done in anger (§§ 9-10). All voluntary just acts are just. Some involuntary acts are still unpardonable.

πολλὰ γὰρ—ἀποθνήσκειν] 'Since we knowingly both do and suffer many of those things that happen to us by nature, none of which are either in our power or voluntary, as, for instance, growing old or dying.' Obviously old age and death are ἀκούσια (cf. III. 3). So there must be something wrong in the text. Rassow conjectures ofτ' ἐψ' ἡμῶ οἰτ' ἐκούσιον, which has been adopted above. Cf. III. v. 7, ఠσα μήτ' ἐψ' ἡμῶ ἐστ' μήτ' ἐκούσιο.

It is characteristic of Eudemus to turn to the consideration of physiological facts; see the notes below on Eth. VII. ch. xiv.

6 τριῶν δὴ οὐσῶν βλαβῶν τῶν ἐν ταῖς κοινωνίαις] 'Therefore there being three kinds of harm that may be done in the intercourse of men,' &c. Really four kinds are specified, but the last (διὰ μοχθηρίαν) seems to be an addition to the old list, consisting of the misfortune, the error, and the wrong, which division is to be found in Aristotle's Rhetoric, I. ch. xiii. The present discussion is promised in Eth. Eud. II. x. 19: ἀμα δ' ἐκ πούτων φανερὸν καὶ ὅτι καλῶς διαρίζονται οἱ τῶν παθημάτων τὰ μὲν ἐκούτα τὰ δ' ἀκούτα τὰ δ' ἐκ προνοίας

9-10 διὸ καλῶs—ἀδικεῖ] 'Hence too acts done from anger are well judged not to proceed from purpose, for not he who acts in anger, but he who provoked the anger is the beginner. Again, the question is not about the act having taken place or not, but about the justice of it; for anger arises on the appearance of injustice. It is not as in contracts, where men dispute about the thing having been done, and where (if the thing has been done) one of the parties must be a villain, unless they have done it in forgetfulness. But (in the present case) agreeing about the fact, they dispute on which side justice is. Now he that has laid a plot against another cannot plead ignorance (in mitigation of the charge of injustice against him), so that B (the party who commits an act of wrathful retaliation on A, whom he alleges to have plotted against him) maintains that he has been injured, while the other party, A, denies it. But if A has purposely hurt B, he is certainly ἀδικῶν ἄδικος, ὅταν παρὰ τὸ ἀνάλογον ἢ ἡ παρὰ τὸ ἵσον.

guilty of injustice towards him.' Owing to the obscurity of expression, this passage has given great trouble to the commentators. The context is a carrying on of the distinction between audornua, doiknua, and άδικον. What distinguishes these is the amount of purpose they contain. This, says the writer, is illustrated by the way in which acts of anger are treated legally. In violations of civil contract the question is merely as to fact,-did the contract exist, and has it been consciously violated? But in cases of assault, &c., committed in anger, the fact is admitted, but justification is pleaded in respect of some act of injustice, which provoked the acts complained of. Thus the question is moved off from the acts themselves, and is entirely concerned with their antecedents. Was it a real injustice that gave rise to them? That this is what the writer means, is shown by the words of the text (§ 10) αμφισβητείται-περί του δικαίου. έπι φαινομένη γαρ άδικία ή δργή έστιν. According to the text, when an act of wrathful retaliation has been committed, the question is, was the act that provoked this retaliation an act of injustice or not? And this turns very much on the question whether it was a harm done knowingly and on purpose? (δ ἐπιβουλεύσας οὐκ ἀγνοείάν δ' έκ προαιρέσεως βλάψη, άδικεί.) We thus return to the general proposition (§ 11) that injustice of act requires only voluntariness, but injustice of character deliberate purpose. The reference here is to the point of view of the law-courts, and may have been suggested, like so much else in this book, by the discussions in the Politics of Aristotle. Cf. Pol. τν. xvi. I-5, where the different kinds of law-courts are specified, and it is mentioned as one of the cases that fall to be treated of in a criminal court,—where homicide is admitted, but its justification is pleaded: Φουικοῦ μέν οδυ είδη, δω τ' ἐν τοῦς αὐτοῖς δικασταῖς δυ τ' ἐν ἄλλοις, περί τε τῶν ἐκ προνοίας καὶ περί τοῦν ἀκουσίων, καὶ δαα δμολογείται μέν, ἀμφισβητεῖται δὲ περί τοῦ δικαίον, κ.τ.λ.

ἐπὶ φανομένη γὰρ ἀδικία] This is a reasonable deduction from Aristotle's definition of anger, Rhet. II. ii. 1, δρεξις μετὰ λύπης τιμωρίας φανομένης διά φανομένην δλιγυρίαν, κ.τ.λ. If anger arises from a sense of wounded amour propre, the idea of injustice and wrong must certainly be counted among the most common causes of its being excited.

12 άγνοοθντες μέν διά πάθος δὲ μήτε φυσικόν μήτ' ανθρώπινου] This would seem to imply a state in which moral insensibility and temporary mental obscuration have been caused by an access of brutality (θηριότης) as described in Eth. VII. v. 3. abrat μέν θηριώδεις, αί δὲ διά τε νόσους γίνονται και μανίαν ένίοις, ώσπερ δ την μήτερα καθιερεύσας και φαγών, και ὁ τοῦ συνδούλου τὸ ήπαρ. The police courts afford frequent instances of the infliction of brutal injuries, which are 'not forgivable,' though the perpetrators seem hardly responsible beings.

IX. This chapter, by means of mooting and answering certain difficulties and objections with regard to the nature of justice and injustice, completes and deepens the conception of them that has hitherto been given. These questions are as follows: (1) Can one be injured voluntarily? §§ 1-2. (2) Is the recipient of an injury always injured? §§ 3-8. The latter question is first generally answered, and then, $$ 9-13, it is re-stated in the form of two other questions, namely, Is the distributor of an unjust distribution, or he that gains by it, unjust? and, Can a man injure himself? By mooting these points it is at once shown that justice implies a relationship of two wills, and that an act of injustice implies a collision of two wills: a loss on one side and a gain on the other. The chapter ends with some remarks correcting popular errors, and deepening the conception of justice. (1) Justice is no easy thing consisting in an external act. It consists in an internal spirit, § 14. (2) To know it is not like knowing a set of facts. It implies a knowledge of principles, § 15. (3) The just man could not at will act unjustly. The character of the act depends on the state of mind, § 16. (4) Justice is limited to a human sphere, § 17.

1 απορήσειε δ' αν-έκόντες] 'Now one might doubt whether we have adequately defined being injured and injuring; in the first place, whether it be as Euripides says, in his strange language, A. "I killed my mother, and there's an end of it." B. "Was it with the will of both, or was she willing while you were unwilling?" In short, is it as a matter of fact possible that one should be voluntarily injured, or, on the contrary, is that always involuntary, just as all injuring is voluntary? And is all injustice, like all injuring, to be summed up under the one category or the other, or is it sometimes voluntary and sometimes involuntary? The same may be said about being justly treated, for all just doing is voluntary, so that it might be supposed that being injured and being justly treated would be opposed to each other as to being voluntary or involuntary correspondingly to the two active terms (άντικ. δμοίως καθ' έκάτερον). But it would be absurd to say of being justly treated that it is always voluntary, for some are treated justly against their will.'

el lκανως διώρισται] This shows the purpose of the chapter, to complete the definition of justice and injustice by looking at them on the passive side.

ώσπερ Εύριπίδης] Wagner (Eur. Fragm. p. 40) says the lines come from the Alemeon of Euripides. The Scholiast refers them to the Bellerophon. Wagner writes them as a dialogue, supposing the persons to be Alemson and Phegeus. He conjectures κατέκταν, which appears more probable than the usual reading κατέκτα, and which accordingly has been adopted in the above translation.

2 The passive terms are not opposed to each other in respect of voluntariness in the way that might be expected from the opposition between the active terms under which they stand.

> άδικείν—δικαιοπραγείν άδικείσθαι—δικαιούσθαι.

For ἀδικεῖσθαι is always involuntary, but δικαιοῦσθαι is not always voluntary. A man may be 'treated justly' by being hanged.

3 Not every one who suffers what is unjust is injured, for injury implies intention on the part of the injurer. Cf. Aristotle, Rhet. I. xiii. 5: ἔστι δη τὸ άδικεῖσθαι τὸ ὑπὸ ἐκόντος τὰ ἄδικα πάσχειν.

4-6 εί δ' έστὶν-πράττει] 'Now, if to injure is simply defined "to hurt any one willingly," and "willingly" means "knowing the person, and the instrument, and the manner," and the incontinent man hurts himself willingly, then it follows that one can be willingly injured, and it will be possible to injure oneself. But this was one of the points in question, whether it is possible to injure oneself. Again, one might from incontinence be hurt willingly by another who was acting willingly, so that in that way it would be possible to be injured willingly. But shall we not rather say that the definition is not correct, but that we must add to the formula "hurt any one willingly, knowing person, instrument, and manner," the terms "against that person's wish?" It is true one is hurt and one suffers injustice willingly, but no

 $\delta\pi\lambda\Omega_{5}$  is opposed to katà  $\pi\rho\delta\sigma$ - $\theta\epsilon\sigma\omega$  as implied in  $\pi\rho\sigma\sigma\theta\epsilon\tau\epsilon\omega$ , Cf.
VII. iv. 2-3.

τὸ βλάπτεν] Harm does not constitute injustice without a violation of the will. Cf. Ar. Rhet. I. xiii. 6: ἀνάγκη τὸν ἀδικούμενον βλάπτεσθαι, καὶ ἀκουσίως βλάπτεσθαι.

ὁ δ' ἀκρατης] The incontinent man may harm himself, or be led into ruin by others. The phenomena of incontinence appear to have constantly occupied the attention of Eudemus. They not only form the main subject of Eth. Book VII. (Eth. Eud. VI.), but they are also mixed up with the discussion on the voluntary, Eth. Eud. II. viil.

6 ούτε γάρ βούλεται κ.τ.λ.] In his inmost self every one wishes for what he thinks good. Thus the incontinent man, following his desire, acts against his own real wish. This is the same point of view as is taken in the Gorgias of Plato (p. 466 sqq.) It is rather different from that in Eth. III. ch. iv. (on which see notes), though the word oferas prevents an absolute collision. The terms wapa την βούλησιν are rather awkwardly introduced in the text, for it is said they are necessary to turn mere harm into injustice, but with regard to the incontinent man, while acting voluntarily he receives 'harm-against his wish.' Yet he is not injured voluntarily, because the terms 'against his wish' constitute him an involuntary agent. In short, in this case wapà την βούλησιν is made to qualify, not the harm, but the voluntariness of the recipient. There is a slight confusion in the expression, but on the whole the tendency here is to attribute a less degree of voluntariness to weak and foolish acts than was done by Aristotle in his discussions on the voluntary; Eth. III. i. 14, &c.

8-13 έτι δ' ὧν προειλόμεθα δύ' ξστιν είπεῖν] 'But of the questions which we determined on there remain two to discuss,' namely, (I) whether the distributor of an unjust distribution does the wrong, or he who gains by it? (2) Can a man injure himself, as for instance by taking less than his share? These questions are as good as answered already; it is already clear that no one can injure himself. Again the act belongs to the distributor and not to the receiver. If the distributor acts from corrupt motives he is unjust, if unconsciously and by accident he is not unjust, though justice may have been violated by his decision.

11-12 ℓn ἐπεὶ-πρῶτον] 'Again, as the word doing is used in more senses than one, and there is a sense in which inanimate things kill—or one's hand—or the slave who does his master's bidding—so the distributor may be the instrument of doing injustice, without himself injuring. Again, if he decided in ignorance, in the eye of the law he is not guilty of injuring, nor is his decision unjust, though from another point of view it is unjust, for justice according to law is distinct from abstract justice.' first case supposes the distributor to act as the instrument of others, the second that he makes a mistake through ignorance. In the latter case abstract justice (τὸ πρῶτον δίκαιον) is violated, and yet legally (κατά τὸ νομικόν) no injustice can be complained of. πρώτον here appears used analogously to πρώτη φιλοσοφία, πρώτη υλη, &c., to denote that which is most real and necessary, and also most abstract as being most removed from individual modifications. The Paraphrast and many of the commentators understand § 11 to refer to the receiver, not to the distributor, It might also be taken in a quite general sense, as applying to all such subservient acts. But it seems simplest to refer it to the distributor.

14-17 These sections contain remarks concluding the subject of justice. As they correct popular errors regarding its nature, they may be considered a continuation of the amonias. with which the chapter commenced. The views which are here combated are, (1) a shallow and external notion about justice and injustice, as if they merely consisted in outward acts; (2) a sophistical opinion that to know justice merely consists in knowing the details of the laws, cf. Eth. x. ix. 20; (3) an opinion that justice implies its contrary, as if it were an art (δύναμις); see above ch. i. § 4. This opinion would be a consequence of the Socratic doctrine that justice is knowledge. Plato saw what this doctrine led to and drew out the paradoxical conclusion, Repub. p. 334 A, Hipp. Min. pp. 375-6. The Aristotelian theory that justice is a moral state (EEss) set the difficulty at rest.

γυναικὶ καὶ πατάξαι, καὶ ὁ ἀνδρείος τὴν ἀσπίδα ἀφείναι καὶ στραφεὶς ἐφ' ὁποτεραοῦν τρέχειν. ἀλλὰ τὸ δειλαίνειν καὶ τὸ ἀδικεῖν οὐ τὸ ταῦτα ποιεῖν ἐστί, πλὴν κατὰ συμβεβηκός, ἀλλὰ τὸ ὁοδὶ ἔχοντα ταῦτα ποιεῖν, ὤσπερ καὶ τὸ ἰατρεύειν καὶ τὸ ὑγιάζειν οὐ τὸ τέμνειν ἡ μὴ τέμνειν ἡ ἡ φαρμακεύειν ἔστίν, ὰλλὰ τὸ ὡδί. ἔστι δὲ τὰ δίκαια ἐν τούτοις οἶς μέτεστι τῶν ἀπλῶς ἀγαθῶν, ἔχουσι δ' ὑπερβολὴν ἐν τούτοις καὶ ἔλλειψιν τοῖς μὲν γὰροὖκ ἔστιν ὑπερβολὴ αὐτῶν, οἶον ἴσως τοῖς θεοῖς, τοῖς δ' οὐθὲν μόριον ἀφέλιμον, τοῖς ἀνιάτως κακοῖς, ἀλλὰ πάντα βλάπτει, τοῖς δὲ μέχρι τοῦ διά τοῦτ' ἀνθρώπινόν ἐστιν.

17 ἔστι δὲ-ἐστιν] 'Now the relations of justice exist between those who share in what are commonly called goods, but with regard to them can have both too much and too little. For some cannot have too much, as perhaps the gods; and to others again no portion is advantageous, but all is hurtful-I mean the utterly bad; while there is a class who can receive goods up to a certain point. Hence justice is human.' Two ideal states, one of the absolutely good, the other of the absolutely bad, are here depicted in contrast to the condition of human society. The idea of property cannot of course be connected with God (cf. Eth. x. viii. 7), who has and is all good (cf. Eth. I. vi. 3, IX. iv. 4); nor again with those who are so degraded that they could not receive any benefit at all from what are called goods (cf. ch. i. § 9). The passage is a curious one, and may remind us of the position assigned by Aristotle (cf. Pol. I. ii. 14) to man in his social condition, as something between the beast and the god.

X. Some account of equity

(¿mielkeia) forms a suitable complement to the theory of justice, and we find the subject so treated in Aristotle's Rhetoric, I. xiii., from which it is not improbable that the present chapter may be partly borrowed. Professor Spengel is mistaken in saying that this chapter is out of place, being introduced into the midst of the amoolas on justice. Evidently it is chapter xi, and not chapter x., that is out of place. Spengel thinks that the words mepl oe emicinelas, would come in well after the words πως μέν οθν έχει το άντιπεπονθός πρός τὸ δίκαιον, είρηται πρότερον (which occur ch. vi. § 3), as if first retaliation and then equity should be discussed in relation to justice. But it is evident that they stand on a different footing, as treated in this book. Retaliation is a principle existing in justice and with certain modifications constituting it; equity is something outside justice and correcting it.

'Επιείκεια has a close connection with what is called γνώμη (consideration), Eth. VI. Xi. 1, cf. Rhet. I. Xiii. And thus it is treated of by the author of the Magna Moralia amongst εχόμενον έστιν εἰπεῖν· οὕτε γὰρ ὡς ταὐτὸν ἀπλῶς οὅθ' ὡς επερον τῷ γένει φαίνεται σκοπουμένοις, καὶ ὁτὲ μὲν τὸ ἐπιεικὲς ἐπαινοῦμεν καὶ ἄνδρα τὸν τοιοῦτον, ὥστε καὶ ἐπὶ τὰ ἄλλα ἐπαινοῦντες μεταφέρομεν ἀντὶ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ, τὸ ἐπιεικέστερον ὅτι βέλτιον δηλοῦντες ὁτὲ δὲ τῷ λόγῳ ἀκολουθοῦσι φαίνεται ἄτοπον εἰ τὸ ἐπιεικὲς παρὰ τὸ δίκαιον τι ὂν ἐπαινετόν ἐστιν ἡ γὰρ τὸ δίκαιον οὐ σπουδαῖον, ἡ τὸ ἐπιεικὲς οὐ δίκαιον, εἰ ἄλλο ἡ εἰ ἄμφω σπουδαῖα, ταὐτόν ἐστιν. ἡ μὲν οὖν ἀπορία σχεδὸν συμβαίνει 2 διὰ ταῦτα περὶ τὸ ἐπιεικὲς, ἔχει δ' ἄπαντα τρόπον τινὰ ὀρθῶς καὶ οὐθὲν ὑπεναντίον ἐαυτοῖς· τό τε γὰρ ἐπιεικὲς

the intellectual qualities, and is coupled with what he calls εὐγνωμοσύνη, Magna Moralia, II. i. I, sqq.

To us the contents of this chapter appear natural and easy to apprehend. The idea of equity as the complement of law and justice is to us perfectly familiar, but the writer saw a difficulty in saying how logically (τῷ λόγω ἀκολουθοῦσι) equity could be praised if it contradicted justice. The answer is well given above, that equity is a higher and finer kind of justice coming in where the law was too coarse and general. The best illustration of this conception is to be found in the beautiful description given in Rhet. L. xiii. 'It is equity to pardon human failings, and to look to the lawgiver and not to the law; to the spirit and not to the letter; to the intention and not to the action; to the whole and not to the part : to the character of the actor in the long run and not in the present moment : to remember good rather than evil, and good that one has received, rather than good that one has done; to bear being injured (τὸ ἀνέχεσθαι ἀδικούμενον); to wish to settle a matter by words rather than by deeds; lastly, to prefer arbitration to judgment, for the arbitrator sees what is equitable, but the judge only the law, and for this an arbitrator was first appointed, in order that equity might flourish.'

I ότὲ μὲν-άγαθοῦ] 'Sometimes we praise what is equitable and the equitable character in such a way, that we transfer the term and use it instead of the term good in praising people for all other qualities besides,' The word exicints is constantly used merely in the sense of 'good;' cf. Eth. IV. ix. 7, έξ ὑποθέσεως ἐπιεικές, and above, ch. iv. § 3, &c.; but it is a mistake to consider this the later sense of the word, as if 'equitable' were the primary sense. 'Emicikhs (from cikbs) first means 'customary,' as in Homer; then 'seemly,' then 'good' in general; afterwards it is probable that an association of είκω, 'to yield,' became connected with the word, and hence the notion of moderation and of waiving one's rights arose, and to emicines was constantly contrasted with 70 δίκαιον. Thus in Herod. III. 53: πολλοί των δικαίων τὰ ἐπιεικέστερα προτιθέασι. Cf. Plato, Laws, p. 757 D: τὸ γὰρ ἐπιεικές καὶ ξύγγνωμον τοῦ τελέου και άκριβούς παρά δίκην την δρθήν έστι παρατεθραυσμένον, &c. Out of this contrast the idea of equity was developed.

XI. This chapter, which is merely an instance of Eudemian malarrangement, starts by discussing an already settled question, Can a man injure himself? Amidst the somewhat feeble reasonings and the repetitions which it presents, it is not quite without interest in the view that is taken of suicide, §§ 2, 3, and in the saying that it is a mere metaphor to speak of justice between the higher and lower parts of a man.

1 &κ τῶν εἰρημένων] i.e. ch. i. §§
12-20. The question is complicated by introducing a mention of universal justice (τὰ κατὰ πᾶσαν ἀρετὴν), and the extraordinary assertion is made that 'whatever the law does not command it forbids.' We might well ask, Did the Athenian law command its citizens to breathe, to eat, to sleep, &c.?

2-3 The suicide sins against the state, not against himself. This is proved by the fact that the state affixes infamy to the deed. In Æschines, Clesiph. p. 636, § 64, it is mentioned that the hand of a suicide was buried apart from himself. And in Plato's Laws, Ix. p. 873 0, sqq., regulations are laid down for the burial of suicides. In the words ἀδικεί ἀρα, ἀλλὰ τίτα; there is a change of meaning from the intransitive dōικείν, to 'do wrong,' to the transitive verb to 'injure.'

4 ἄμα γὰρ—ἄδικον] 'For it would be thus possible for the same thing to be gained and lost by the same person; but this is not possible, justice and injustice must always take place between more persons than one.' Cf. ch. iii. § 4.

6 δλως δὲ λύεται κ.τ.λ.] A verbal repetition of what was said above, ch. ix. § 9.

7-9 The chapter ends by touching upon two points which have an apparent reference to Plato: (1) the assertion that to injure is worse than to be injured, which the writer here qualifies with a consideration; (2) the conception of justice existing between the different parts in the mind of an individual, which is here pronounced to be a metaphor.

7 και ισπερ — γυμναστική] This sentence is parenthetical and elliptic. The train of thought appears to be; 'Injuring and being injured are both bad, they are both departures from the mean, and it is (with justice) as with health in medicine and good condition in training, namely, it is a state of balance between excess and defect. Of. Eth. II. ii. 6.

άλλ' δμως χείρον το άδικείν] This is exactly the point which is urged by Socrates in the Gorgias of Plato (p. 473 A, 509 c), and seems to his hearers a paradox. It is qualified above by the admission that being injured might be in its consequences (κατά συμβεβηκός) a worse evil than injuring; just as a stumble might cause a man's death, and so be accidentally worse than a pleurisy. Is it then worse to be ruined by the cheating of others, or to cheat some one of a sixpence? The writer above acknowledges that moral science will maintain the severity of its verdict. and say cheating is the worse (and) ούδεν μέλει τη τέχνη κ.τ.λ.). Of

καὶ ψεκτόν, καὶ κακίας ή της τελείας καὶ άπλως ή έγγύς (οὐ γὰρ ἄπαν τὸ ἐκούσιον μετὰ ἀδικίας), τὸ δ' ἀδικείσθαι άνευ κακίας καὶ άδικίας. καθ' αύτο μέν οῦν τὸ άδικεῖσθαι 8 ήττον φαύλον, κατά συμβεβηκός δ' οὐθέν κωλύει μείζον είναι κακόν, άλλ' οὐδεν μέλει τη τέχνη, άλλά πλευρίτιν λέγει μείζω νόσον προσπταίσματος καίτοι γένοιτ' αν ποτε θάτερον κατὰ συμβεβηκός, εὶ προσπταίσαντα διὰ τὸ πεσείν συμβαίη ύπο των πολεμίων ληφθήναι και αποθανείν, κατά μεταφοράν δε και ομοιότητά εστιν ουκ αυτώ προς ο αύτον δίκαιον άλλα των αὐτοῦ τισίν, οὐ πὰν δε δίκαιον άλλα το δεσποτικον ή το οἰκονομικόν έν τούτοις γαρ τοίς λόγοις διέστηκε το λόγον έχον μέρος της ψυχης προς το άλογον, είς ά δη βλέπουσι καὶ δοκεί είναι άδικία πρὸς αύτον, ότι έν τούτοις έστι πάσχειν τι παρά τὰς έαυτῶν ορέξεις ωσπερ οθν άρχοντι και άρχομένω είναι προς άλληλα δίκαιον τι και τούτοις. περί μεν ούν δικαιοσύνης και 10 τῶν ἄλλων τῶν ἡθικῶν ἀρετῶν διωρίσθω τὸν τρόπον τούτον course being depraved in mind is the worst of all evils. It is not this (άδικος εἶναι), but a single act of wrong (τὸ ἀδικεῖν), that will bear comparison with the evil of being injured.

9 κατά μεταφοράν δὲ—τούτοιs] 'Now metaphorically and by analogy one is capable of justice, not towards one's own self, but towards certain parts of oneself, not every kind of justice, but despotic or household justice. For in the theories alluded to there is a separation made between the reasonable and unreasonable part of man's nature. Regarding this, people consider that one can have injustice towards oneself, because these separate parts may be made to suffer a contradiction of their respective inclinations; so then, like ruler and ruled, they have a sort of justice among each other.'

έν τούτοις γὰρ τοῖς λόγοις] It can hardly be doubted that there is a reference here to Plato, Repub. p. 441 A, 443 D, 432 A, &c. To deny the appropriateness of the term 'justice' to express a harmony between the different parts of man's nature is unlike the point of view taken Eth. Ix. c. iv., where the friendship which the good man has with himself is described at length. Eudemus, however, was much busied with problems as to the unity of the will, and probably advanced to some extent the Peripatetic psychology.

PLAN OF BOOK VI.

TURNING to the contents of this Sixth Book, we see at once that it includes two subjects, and that the intermixture of these two has given rise to some little confusion. The questions are: (1) What is the moral standard? (2) What are the intellectual dgsra/?

Commencing with the former question, the writer goes off into the latter. And thus Thought  $(\phi g \phi n \sigma u g)$  is treated of at some length as a perfection of the moral intellect, but is hardly touched upon with regard to its operation as the moral standard.

After the two above-mentioned questions have been proposed, without any statement of their connection, the discussion of the intellectual destal commences by a division of the reason into scientific and calculative. Ch. I.

Truth is the object of both, but truth is divided into practical and speculative. The former enters into and becomes an element in the decisions of the will. Ch. II.

Truth of whatever kind is attained by only five organs of the mind—Science, Art, Thought, Reason, and Philosophy. These then are severally discussed; and Philosophy, after being treated independently, has Thought brought in again in contrast to itself. Ch. III.—VII.

The relation of Thought to Economy and Politics is then discussed. Ch. VIII.

Prudence (εὐβουλία), Apprehension (σύνισις), and Considerateness (γνώμη), as being component elements of Thought, are severally treated of, and some remarks are added on the natural and intuitive character of these practical qualities. Ch. IX.—XI.

The book ends by the statement and solution of difficulties with regard to Thought and Philosophy, their respective use, and their relation to each other in point of superiority.

With regard to the use of Thought some important though not very clear remarks are made on its inseparable connection with Virtue. Though inseparable, it is not, however, identical with Virtue, as Socrates wrongly asserted. In relation to Philosophy, Thought is concerned with the means, while Philosophy is concerned with the end. Ch. XII.—XIII.

The upshot of the book, then, is, that it treats of the intellectual destal. These are two-not five, as some would say, reckoning as such the five organs of truth, nor again an indefinite number, as Aristotic would seem to say, admitting 'Apprehension,' &c. (Eth. 1. xiii. 20): but two essentially, Philosophy and Thought. These are contrasted with each other, but in such a way that Thought, though the least excellent, is brought into prominence, and is the real theme of the book. With all the discrepancies of statement which are apparent between different passages in this book, 'Thought' comes out in its general outlines as the perfection of the practical reason combined with the will; as inseparable, if distinguishable, from Virtue itself. The picture of this quality and of its growth in the mind is made the occasion of many interesting remarks; but the question how the mind acts in determining the mean, and what is the nature of the moral standard, is left still unanswered.

For the term φρώνησις, as used in this book, it is not possible to find an exact equivalent in English. 'Prudence,' which is generally employed for this purpose, is not suitable; for φρώνησις, according to Platonic views, included the contemplation of absolute existence (see Vol. I. Essay III. p. 194). 'Thought' is the equivalent for φρώνησις in its general Greek sense, and it has been thought better, in the following notes, to take 'Thought' in a peculiar and technical sense to represent the peculiar and technical application of φρώνησις, which here occurs.

ΈΠΕΙ δε τυγχάνομεν πρότερον εἰρηκότες ὅτι δεῖ τὸ μέσον αἰρεῖσθαι καὶ μὴ τὴν ὑπερβολὴν μηδε τὴν ἔλλειψιν, τὸ δε μέσον ἐστὶν ὡς ὁ λόγος ὁ ὀρθὸς λέγει, τοῦτο διέλωμεν. ἐν πάσαις γὰρ ταῖς εἰρημέναις ἕξεσι, καθάπερ καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν ἄλλων, ἔστι τις σκοπὸς πρὸς ὃν ἀποβλέπων ὁ τὸν λόγον ἔχων ἐπιτείνει καὶ ἀνίησιν, καί τις

I. This chapter states, though somewhat indefinitely, the question which is to be answered in the ensuing book. Referring back to a previous mention of 'the mean,' it proposes now to discuss 'the right law' by which the mean is determined. For only to know that action must be 'in the mean, and according to the right law,' is a mere blank formula which requires filling up (άληθὲς μέν, οὐθὲν δè σαφές). What then is the right law, and what is the standard of it (τίς τ' ἐστὶν ὁ ὀρθὸς λόγος καὶ τούτου τίς δρος)? In answering this question, the procedure must be to discuss the most perfect developments of the intellectual faculties, for by so doing we shall learn the proper function of each (ληπτέον ἄρ' ἐκατέρου τούτων τίς ἡ βελτίστη έξις αθτη γάρ άρετη έκατέρου, ή δ' άρετη πρός τὸ έργον τὸ οίκεῖον). Ας the inner nature of man was before divided into two parts, the rational and irrational, so we may now subdivide the rational part into two elements, the scientific and the calculative, in accordance with the two classes of objects which are presented to the mind, and which we may conclude are dealt with by separate faculties, namely, the permanent, which is dealt with by the scientific element in us, and the contingent, which is the object of calculation, or deliberation.

excess and deficiency, being in accordance with the right law.' 'Emerelyes kal delnow is a metaphor from tuning the strings of a lyre, Cf. Plato, Lysis, p. 209 B: και ἐπειδάν, ώς έγωμαι, την λύραν λάβης, οὐ διακωλύουσί σε οδθ' ὁ πατηρ οδθ' ή μήτηρ έπιτείναι τε και άνείναι ήν αν βούλη των χορδών. Phædo, p. 98 c: και τά μέν όστα έστι στερεά, και διαφυάς έγει χωρίς ἀπ' άλλήλων, τὰ δὲ νεθρα οία ἐπιτείνεσθαι και ἀνίεσθαι. This metaphor is not quite in accordance with that other metaphor of 'looking to the mark,' but in fact the term σκοπός seems to have become so regular a formula with Eudemus as to have lost its metaphorical association. By Aristotle σκοπός was used as a pure metaphor, the application of which was borrowed from Plato (cf. Eth. I. ii. 2, note). But in the writing of Eudemus it seems used as a scientific term equivalent to τέλος; cf. Eth. Eud. II. x. 20; έπεὶ δέ βουλεύεται del ὁ βουλευόμενος ένεκά τινος, και έστι σκοπός τις del τώ βουλευομένω πρός δν σκοπεί το συμφέρον, περί μέν του τέλους ούθεις βουλεύεται. Ιδ. Π. Χί. 2: λέγομεν δὲ προαπορήσαντες. "Εστι γάρ τον μέν σκοπον δρθον είναι, έν δὲ τοῖς προς τον σκοπόν διαμαρτάνειν · έστι δὲ τὸν μὲν σκοπον ήμαρτήσθαι, τα δέ προς έκεινον περαίνοντα δρθώς έχειν, και μηδέτερον. The similar use of opos by Eudemus is not found in Eth. Nic., but appears borrowed from the mode of writing in the Politics of Aristotle (see Vol. I. Essay I. pp. 61–62). Cf. Eth. Eud. II. v. 8 (which is especially referred to in the present passage), τία δε δρου αποβλέποντας λέγειν τὸ μέσον, Ιστεροι Επισκεπτέον. Ιδ. vIII. iii. 12: δεί τινα εΐναι δρον καὶ τῆς ξέως καὶ τῆς αιρέσεως καὶ περὶ φυγῆς χρημάτων πλήθους καὶ δικγότητος καὶ τῶν εύτυχημάτων. Ιδ. vIII. iii. 15.

2 for se- oades Now to say this is to say what is true enough, but not explicit.' This same expression, with the same illustration of the medical art, is repeated Eth. Eud. VIII. iii, 13: ἐν μἐν τοῖς πρότερον έλέχθη τὸ ώς ὁ λόγος τοῦτο δ' ἐστὶν ώσπερ αν εί τις έν τοις περί την τροφήν είπειεν ώς ή Ιατρική και δ λόγος ταύτης. τοῦτο δ' άληθές μέν, οὐ σαφές δέ. Cf. Ib. I. vi. 2: έκ γὰρ τῶν ἀληθῶς μὲν λεγομένων οὐ σαφώς δὲ προϊούσιν ἔσται καί τὸ σαφώς. In the present place there is an apparent protest against the indefiniteness and relativity of Aristotle's moral theory of 'the mean' and 'the law.' Eudemus does not seem (according to the statement here) content to give greater explicitness to the idea of the 'law' by the development of the idea of the wise man who is its impersonation. But he asks (separating oxowbs and opos from the hóyos), 'What is the mark to which one possessing the law must εἴ τις εἴπειεν ὅτι ὅσα ἡ ἰατρικὴ κελεύει καὶ ὡς ὁ ταύτην 3 ἔχων. διὸ δεῖ καὶ περὶ τὰς τῆς ψυχῆς εἴξεις μὴ μόνον ἀληθὲς εἶναι τοῦτ' εἰρημένον, ἀλλὰ καὶ διωρισμένον τίς τ' ἐστὶν ὁ ὀρθὸς λόγος καὶ τούτου τίς ὅρος.

και ὑποκείσθω—αὐτοῖs] 'And let us suppose that the parts possessing reason are two, one by which we apprehend such existences as depend on necessary principles, and one by which we apprehend contingent matter, for to objects differing in genus there must be different members of the mind severally adapted, if it be true that these members obtain their knowledge by reason of a certain resemblance to and affinity with the object of knowledge.' We have here a division of the mind in accordance with a division of the objects of which the mind is cognisant. And as a justification of this we have the assumption that knowledge implies a resemblance and affinity between object and subject. With regard to this, Aristotle (De Anima, I. ii. 10) says that 'those philosophers who wished to account for knowledge and perception identified the worn with the principles of things, because like is known by like.' "Οσοι δ' έπὶ τὸ γινώσκειν και τὸ αισθάνεσθαι τῶν ὅντων (άποβλέπουσιν), οδτοι δὲ λέγουσι τὴν ψυχήν τὰς ἀρχάς, οἱ μέν πλείους ποιούντες, οί δὲ μίαν ταύτην, ώσπερ Έμπε δοκλής μέν έκ των στοιχείων πάντων. είναι δὲ καὶ ἔκαστον ψυχὴν τούτων, λέγων οδτω τον αυτόν δε τρόπον και Πλάτων έν τω Τιμαίω την ψυχην έκ των στοιχείων ποιεί · γινώσκεσθαι γάρ τω όμοιω τὸ δμοιον, τὰ δὲ πράγματα ἐκ τῶν ἀρχῶν Sir W. Hamilton says (Discussions on Philosophy, p. 60); 'Some philosophers (as Anaxagoras, Heraclitus, Alcmæon) maintained that knowledge implied even a contrariety of subject and object. But since the time of Empedocles, no opinion has been more universally admitted than that the relation of knowledge inferred the analogy of existence. This analogy may be supposed in two potences. What knows and what is known are either, first, similar, or second, the same; and if the general principle be true, the latter is the more philosophical.' The fact is, that every act of knowledge is a unity of contradictions. It would be absurd to denv that the subject is contrary to the object, and it would be equally absurd to deny that the subject is the same as the object. As Empedocles says, the mind only knows fire by being fire, but, on the other hand, if, in knowing fire, the mind only were fire, and were not contrary to fire, then to know fire would only be to add fire to fire. But it is qua' knowing' that the mind is contrary to its object, not que knowing any particular object. Thus from the diversity of objects we are justified in concluding a diversity in the mind. But we must be sure that objects are really different from one another in genus  $(\tau \hat{\omega}, \gamma \ell \nu \epsilon, \ell \tau \epsilon \rho a)$ , before we conclude the existence of different parts, faculties, or elements corresponding to them, else we may attribute to different principles in the mind phenomena that were only modifications of each other, and not by any means implying a diversity of principle.

6 λεγέσθω δέ-έχοντος] 'Of these, let one be called the "scientific," the other the "calculative" part, for deliberating and calculating are the same, and no one deliberates about necessary matter. The calculative part. then, is one division of the rational.' The psychology here is an advance in dogmatic clearness of statement beyond what we find in the writings of Aristotle. The terms τὸ ἐπιστημονικόν and τὸ λογιστικόν are not opposed to each other in the De Anima. Aoveστικόν has not there taken the definite meaning which it wears in the present book. Rather it is used in a general sense to denote 'rational.' Thus in asking how the  $\psi \nu \chi \eta$  is to be divided, Aristotle says (De An. III. ix. 2): exes δ' ἀπορίαν εύθύς πως τε δεί μόρια λέγειν της ψυχης και πόσα. Τρόπον γάρ τινα άπειρα φαίνεται και οδ μόνον ά τινες λέγουσι διορίζοντες, λογιστικόν και θυμικόν και έπιθυμητικόν (i.e. Plato, Repub. pp. 436-441), οἱ δὲ τὸ λόγον ἔχον και τὸ άλογον. Cf. Ib. III. ix. 5: έν τῷ λογιστικῷ γὰρ ἡ βούλησις γίνεται. Ib. III. x. 10: φαντασία δὲ πάσα ή λογιστική ή αλσθητική. Cf. Again, τὸ ἐπιστημονικόν is used, not as here opposed to 70 λογιστ... but generally. De Anim. III. xi, 3: τὸ δ' ἐπιστημονικὸν οὐ κινεῖται άλλά μένει. However, the distinction here given is already prepared in the De Anima, and is even stated (though less dogmatically) in a place which was probably borrowed by the present writer. Ib. III. x. 2: voûs δè ὁ ἔνεκά του λογιζόμενος και ὁ πρακτικός διαφέρει δὲ τοῦ θεωρητικοῦ τῷ τέλει, ούθεὶς δὲ βουλεύεται, κ.τ.λ.] Cf. Eth. Eud. II. x. 9: περὶ ἄν ούδεἰς ἀν ούδεἰς ἀν ούδεἰς ἀν ούδεὶς ἀν ούδεὶς ἀν ούδεὶς ἀν ούδεὶς ἀν οὐδεὶς ἀν οὐδεὶς ἀν οὐδεὶς ἀν εἰναι καὶ μή, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ βουλεύσασθαι τοῖς ἀνθρώποις. We before observed (cf. Eth. III. iii. 3 note) that Aristotle, in the parallel passage, did not use the terms τὰ ἐνδεχόμενα and τὰ μή ἐνδεχόμενα. Το combine logical with psychological formula is the characteristic of Eudemus.

II. The last chapter having divided the reason into scientific and calculative, the present chapter proceeds to bridge over the interval between the intellect and moral action. This is done by assuming three principles in man-sensation. reason, and desire, Sensation merges into the other two, and then it is shown that in purpose, the cause of action, there is the meeting point of desire and reason, not of the pure or speculative reason (answering to the 'scientific part' of the last chapter), but the practical reason aiming at an end (which answers to the 'calculative part' in the former division). Thus there are two kinds of truth. one pure, the other having a relation to the will, and 'agreeing with right desire.' This distinction is a great step towards answering the question with which the present book is concerned. Truth having been divided into pure and practical, it only remains to see the forms under which the mind deals with these two kinds, and the highest developments of the mind will be disclosed, arranged under a twofold head.

1 τρία δ' έστίν] Cf. Ar. De Animâ, ΠΙ. Χ. I: φαίνεται δέ γε δύο ταῦτα κυοῦττα, ἢ δρεξις ἢ νοῦς, εἴ τις τὴν φαντασίαν τιθείη ὡν νόησίν τινα΄.... ἀμφω άρα ταῦτα κυνητικά κατὰ τόπον, νοῦς καὶ δρεξις. Νοῦς δὲ ὁ ἔνεκά του λογιζόμενος καὶ ὁ πρακτικός ΄ διαφέρει δὲ τοῦ θεωρητικοῦ τῷ τέλει... Καὶ ἡ φαντασία δὲ όταν κυνῆ οὐ κινεῖ ἀνευ όρεξεως. It is highly probable that Eudemus had this passage before his eyes. The only alteration he has made is to substitute αίσθησες for φαντασία, and to speak of the deter-minators of truth and action as three, with one merged in the other two, instead of calling them two with a third implied. Τούτων δ' ἡ αΙσθησις κ.τ.λ. answers to καὶ ἡ φαντασία κ.τ.λ.

2 δήλον δὲ τῷ τὰ θηρία—πράξεως μή κοινωνέω] The definite meaning of πράττεν and πράξει to denote 'moral action' appears perhaps rather more strongly in Eudemus than in Aristotle. Cf. Ελλ. Ευά. II. vi. 2: πρός δὲ τούτοις δ΄ ἀνθρωπος καὶ πράξεων τινών έστιν ἀρχὰ μόνον τῶν ζῷων 'τῶν γὰρ ἄλλων οὐθὲν εἴποιμεν ὰν πράττειν. Ιδ. 4-5 πράξεως μὲν οἔν — ἀνθρωπος] 'Now of moral action purpose is the cause (I mean the efficient cause, not the final), and the efficient cause of purpose is desire, and reasoning on the end to be aimed at. Hence purpose can neither be separated from reason and intellect, nor from a particular state of the moral nature. Well-doing and its contrary imply intellect and moral character. Now intellect by itself moves nothing, only intellect aiming at an end, that is, practical intellect. This controls the productive intellect as well, since he that produces, produces for the sake of some end, and the thing produced is not an end in and for itself, but is only an end relatively and for a particular individual. But the thing done is an Endin-itself, since well-doing is an end, and this is what we desire. Hence purpose may be defined as desiring reason, or as rational desire, and such a principle as this is man.' We have here a resumé of Aristotle's views in De Anima, l. c. Another division of the intellect, however, is introduced, that into practical, productive, and speculative, which is to be found implied in Eth. L. i. I, and is stated Metaphys. v. i. 5 : ώστε εί πάσα διάνοια ή πρακτική ή ποιητική ή θεωρητική κ.τ.λ. It is here shown that the productive faculties of man are subordinate to the practical thought, since no artist produces anything purely and solely for its own sake : however much he may seem to do so, still his art as a part of his life falls under the control of his will and reason.

διάνοια δ' αότὴ οδθὲν κινεῖ, ἀλλ' ἡ ἔνεκά του] There is a slight confusion here. Aristotle had said (De An. III. ix. IO, III. x. 2, III. x. 4), that the reason dealing with ends differed from the speculative reason, that reason neither speculative nor practical was the moving cause of action (III. ix. 10: άλλα μην ούδε το λογιστικόν και ο καλούμενος νούς έστιν ὁ κινών · ὁ μέν γὰρ θεωρητικός ούθεν νοεί πρακτόν - οὐδ' δταν θεωρή τι τοιούτον κ.τ.λ.), and that intellect could not move anything without desire conjoined (III. x. 4: νθν δε ό μεν νοθς ού φαίνεται κινών ανευ δρέξεως), but Eudemus mixes up these points. He says that 'intellect by itself moves nothing,' and then as if in opposition to intellect by itself he puts 'but practical intellect does.' He should have said 'practical intellect plus desire.'

καὶ πρακτική] Kal is used here denoting identity. Cf. Eth. v. vi. 4: τὸ ἀπλῶς δίκαιον καὶ τὸ πολιτικὸν δίκαιον. Ar. De. An. III. x. 2: νοῦς δὲ ὁ ἔνεκά του λογιξόμενος καὶ ότ πρακτικός. εὐπραξία] On the ambiguity of this term, cf. Εth. L iv. 2, note.

6 ούκ ἔστι δὲ προαιρετὸν οὐθὲν γεγονός] 'Now nothing that is past is ever the object of purpose.' This assertion with the quotation from Agathon to illustrate it, appears certainly to be a digression. The nature of purpose had been quite sufficiently explained already, especially in reference to the present context. However, to exclude the past, and circumstances which though contingent have become historical, from the sphere of deliberation, is an addition to Aristotle's list of exclusions (Eth. III. III. III. III.), and on this account probably Eudemus was glad to introduce the above remarks.

III. This chapter proposes to consider the two parts of the reason (scientific and calculative) from a fresh point of view (άρξάμενοι-πάλιν). It accordingly gives a list of five modes under which the mind attains truth; namely, art, science, thought, philosophy, and reason. It then proceeds to give some account of science. .This account will be found to be a mere cento of remarks from the logical writings of Aristotle. The chief points specified are as follows. Science deals only with necessary matter. It is demonstrative, starting from truths already known, and proceeding by means of induction or syllogism. Its premises are obtained by induction, but they must be more certain than the conclusion, else the knowledge of the conclusion will be not scientific, but merely accidental.

I πέντε τὸν ἀριθμόν] It seems in the highest degree probable that this list was suggested by a passage in Aristotle's Post. Analytics (I. xxxiii, 8), where, after a discussion on the difference between science and opinion, it is said : τὰ δὲ λοιπά πῶς δεῖ διανείμαι έπί τε διανοίας και νοῦ και ἐπιστήμης και τέχνης και φρονήσεως και σοφίας, τὰ μέν φυσικής τὰ δὲ ἡθικής θεωρίας μάλλον ἐστίν. It will be observed that Aristotle in this passage does not propose six terms to be distinguished from each other, but three pairs of terms which are to be separately discussed, part of them (i.e. probably the two first pairs) by psychology (φυσικής θεωρίας), and part of them (i.e. σοφία and φρόνησις) by ethics. Eudemus, taking up the whole list, has omitted διάνοια, which he does not distinguish from rows, and has given the rest as an exhaustive division of the modes by which the mind apprehends truth. By so doing

he has made a cross division, for  $\sigma o \phi h a$  does not stand apart from  $\nu o \theta s$  and  $\epsilon \pi \iota \sigma \tau \dot{\eta} \mu \eta$ , but includes them, and surely so complex an idea as 'philosophy' ought not to be placed on the same level with the intuitions of the reason, the simplest and deepest forms of the mind. In ch. vi. § 2, however, the logical exhaustiveness of the division is made the only ground for proving that the principles of science are apprehended by reason.

ύπολήψει γὰρ—διαψεύδεσθαί] 'For conception and opinion may be false.' This is suggested probably by Ar. Post. Anal. II. xix. 7: 'Επεὶ δὲ τῶν περὶ τὴν διάνοιαν ἔξεων, αἰς ἀληθεύοιμεν, αὶ μὲν ἀεὶ ἀληθεῖς εἰσίν, αὶ δὲ ἐπιδέχονται τὸ ψεῦδος, οἰον δόξα καὶ λογισμός, ἀληθῆ δ' ἀεὶ ἐπιστήμη καὶ νοῦς, κ.τ.λ. In Ar. De An. III. iii. 7, ὑπόληψις is used in so general a sense for the apprehensions of the mind as to include ἐπιστήμη, δόξα, and φρόνησις. If opposed (as here) to scientific certainty, it comes to very much the same as δόξα.

2 ἐπιστήμη μἐν—ἐπιστητόν] 'Now what science is, will be clear from the following considerations, if we wish to speak exactly and not be misled by resemblances. We all conceive that what we know is necessarily what it is—if it be so only contingently, as soon as it is out of our ken, we cannot tell whether it be so or not. Therefore the object of science is necessary matter.'

ταις ὁμοιότησιν] i.e. the various analogical and inaccurate uses of the word 'knowledge.' Έπιστήμη is to be defined ἀπλῶς and not καθ' ὁμοιότητα, cf. Eth. v. vi. 4. The present passage is taken from Post. Anal. I. ii. I: 'Επίστασθαι δὲ οἰόμεθ Καστον ἀπλῶς—ὅταν τήν τ' αἰτίαν οἰώμεθα γμώσκειν δι' ἡν τὸ πρᾶγμά ἐστιν, ὅτι ἐκείνου αἰτία ἐστί, καὶ μὴ ἐνδέχεσθαι τοῦτ' ἀλλως ἔχειν.—ῶστε οδ ἀπλῶς ἐστιν ἐπιστήμη, τοῦτ' ἀδύνατον ἀλλῶς ἐστιν ἐπιστήμη, τοῦτ' ἀδύνατον ἀλλως ἔχειν.

ℓξω τοῦ θεωρεῖν] 'Out of the reach of our observation.' Θεωρ. here retains more of its original sense of 'seeing' than generally; cf. e.g. ch. i. § 5: ἐν μέν ψ θεωροῦμεν τὰ τομοῖτα κ.τ.λ. Εἰλ. I. vii. 21. In the following chapter, § 4, θεωρεῖν is used for to 'consider' or 'speculate,' though not in the special sense of philosophical speculation.

 $\tau \dot{\alpha} \delta' \dot{\alpha} t \delta i a \kappa. \tau. \lambda.$ ] For a specimen of 'things eternal' cf. Eth. III. iii. 3, and see note.

3 ἔτι διδακτὴ—συλλογισμῷ] 'Again all science appears capable of being imparted by demonstration, and the matter of science appears capable of

διδασκαλία, ὅσπερ καὶ ἐν τοῖς ἀναλυτικοῖς λέγομεν ἡ μὲν γὰρ δι ἐπαγωγῆς, ἡ δὲ συλλογισμῷ, ἡ μὲν δὴ ἐπαγωγὴ ἀρχή ἐστι καὶ τοῦ καθόλου, ὁ δὲ συλλογισμὸς ἐκ τῶν καθόλου. εἰσὶν ἄρα ἀρχαὶ ἐξ ῶν ὁ συλλογισμός, ῶν οὐκ ἔστι συλλογισμός ἐπαγωγὴ ἄρα. ἡ μὲν ἄρα ἐπιστήμη 4 ἐστὶν ἔξις ἀποδεικτική, καὶ ὅσα ἄλλα προσδιορίζόμεθα ἐν τοῖς ἀναλυτικοῖς ὅταν γάρ πως πιστεύη καὶ γνώριμοι being so apprehended. But all demonstration depends on pre-existent knowledge (as we say in analytics also), for it proceeds either by induction or syllogism.'

ὥσπερ λέγομεν This is a general mode of expression, not a particular reference; some MSS, however read έλέγομεν. Eudemus, as we know, wrote a book on analytics (cf. Vol. I. Essay I. p. 32). In his Ethics, II. vi. 5, he speaks, as here, generally of analytics, δήλον δ' δ ἐπιχειροθμεν ὅτι ἀναγκαίον, ἐκ τῶν ἀναλυτικῶν. In the present passage he is borrowing, not quoting, from the opening of Aristotle's Post. Anal. Πασα διδασκαλία καί πάσα μάθησις διανοητική έκ προύπαρχούσης γίνεται γνώσεως. It is the first proof of knowing a thing to be able to impart it, cf. Metaphys. I. i. 12: όλως τε σημείον του είδότος τὸ δύνασθαι διδάσκειν έστίν. Hence, by association with the idea of science, διδασκαλία comes to be almost identical with demonstration, cf. Sophist, Elench. ii. 1: "Εστι δή των έν τώ διαλέγεσθαι λόγων τέτταρα γένη, διδασκαλικοί και διαλεκτικοί και πειραστικοί και έριστικοί, διδασκαλικοί μέν οι έκ των οικείων άρχων έκάστου μαθήματος και οὐκ ἐκ τῶν τοῦ ἀποκρινομένου δοξῶν συλλογιζόμενοι, δεί γάρ πιστεύειν τον μανθάνοντα. Cf. ib. x. II.

ή μέν γὰρ δι' ἐπαγωγῆς κ.τ.λ.] This is taken from Post. Anal. 1. i. 2: where Aristotle, having said that all demonstration depends on previous knowledge, adds that this is true with regard to the mathematics, and also in dialectical arguments, ouolws 8è και περί τους λόγους οί τε διά συλλογισμών και οι δι' έπαγωγής ' άμφότεροι γάρ διά προγιγνωσκομένων ποιούνται την διδασκαλίαν, οι μέν λαμβάνοντες ώς παρά ξυνιέντων, οί δὲ δεικνύντες τὸ καθόλου διά του δήλον είναι το καθ' ξκαστον. What Aristotle had said of dialectical arguments. Eudemus applies to science, which he accordingly asserts to be sometimes inductive. His further assertion that the principles of deductive science are obtained by induction is inconsistent with the conclusion of ch. vi., though it agrees with Ar. Post. Anal. II. xix. 6. In fact ἐπαγωγή seems to be used by Aristotle in the Post. Anal, as equivalent to that amount of experience which is the condition, not the cause, of necessary truths. Cf. ib. I.

4 ἡ μὲν-ἀναλυτικοῖs] 'Science, then, is a demonstrative state of mind, with all the other qualifications which we add in analytics.' Cf. Ar. Post. And. t. ii. 2: 'Ανάγκη και τὴν ἀποδεικτικὴν ἐπιστήμην ἐξ ἀληθῶν τ' εἴναι και πρώτων και ἀμέσων και γνωριμωτέρων και προτέρων και αίτίων τοῦ συμπεράσματος. Aristotle, in his account of science, represents it from its objective side as a deduction of ideas rather than as a state of mind.

IV. Eudemus altered the list of mental operations given by Aristotle (Post. Anal. Lc.) only by the position of νοῦτ, which in first stating his list Eudemus places at the end, probably because, having separated it from διάνοια, he was uncertain about its admission; afterwards he discusses it admission; afterwards he discusses it hefore σοφία, as being prior to it in order of time. The list then appears in Aristotle, διάνοια νοῦτ, ἐπιστήμη τέχνη, φρόνησις σοφία ; in Eudemus, ἐπιστήμη, τέχνη, φρόνησις, σοφία, νοῦς (afterwards νοῦτ, σοφία). This chapter, in treating of art, gives but a scanty account, apparently borrowed from different passages in the Metaphysics of Aristotle. Art, like action, belongs to the sphere of the contingent, but its difference from action is universally recognised (πιστεύομεν και τοις έξ. λόγ.) As shown by an instance, it consists in 'a productive state of mind in harmony with a true law.' It has to do with producing and contriving the production of things that fall neither under the law of nature nor necessity. Rather art deals with the same objects as chance, by which it is often assisted.

I-2 του δ' ἐνδεχομένου — λόγοις]
'Now contingent matter includes the objects both of production and action, but production and action are different. On this point even popular notions sufficiently bear us out.' With regard to ἐξωτερικοὶ λόγοι, cf. Είλ. I. xiii. 9, and see Vol. I. Essays, Appendix B.

3 ével b'— $\pi o i \eta \tau i \kappa i \eta$ ] But since architecture is an art, and may be defined as  $(\delta \pi \epsilon \rho)$  a certain state of mind rationally  $(\mu \epsilon \tau \delta \ \lambda \delta \gamma o \nu)$  productive, and there is no art which is not a rationally productive state of mind, nor again any such state which is not an art: art must be the same as "productive state of mind rightly directed." The procedure here is to take a species of art, and, abstracting what is peculiar, to leave the generic conception remaining, which thus is taken as the definition of the genus.

δπέρ] A logical formula implying identity, convertibility of terms, cf. Eth. VII. xili. I: οὐ γὰρ ἐν φαίη ὅπερ κακὸν τι είναι τὴν ἡδονήν.

ούτε τοιαύτη η οὐ τέχνη] This is a slight discrepancy from Aristotle, who speaks of three modes of production, art, faculty, and intellect, without, however, specifying the difference between them, Metaphys. VI. VII. 3: πάσαι δ' elσίν αὶ ποιήσεις ἡ ἀπὸ τέχνης ἡ ἀπὸ δυνάμεως ἡ ἀπὸ διανοίας. Ib. X. VII. 3: ποιητικής μὲν γὰρ ἐν τῷ ποιούντι καὶ οὐ τῷ ποιούνψω τῆς κυνήσεως ἡ ἀρχή, καὶ τοῦτ' ἐστὶν είτε τέχνη τις είτ' ἀλλη τις δύναμε.

4 loτ1 δè — ποιουμένω] 'Now all art is about creation, and the contriving and considering how something may be created of those things whose existence is contingent, and whose efficient cause exists in the producer and not in the thing produced.' There is not any distinction intended between πεχνάζειν and θεωρεῦν. The absence of the article before θεωρεῦν shows that these belong to the same idea; they are both only an expansion of the term γένευν, and are not to be separated from it, as if the writer was describing different stages in the process of art. We find τεχτάζευ used by Aristotle simply in the sense of 'contriving,' Pol. I. xi. I2: ἀμφότερου γὰρ ἐαυτοῖς ἐτέχνασαν γενέσθαι μονοπωλίαν Ιδ. VI. v. 8: τεχναστέον οδυ ὅπωτ ἀν εὐπορία γένοιτο χρόνιου.

There is the same classification of causes here as in Εth. III. iii. 7, into nature, necessity, chance, and the human intellect. On Aristotle's conception of nature, see Vol. I. Essay V.

5 και τρόπον τινὰ—τέχνη] 'And in a way chance and art are concerned with the same objects.' Eudemus, taking this observation from Aristotle, illustrates it, after his own fashion, with a quotation from Agathon. Cf. Μεταρλγε. vi. vii. 4: τδότων (ποιήσων) δέ τινες γίγνονται και ἀπό ταύτομάτου και ἀπό τόχης παραπλησίως δωσερ ἐν τοῦς ἀπό φύσεως γιγνομένοιε. Cf. Ib. vi. ix. I, where the following question is started: ἀπορήσειε δ' ἄν τις διά τί τὰ μὲν γίγνεται και τέχνη και ἀπό ταύτομάτου, οίον ὑγίεια, τὰ δ' οδ, οίον οίκία. The answer is, that there is a principle of self-movement in the matter to be operated on in the one case, but not in the other. That the devices of art are often suggested, and its results assisted, by chance, need not be confirmed by examples; but while art is thus assisted by chance, on the other hand, it is the main object of art to eliminate chance. Cf. Metaphys. I. i. 5: \(\dagger\) \(\rightarrow\) \(\gamma\) \(\dagger\) έμπειρία τέχνην ἐποίησεν, ώς φησί Πώλος, δρθώς λέγων, ή δ' ἀπειρία The theory of art is but Tixnv. meagre in the writings of Aristotle, His great defect with regard to the subject is, his not having entered into the philosophy of the imagination. Yet still he gives us remarks of far greater interest than what is contained in the brief resumé of Eudemus, cf. especially the saying, Metaphys. VI. vii. 4. that 'all things are done by art, of which the idea exists in the mind,' άπὸ τέχνης δὲ γίγνεται όσων τὸ είδος ἐν τη ψυχή, and add Post. Anal. II. xix. 4: ἐκ δ' ἐμπειρίας ἡ ἐκ παντὸς ἡρεμήσαντος του καθόλου έν τη ψυχή, του ένδι παρά τὰ πολλά, δ αν έν άπασιν έν ένη έκείνοις το αυτό, τέχνης άρχη καί έπιστήμης, έὰν μέν περί γένεσιν, τέχνης, έὰν δὲ περί τὸ ὅν, ἐπιστήμης.

V. Thought (φρόνησι) is next discussed. Its nature we learn from the use of the word 'thoughtful' (φρόνιμοι) to denote those who take good counsel with regard to the general ordering of life. This subject admits of no scientific demonstration : again, it is different from art. We see the quality of 'thought' exemplified in such men as Pericles, who know what is good for themselves and others. knowledge and insight is preserved by temperance, which hence gets its name (σωφροσύνη). Art admits of degrees of excellence, but 'thought' does not. Voluntary error in art is better than non-voluntary, but the reverse in 'thought,' which thus is shown to be more than a mere quality of the intellect,-it becomes part of ourselves (φρονήσεως οὐκ ἔστι λήθη).

Ι περί δὲ φρονήσεως] From Socrates to Eudemus we may trace a distinct progress with regard to the doctrine of ppolynous. Socrates said 'virtue is knowledge' (ἐπιστήμη). Plato first 'virtue is,' afterwards 'virtue implies thought' (φρόνησις). Cf. Meno, p. 98 D: διδακτόν Εδοξεν είναι, εί φρόνησις ή dperή. Theætet. p. 176 B: όμοίωσις δὲ (τῷ θεῷ) δίκαιον καὶ ὅσιον μετά φρονήσεως γενέσθαι. Phædo, p. 69 Α: ἐκεῖνο μόνον τὸ νόμισμα ὀρθόν, άνθ' οδ δεί άπαντα ταθτα καταλλάττεσθαι, φρόνησις, καὶ τούτου μὲν πάντα και μετά τούτου ώνούμενά τε και πιπρασκόμενα τῷ ὅντι ή, καὶ ἀνδρεία καὶ σωφροσύνη και δικαιοσύνη, και ξυλλήβδην άληθης άρετη ή μετά φρονήσεως, καί προσγιγνομένων καί άπογιγνομένων και ήδονων και φόβων και των άλλων πάντων των τοιούτων χωριζόμενα δέ φρονήσεως και άλλαττόμενα άντι άλλήλων, μή σκιαγραφία τις ή ή τοιαύτη άρετη και τώ δντι άνδραποδώδης. This 'thought,' however, he defined as the contemplation of the absolute (Phædo, p. 79 D), and thus identified the moral consciousness with philosophy (see Vol. I. Essay III. p. 194). Aristotle, as we have already seen (Post. Anal, I. xxxiii, 8, quoted on ch. iii. I), proposed as a subject for discussion the distinction between φρόνησις and σοφία. With him φρόνησις was gradually coming to assume its distinctive meaning as practical wisdom; but this was not always clearly marked. Cf. Topics, v. vi. 10, where it is said to be the essential property of φρόνησις to be the highest condition of the reasoning faculty (70 λογιστικόν), just as it is of temperance to be the highest condition of the appetitive part. In another place of the Topics (IV. ii. 2) it is incidentally mentioned that some think φρόνησις to be both a virtue and also a science, but that it is not universally conceded to be a science. Δοκεί γὰρ ένίοις ή φρόνησις άρετή τε και έπιστήμη είναι, και ούθέτερον των γενών ύπ' ούδετέρου περιέχεσθαι οδ μην ύπο πάντων γε συγχωρείται την φρόνησιν έπιστημην elvas. In the Politics, III. iv. 17, it is said to be the only virtue properly belonging to a ruler. 'Η δέ φρόνησις άρχοντος ίδιος άρετη μόνη τὰς γάρ άλλας ξοικεν άναγκαῖον είναι κοινάς καί των άρχομένων και των άρχόντων. 'Αρχομένου δέ γε οὐκ ἔστιν άρετη φρόνησις, άλλα δόξα άληθής. Thus it is used for practical wisdom, but in a broad general sense, with reference to state affairs rather than to individual life, implying, however, an absolute consciousness as opposed to  $d\lambda n\theta hs$ δόξα, Frequently Aristotle uses φρόpyous simply to denote 'thought' or 'wisdom,' without reference to its sphere. Cf. Eth. 1. vi. 11, 1. viii. 6, &c. Finally, it appears in its distinctive sense, De An. I. ii, Q. 'Anaxagoras says that all animals possess rous; they certainly do not all possess equally the reason that gives what we call "thought." oo daireras 8' 8 γε κατά φρόνησιν λεγόμενος νούς πάσιν όμοίως ὑπάρχειν. Rhet, I, ix, 13: φρόνησις δ' έστλν άρετη διανοίας, καθ' ην εδ βουλεύεσθαι δύνανται περί άγαθῶν και κακών των είρημένων είς εύδαιμονίαν. Eth. x. vili. 3, where there is a contrast between the life of contemplation and of practical virtue, pobynous is spoken of as inseparably connected with the latter, while the happiness of contemplation by the pure reason is something apart. In the present book we have the Eudemian exposition and development of Aristotle's theory, which entirely contrasts doo-»ησις with σοφία, and limits the former to the regulation of individual life.

The false etymology here given comes from Plato's Cratylus, p. 411 D, where, after a sportive derivation of φρόνησις, that of σωφροσύνη is added: Η φρόνησις φοράς γάρ έστι και ρού νοήσις. Είη δ' αν και δνησιν ὑπολαβεῖν φοράς · άλλ' οδν περί γε τὸ φέρεσθαί έστιν. εί δὲ βούλει, ἡ γνώμη παντάπασι δηλοί γονής σκέψιν και νώμησιν τὸ γάρ νωμάν και το σκοπείν ταύτον. εί δε βούλει, αὐτὸ ἡ νόησις τοῦ νέου ἐστίν έσις το δε νέα είναι τὰ όντα σημαίνει γιγνόμενα άει είναι τούτου οδν έφιεσθαι την ψυχην μηνύει το δνομα ο θέμενος την νεόεσιν. οδ γάρ νόησις το άρχαιον έκαλείτο, άλλ' άντὶ τοῦ η ει έδει λέγειν δύο, νεόεσιν. σωφροσύνη δὲ σωτηρία οδ νων δη ἐσκέμμεθα, φρονήσεως. Of course σωφροσύνη merely means 'soundmindedness.' But the whole conception of the relation of Temperance to 'Thought' here given agrees with Plato, Repub. 518, C-E.

Therefore it is plain that thought is a sort of virtue and not an art.' 'H770v. as contrasted with αlρετώτερος, stands for ήττον alperós. The phrase dperή τέχνης occurs again ch. vii, § I, The present passage probably has reference to Topics, IV. ii. 2 (l.c.), δοκεί γάρ ένίοις ή φρόνησις άρετή τε και έπιστήμη είναι, where έπιστήμη answers to Téxan in the place before us. To say that there are no degrees of excellence in 'thought' gives it an absolute character, just as it is said that there are degrees in the understanding, but not in the reason. Common language would admit of degrees in thoughtfulness. Cf. Ar. Metaphys. I. i. 2: διά τουτο ταθτα φρονιμώτερα και μαθητικώτερα των μη δυναμένων μνημονεύειν coriv. De An. I. ii. 9, l.c. But here 'thought' is considered as something ideal, just as afterwards, ch. xiii. § 6, it is said to imply all the virtues, δ ἐκὼν ἀμαρτάνων] Eudemus seems often inclined to betake himself to VOL. II. a small antagonism against Platonic doctrines: whether in detail this was original, or borrowed from oral remarks or lost writings of Aristotle, we cannot tell. Cf. Eth. v. ix. 16, v. xi. 9, vr. xiii. 3, &c. Here there seems to be an allusion to the Socratico-Platonic paradox which forms the subject of the Hippias Minor, that to do injustice voluntarily was better than doing it involuntarily (see Vol. I, Essay II. p. 169). Here the contrary is assumed with regard to 'thought,' and the conclusion drawn is, that 'thought' is not an art, in other words (as is said more distinctly afterwards), not merely intellectual. If 'thought' were merely intellectual, then voluntary error in action would not be error at all, because knowledge would remain behind unimpaired; but if 'thought' is a state of the will as well as of the intellect, then voluntary error, as implying a defect of the will, is the worst kind of error. The worst kind of error, morally, is considered to be sinning against knowledge, knowing the right and doing the wrong, which some philosophers deny to be possible. See below, Book vII. ch.

Τὸ δοξαστικόν answers to τὸ λογιστικόν, ch. i. § 6. That opinion deals with contingent matter we are told, Ar. Post. Anal. Ι. ΧΧΧΙΙΙ. 2: λείπεται δόξαν είναι περί τὸ άληθὲς μὲν ἡ ψεῦδος, ἐνδεχόμενον δὲ και άλλως έχευ. After associating opinion with thought, the writer separates them, just as Aristotle separates mooalpeaus from doga, Eth. III. ii. II. In the present passage there is a great want of clearness. We are told that thought is an excellence, or highest state, of a part of the intellect. Hence we should naturally conclude that it was loyos res (cf. ch. xiii. § 5), but the formula throughout used is, that thought is EEs mera λόγου. This formula, in the sense of 'accompanied by inference,' 'able to give an account of itself,' is applied by Aristotle to ἐπιστήμη (see notes on the next page); and so too Plato, Theætetus, 201 D: The μετά λόγου άληθη δόξαν ἐπιστήμην είναι. Cf. Eth. Eud. VIII. ii. 3; οὐ γὰρ άλογος ή φρόνησις, άλλ' έχει λόγον διά τί οδτω πράττει. Thought then is first defined to be 'a reasoning state of mind'; afterwards we are told that thought is not simply a  $\xi\xi_{i}$   $\mu\epsilon\tau\dot{\alpha}$   $\lambda\dot{\alpha}\gamma\omega_{i}$ , by which the writer evidently means to say, that thought is not a mere state of the intellect. It may be indeed true that the moral intellect cannot be separated from the will and personality (cf. ch. xii. § 10), but what is to be complained of is, that the formulæ used for expressing all the truths connected with this subject are so very imperfect.

σημεῖον δ' δτι λήθη] Cf. Eth. I. x. 10, where it is said that 'the moments of virtuous consciousness in the mind are more abiding than the sciences,' and see note. Το φρόνησιs in the Platonic and general sense, of course forgetfulness might attach. Cf. Laws, p. 732 B: ἀνάμνησις δ' ἐστὶν ἐπιρροή φρονήσεων ἀπολειπούσηs.

VI. This chapter treats of reason, but goes no further into the subject than as follows,—science implies principles, and we cannot apprehend these principles by science itself nor by three out of the other four modes of mind which give us truth. It therefore remains, on the grounds of exhaustive division, that reason must be the organ by which we apprehend first principles.

On examination it will be found that the contents of the chapter are borrowed almost verbatim from Aristotle's Post. Analyl. II. xix. 7: 'Emel de râmepl τήν διάνοιαν έξεων, als άληθείο μεν, al μèν del άληθείο είσίν, al δè ἐπτδέχονται τὸ ψεδόος, οἰον δόξα καὶ λογισμός, Εί οθν μηδέν άλλο παρ' ἐπιστήμην γένος έχομεν άληθές, νούς αν είη έπιστήμης άρχή. Aristotle argues that principles must be apprehended either by science or reason; they cannot be apprehended by science, therefore they must be by reason. Eudemus, it will be observed, follows this mode of arguing, only he applies it to all the five organs of truth, which he had before arbitrarily laid down as an exhaustive list. In following implicitly the passage above cited, he has ignored for the time the earlier part of the same chapter, in which Aristotle attributes the origin of universals rather to induction; ib. § 6: Δήλου δή δτι ήμεν τά πρώτα έπαγωγή γνωρίζειν άναγκαΐον. και γάρ και αίσθησις ούτω τὸ καθόλου έμποιεί.

I μετὰ λόγου γὰρ ἡ ἐπιστήμη] 'For science implies inference.' This is evidently the meaning of the present sentence, taken as it is from Post. Anal. l.c. Λόγοι is frequently used to denote 'inference.' Cf. ch. viii. § 9: ὁ μὲν γὰρ νοῦς τῶν δρων, ῶν οὐκ ἔστι λόγοι: xi. 4, τῶν ἐσχάτων νοῦς ἐστὶ καὶ οὐ λόγοι, ἄο.

oόδὲ δὴ — ἐστω] 'Nor of course does philosophy apprehend these principles, for it is the part of the philosopher to possess demonstration about some things.' It need hardly be said that this is a very poor ground for establishing the point in question.

VII. What 'philosophy' is may be learnt from the use of the word σοφότ, as applied to the arts. It denotes 'nicety,' 'subtlety,' 'exactness.' Philosophy, then, is the most subtle of the sciences. It embraces not only deductions, but also principles. It is 'a science of the highest objects with the head on.' It is above both practical thought and science. It is one and permanent, while they are manifold, relative, and changeable. It is higher, as the cosmos is higher than man. Philosophy and not practical thought was the reputed property of men like Thales and Anaxagoras, who were thought to know strange and out-of-the-way, but useless things. On the other hand, 'thought' (φρόνησις) is good counsel about human things. It implies knowledge of particulars as well as of universals. Indeed, the knowledge of the particular gained by experience is its most important element, though it includes the universal also, and in its own sphere, namely, that of action, it is supreme and paramount (άρχιτεκτονική).

1-2 την δὲ σοφίαν—σοφία] 'The term σοφία we apply in the arts to those who are the most finished artists, as, for instance, we call Phidias a consummate (σοφόι) sculptor, and Polycletus a consummate statuary, and in this application we mean nothing else by σοφία than the highest excellence in art. But we conceive that some men possess the quality in a general and not a particular way,—"nor in aught else accomplished," as Homer says in the Margites—

"Not skilled to dig or plough the gods have made him, Nor in aught else accomplished."

We may argue, then, that σοφία, in the sense of philosophy, is the most consummate of the sciences. On the meaning of ἀκρίβεια as applied to the arts, and on the transition of meaning when it is applied to philosophy, see Eth. I. vii. 18, note, and II. vi. 9, note,

3 ωστ' είη -τιμιωτάτων] 'So that philosophy must be the union of reason and science, as it were a science of the highest objects with its head on,' This excellent definition does not appear to have anything in Aristotle exactly answering to it. There are two chief places where Aristotle treats of σοφία, namely, Metaphysics, Book I. i.-ii., and ib. Book x, ch. i,-vii. Metaphys. Book I. opens by showing an ascending scale in knowledge, - perception, experience, art, and the theoretic sciences, or philosophy. Of philosophy we are told that it is the science of first causes, it is most universal, most exact, and most entirely sought for its own sake, &c.

ή την φρόνησιν σπουδαιοτάτην οἴεται εἶναι, εἰ μὴ τὸ ἄριστον τῶν ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ ἄνθρωπός ἐστιν. εἰ δὴ ὑγιεινὸν 4 μὲν καὶ ἀγαθὸν ἔτερον ἀνθρώποις καὶ ἰχθύσι, τὸ δὲ λευκὸν καὶ εὐθὺ ταὐτὸν ἀεἰ, καὶ τὸ σοφὸν ταὐτὸν πάντες ᾶν εἴποιεν, Φρόνιμον δὲ ἔτερον τὸ γὰρ περὶ αὐτὸ ἔκαστα εὖ

(Met. I. ii. 2-6). Philosophy begins in wonder, wonder at first about things near at hand, afterwards about the sun, moon, and stars, and the creation of the universe (Ib. & 9). It ends in certainty and a sense of the necessity of certain truths (1b. § 16). We may see that this account is perfectly general-it does not distinguish in philosophy between mathematics. physics, and metaphysics. It even attributes a practical scope to philosophy, saying that philosophy, by taking cognisance of the good, determines the object of the other sciences (1b. § 7), ἀρχικωτάτη δὲ τῶν ἐπιστημών, και μάλλον άρχική τής ύπηρετούσης, ή γνωρίζουσα τίνος ένεκέν έστι πρακτέον έκαστου · τοῦτο δ' έστὶ τάγαθον έν έκάστοις, δλως δὲ τὸ άριστον έν τη φύσει πάση. From a certain immaturity thus shown, it would be difficult to believe that the account in Metaphys. Book L was written after that in the present chapter of the Ethics. In Metaphys. Book x. the subject is taken up anew, and treated much more fully. Physics, practical science, and mathematics, are now separated from philosophy proper. Ib. i. 4: οὐδὲ περί τὰς ἐν τοῖς φυσικοῖς είρημένας αίτίας την ζητουμένην έπιστήμην θετέον. Ούτε γάρ περί το ού ένεκεν τοιούτον γάρ τάγαθόν, τούτο δ' έν τοίς πρακτοίς ὑπάρχει και τοίς οδσιν έν κινήσει. Ιδ. i. 7: ούδὲ μὴν περί τὰ μαθηματικά-χωριστόν γάρ αὐτῶν οὐθέν. These, however, are branches of philosophy, Ib. iv. 3: διὸ καὶ ταύτην (την φυσικήν) και την μαθηματικήν έπιστήμην μέρη της σοφίας είναι θετέον. Cf. Met. III. iii. 4: Egyl 82 goola 713 και ή φυσική, άλλ' οὐ πρώτη. Hence we get the famous division of speculative sciences, Met. x. vii. 9: δηλον τοίνυν δτι τρία γένη των θεωρητικών έπιστημών έστί, φυσική, μαθηματική, θεολογική. Βέλτιστον μέν οδν τὸ τῶν θεωρητικών έπιστημών γένος, τούτων δ' αὐτων ή τελευταία λεχθείσα περί τὸ τιμιώτατον γάρ έστι των δντων, βελτίων δὲ καὶ γείρων ἐκάστη λέγεται κατά τὸ οἰκεῖον ἐπιστητόν. Philosophy, then, in the highest sense, may be called theology, or the science of the divine, that is, of pure, transcendental (χωριστή), immutable being. It is the science of being qua being (τοῦ δυτος ή δυ ἐπιστήμη). Eudemus. following in the wake of this discussion, has adopted as much of its results as suited his purpose. He speaks of philosophy as having the highest objects (TOV THINTATOV, cf. Met. x. vii. 9, l.c.), but he does not distinguish its different branches. He includes in it both physical and mathematical ideas (§ 4, τὸ δὲ λευκὸν και εύθυ ταυτόν del : ib. έξ ων δ κόσμος συνέστηκεν), though he uses σοφός once in its special sense to denote a metaphysical, as opposed to mathematical or physical, philosopher. Ch. viii. § 6 : μαθηματικός μέν παίς γένοιτ' άν, σοφὸς δ' ή φυσικός ού. In short, his object is rather to contrast philosophy with practical thought than exactly to define it. His attributing to it a union of intuition with reasoning seems however a happy result of his present method of discussion. (See Vol. I, Essay I, p. 53, sq.)

7 Owing to its practical character, 'thought' (φρόνησις) necessarily implies a knowledge of particulars. The particular, indeed, would seem for action the more important element, as appears also in other things, if we compare science with empirical knowledge.

VIII. This chapter fulfils a promise made before in the Eudemian Ethics (I. viii, 18), by distinguishing 'thought' from other modifications of the same practical quality, namely, economy and the various forms of politics. This distinction would at first sight tend to reduce 'thought' to mere egotism (§ 3, δοκεί μάλιστ' είναι ή περί αὐτὸν καί ἔνα. § 4: τὸ αὐτῷ elôérai), and thus to isolate the individual within himself. In order to obviate this, the writer brings forward arguments to show that the welfare of the individual is bound up with that of the family and the state (§ 4). He urges the difficulty of knowing one's own interest, hence concluding that 'thought' is no mere instinct of selfishness. 'Thought' implies a wide experience, on which account boys εξις, το μέντοι είναι οὐ ταὐτον αὐταῖς. τῆς δὲ περὶ πόλιν ή μὲν ὡς ἀρχιτεκτονική φρόνησῖς νομοθετική, ή δὲ ὡς τὰ καθ' εκαστα τὸ κοινὸν εχει ὅνομα, πολιτική αὕτη δὲ πρακτική καὶ βουλευτική τὸ γὰρ ψήφισμα πρακτὸν ὡς τὸ ἔσχατον. διὸ πολιτεύεσθαι τούτους μόνους λέγουσιν μόνου cannot attain to it, no more than they can to philosophy, though they are often elever in mathematics (§§ 5-6). 'Thought' is a sort of deduction with a universal and a particular element (§ 7), and yet we must distinguish it from science on this very account, that it deals with particulars (§ 8). It is the opposite to reason, which is of first principles, while thought is rather an intuition of particular facts (analogous to apprehending a mathematical figure). At all events, one form of thought is of this character.

1-3 ἔστι δὲ — δικαστική] politics and "thought" are really the same faculty of mind, though they would be defined differently. Thought dealing with the state is divided into first,-legislation, which is the master-spirit as it were; and secondly, politics in detail, which is practical as being deliberative (for a "measure" is like the practical application of a general principle), and which usurps the common name of politics; hence too they who are concerned with particular measures alone get the name of politicians, for these alone act, like workmen under a master. Just so that appears to be especially "thought" which is concerned with the individual self. And this kind usurps the common name of "thought," while the other kinds I have alluded to may be specified as-first, economy; second, legislation; and third, politics (in the restricted sense), which may be subdivided into the deliberative and the judicial.' This distinction was promised before, Eth. Eud. I. viii. 8: "Ωστε τοῦτ' αν είη αὐτὸ τὸ άγαθὸν τὸ τέλος των ανθρώπω πρακτών. Τοῦτο δ' έστι τὸ ύπὸ την κυρίαν πασών. Αθτη δ' έστι πολιτιλή και οικονομική και φρόνησις. Διαφέρουσι γάρ αθται αί έξεις πρός τὰς ἄλλας τω τοιαύται είναι. πρός δ' άλλήλας εί τι διαφέρουσιν, υστερον λεκτέον. It would appear that Eudemus by a sort of afterthought united the conception of pobryous, which was developed later, to that of πολιτική, to which Aristotle had assigned the apprehension of the chief good for man (cf. Eth. I. ii. 5). But in so doing he had to bring together two different things; for opomous was a psychological term expressing a faculty of the mind, but πολιτική was merely one of the divisions of the sciences. In order to make them commensurate, Eudemus alters the signification of πολιτική. He treats it as a state of mind (Egis), as a mode of φρόνησις, dealing with the state either universally or in details. From the same later point of view he adds also οίκονομική; cf. Ar. Pol. I. iii. I: Έπει δέ φανερον έξ ων μορίων ή πόλις συνέστηκεν, άναγκαίον περί οίκονομίας είπείν πρότερον, &c.

2 ώτ τὸ ἐσχατον] The ψήφισμα or particular measure is here compared to the minor term in a syllogism, i.e. it constitutes the application of a general principle. Cf. Εθλ. v. x. 6. On the use of ἐσχατον in this purely technical and logical sense, cf. 8% 8-9: Ar. Μεt. x. i. 9: πᾶτ γὰρ λόγος καὶ πᾶσα ἐπιστήμη τῶν καθόλου

γὰρ πράττουσιν οὖτοι ὤσπερ οἱ χειροτέχναι δοκεῖ δὲ καὶ 3 φρόνησις μάλιστ' εἶναι ἡ περὶ αὐτὸν καὶ ε̆να. καὶ ε̆χει αὐτη τὸ κοινὸν ὄνομα, φρόνησις ἐκεἰνων δὲ ἡ μὲν οἰκονομία ἡ δὲ νομοθεσία ἡ δὲ πολιτική, καὶ ταύτης ἡ μὲν βουλευτικὴ ἡ δὲ δικαστική. εἶδος μὲν οὖν τι ἄν εἴη γνώσεως τὸ αὐτῷ 4 εἰδέναι ἀλλ' ἔχει διαφορὰν πολλήν καὶ δοκεῖ ὁ τὰ περὶ

4 elos µèr obr—πoλιτείαs] 'Now it must be considered a species of knowledge to know one's own interest, but this opens matter for controversy. The man who knows his own concerns and occupies himself with these is commonly considered thoughtful, while politicians are called busybodies, and hence Euripides wrote:—

When well I might, mixed with the common herd,

Enjoy a lot full equal with the best. But ah! how full of vanity is man! The restless meddling spirits in the state

Are gaped at still and made the country's gods.

Men with these selfish principles seek their own advantage, and this, they consider, is what they have to do. From this notion the idea has grown that they are the thoughtful. And yet, perhaps, the welfare of the individual is inseparable from the regulation of the household and from the existence of a state.'

geometry and mathematics, and become clever in such things, no boy seems to attain to "thoughtfulness." The writer is arguing against the identification of 'thought' with an instinct of selfishness. If it were so simple, why should not boys possess it? διότι is for ore as in Eth. Eud. VII. x. 20: Αίτιον δὲ τοῦ μάχεσθαι, διότι καλλίων μέν ή ήθική φιλία, άναγκαιοτέρα δὲ ή χρησίμη. Cf. Ar. Meteor. ¬ħ δτι—ἀδηλον] 'The reason surely is that the former matters (i.e. mathematics) are abstract, while the principles of the latter (physics and philosophy) are got by experience; thus boys repeat truths of the latter kind, without being really convinced of them; while the nature of the other subjects is easy to comprehend.'

δι' άφαιρέσεως | The form in Aristotle is either έν άφαιρέσει or έξ άφαιρέσεως. He constantly applies these terms to denote the mathematics. The locus classicus on this subject is Metaphys. x. iii. 7 : Καθάπερ δ' ὁ μαθηματικός περί τὰ έξ άφαιρέσεως την θεωρίαν ποιείται, περιελών γάρ πάντα τὰ αίσθητά θεωρεί, οίον βάρος και κουφότητα και σκληρότητα και τούναντίον, έτι δέ και θερμότητα και ψυχρότητα και τάς άλλας τὰς αίσθητὰς ἐναντιώσεις, μόνον δέ καταλείπει το ποσον και συνεχές, κ.τ.λ. Cf. De Cœlo, III. i. II: διά τὸ τά μέν έξ άφαιρέσεως λέγεσθαι τά μαθηματικά, τὰ δὲ φυσικά ἐκ προσθέσεως. De Anima, III. vii. 10: οδτω τὰ. μαθηματικά οὐ κεγωρισμένα ώς κεγωρισμένα νοεί, όταν νοή ἐκείνα.

πιστεύουσι] Cf. ch. iii. § 4, note, and Eth. VII. iii. 8: οι πρώτον μαθόντες συνείρουσι μέν τοὺς λόγους, ίσασι δ' οὅπω.

7 Another argument to prove the complex and difficult character of

'thought' is that it implies a kind of syllogism, wherein both the major premiss and the minor equally admit of error.

τὰ βαρύσταθμα ΰδατα φαῦλα] This was probably a medical notion of the day. Cf. Problems, I. xiii., where a similar superstition is maintained: Διὰ τί τὸ τὰ ὕδατα μεταβάλλειν νοσωδές φασιν είναι, τὸ δὲ τὸν ἀξρα οῦ;— ὕδατος μέν πολλὰ είδη ἐστὶ καὶ διάφορα καθ αὐτά, ἀξρος δὲ οῦ, ὥστε καὶ τοῦτο αῖτιον.

8 δτι δ'—τοιοθτον] 'But (though implying a syllogism) it is plain that "thought" is not science, for it deals with the particular, as we have said, the action being of this kind.'

9 artikeitai - elõos] 'To reason, indeed, it forms the opposite pole; for while reason deals with those terms which are above all inference. "thought," on the other hand, deals with the particular, which is below demonstration, and is apprehended by perception; not the perception of the separate senses, but analogous to that faculty by which we perceive that the immediate object presented to us in mathematics is a triangle. For on this side also demonstration must cease. However, it is rather this particular mode of thought which is a perception, the other presents a different form.'

alluded to the syllogistic nature of 'thought,' the writer seems to have been reminded to distinguish it from science; and thus, having before (ch. v. § 8; ch. vii. § 6) contrasted it with art and philosophy, he is led on to finish the round by placing it in contrast with reason.

ούχ ή των ίδιων, άλλ' οία αίσθανόμεθα] This is the same as Aristotle's famous distinction between the 'separate senses' and the 'common sense.' His own words are clear on the point ; cf. De Anima, II. vi. 2 : Λέγω δ' ίδιον μέν (αλσθητόν) δ μή ένδέχεται έτέρα αλσθήσει αλσθάνεσθαι, καλ περλ δ μη ενδέχεται άπατηθήναι, οδον δψις χρώματος και άκοη ψόφου και γεθσις χυμού.-Τὰ μέν οθν τοιαθτα λέγεται ίδια έκάστου, κοινά δὲ κίνησις, ήρεμία, άριθμός, σχήμα, μέγεθος τὰ γὰρ τοιαθτα οὐδεμιᾶς έστιν ίδια, άλλά κοινά πάσαις και γάρ άφη κίνησίς τίς έστιν αίσθητή και όψει. It will be seen that figure  $(\sigma \chi \hat{\eta} \mu a)$  is one of the objects of the 'common sense;' the text gives as an instance of this the perception of a triangle. In De An. III. i. 6, Aristotle adds 'unity' to the list of 'common sensibles,' but he reduces them all to modifications of the perception of motion; ravra γάρ πάντα κινήσει αίσθανόμεθα, οδον μέγεθος κινήσει. "Ωστε και σχήμα." μέγεθος γάρ τι τὸ σχήμα. Τὸ δ' ήρεμοθν τῷ μὴ κινείσθαι · ὁ δ' ἀριθμὸς τή ἀποφάσει τοῦ συνεχούς, κ.τ.λ. Ηθ admits (De An. II. vi. 4) that 'common sensibles' can scarcely be said to be apprehended by sense at all, τῶν δὲ καθ' αὐτὰ αἰσθητών τὰ ίδια κυρίως έστιν αίσθητά; cf. Ib. III. i. 6, where it is said these are apprehended accidentally or concomitantly by the senses. This is surely the true view: we see in the apprehension of number, figure, and the like, not an operation of sense, but the mind putting its own forms and categories, i.e. itself, on the external object. It would follow then that the senses cannot really be separated from the mind; the senses and the mind each contribute an element to every knowledge, Aristotle's doctrine of Kowh alabnas would go far, if carried out, to modify his doctrine of the simple and innate character of the senses, e.g. sight (cf. Eth. II. i. 4), and would prevent its absolute collision with Berkeley's Theory of Vision. On the general subject of κοιν. αίσθ. see Sir W. Hamilton, Reid's Works, pp. 828-830.

ότι τὸ ἐν τοῖς μαθηματικοῖς ἔσχατον τρίγωνων] This has been frequently understood to mean that 'the ultimate or simplest possible figure is a triangle.' But the Paraphrast does not so explain it: his words are τοῦτον δέ τον τρόπον και οι μαθηματικοί τὸ αίσθητον γινώσκουσι τρίγωνον, κ.τ.λ. And referring to Ar. Post, Analyt, I. i. 4, we find exactly this instance given of a particular knowledge, the result of observation, ότι μέν γάρ πᾶν τρίγωνον έχει δυσίν δρθαίς ίσας, προήδει ' ότι δὲ τόδε τό ἐν τῶ ἡμικυκλίω τρίγωνον έστιν άμα έπαγόμενος έγνώρισεν. The term έσχατον is used in the very next line : eviw yap τοθτον τὸν τρόπον ἡ μάθησίς ἐστι, καὶ ού διά τοῦ μέσου τὸ ἔσχατον γνωρίζεται. It is true that in different places Aristotle uses ξσχατον in different senses. as denoting with various applications άλλ' αὕτη μάλλον αἴσθησις †ή φρόνησις, ἐκείνης δ' ἄλλο εἶδος.

στήσεται γὰρ κάκεῖ] 'For on that side too (i.e. in dealing with an object of the sense as well as an intuition of reason) demonstration must stop.' Ίστασθαι is a common logical form, it is opposed to mpoiévas els άπειρον, and is frequently impersonal; cf. Post. Anal. I. iii. I: ἀδύνατον γὰρ τὰ ἄπειρα διελθείν. Εί τε ίσταται καί είσιν άρχαι, κ.τ.λ. Met. II. iv. 22, &c. άλλ' αθτη μάλλον αίσθησις + ή φρόνησις Three of Bekker's MSS. read ή φρόνησις, and this seems most natural, and to give the best sense (though # is supported by the Paraphrast). What the writer means is apparently to add that only one kind of thought can be called analogous to the apprehension of a triangle; abin refers to ή καθ' ἔκαστα φρόνησις, mentioned above, ch. vii. § 7: δεῖ ἄμφω έχειν ή ταύτην μάλλον. There is another kind (exclus), namely, the possession of universal ideas (Tŵr

examination of a set of faculties cognate to 'Thought,' or forming part The first of these is good counsel (εὐβουλία). This, says the writer, is to be distinguished from science, which does not deliberate; from guessing (εὐστοχία), which is too quick; from sagacity (dyxiroua), which is a kind of guessing; and from opinion, which is too definite. It consists, then, in a certain 'rightness:' it chooses the right means to a good end. The conception of this end 'Thought' itself must supply. There is a great assumption here of the manner of Aristotle. The chapter seems formed after Eth. III. ii.; § 6 reminds us of many similar passages in Book IV., and § 7 is after the manner of Eth. I. iii. 5. There is an advance upon Aristotle's account of deliberation (Eth. III. iii.) in two points; (1) the process is illustrated here by the logical formula of the syllogism; (2) there is a mention here of the faculty whereby ends are apprehended, which Aristotle had left unnoticed. Eth. III. iii. I. note.

I It is an abrupt, awkward commencement of the chapter to say, 'inquiring and deliberating are different, for deliberating is a species of inquiring.' But what is meant apparently is, to bring 'good counsel' under the head of inquiring, which separates it at once from both science and opinion. ζητεῖ καὶ λογίζεται. ἀλλὰ μὴν οὐδ' εὐστοχία. ἄνευ τε γὰρ λόγου καὶ ταχύ τι ἡ εὐστοχία, βουλεύονται δὲ πολύν χρόνον, καὶ φασὶ πράττειν μὲν δεῖν ταχὺ τὰ βουλευθέντα, 3 βουλεύεσθαι δὲ βραδέως. ἔτι ἡ ἀγχίνοια ἔτερον καὶ ἡ εὐβουλία ἔστι δ' εὐστοχία τις ἡ ἀγχίνοια οὐδὲ δὴ δόξα ἡ εὐβουλία οὐδεμία. ἀλλ' ἐπεὶ ὁ μὲν κακῶς βουλευόμενος ἀμαρτάνει, ὁ δ' εὖ ὀρθῶς βουλεύεται, δῆλον ὅτι ὀρθότης τις ἡ εὐβουλία ἐστίν, οὕτ' ἐπιστήμης δὲ οὕτε δόξης ἐπιστήμης μὲν γὰρ οὐκ ἔστιν ὀρθότης (οὐδὲ γὰρ ἀμαρτία), δόξης δ' ὀρθότης ἀλήθεια ἄμα δὲ καὶ ἄρισται ἤδη πᾶν οὖ δόξα ἐστίν. ἀλλὰ μὴν οὐδ' ἄνευ λόγου ἡ εὐβουλία. διανοίας ἄρα λείπεται αὕτη γὰρ οὔπω φάσις καὶ γὰρ ἡ δόξα οὐ

2 φαπὶ πράπτεν μὲν δεῖν ταχὸ κ.τ.λ.] Fritzsche quotes Isocr. Demon. p. 9, c. § 35: βουλεύου μὲν βραδέως ἐπιτθλει δὲ ταχέως τὰ δόξαντα. Herod. VII. 49; ἀνὴρ δὴ οὕτω ᾶν εἴη άρωτος, εἰ βουλευόμενος μὲν ἀρρωδέοι, πᾶν ἐπιλεγόμενος πείσεσθαι χρῆμα, ἐν δὲ τῷ ἔργφ θρασὸς εἴη.

3 ἔστι δ' εὐστοχία τις ἡ ἀγχίνοια] This is announced by Aristotle, Post. And. I. xxxiv. I, in the very next line to that passage on the distinction of the organs of truth, which apparently suggested so much of the subjects of the present book, ἡ δ' ἀγχίνοιά ἐστιν εὐστοχία τις ἐν ἀσκέπτψ χρόνψ τοῦ μέσου. In more general terms ἀγχίνοια is defined by Plato, Charmides, p. 160 A, as ἀξύτης τις τῆς ψυχῆς.

ἐπιστήμης μὲν—λογίζεται] 'Now in science there is no such thing as "rightness," for there is no such thing as wrongness. In opinion, on the other hand, rightness is truth (and not good counsel). And besides, whatever we have an opinion about is already decided. But good counsel is not by any means beyond questioning (ἄνευ λόγου). Therefore it must be a kind of operation of the reason (διαλοιά βαλ λείπεται), for this does not amount to decision. Opinion is not an inquiry, but is already a kind of decision. On the other hand, he that deliberates, whether well or ill, is inquiring after something and calculating.'

έπιστήμης] This is said here just as it was before said, ch. v. § 7, that there were no degrees of excellence in Thought.

 $\delta \delta \xi \eta s \delta'$ ] Cf. Eth. III. ii. 13, and above, ch. ii. § 2, note.

διανοίας dpa] Plato, Repub. p. 511 D, proposed to confine the term διάνοια to the discursive understanding as opposed to vovs, the intuitive and speculative reason, διάνοιαν δέ καλείν μοι δοκείς την των γεωμετρικών τε καί την των τοιούτων έξιν άλλ' οὐ νοῦν, ώς μεταξύ τι δόξης τε και νου την διάνοιαν οὖσαν. Aristotle probably had the same distinction in view, Post. Anal, I. xxxiii. 9 (l.c.), mûs δεί διανείμαι έπί τε διανοίας και νου. But he did not maintain the distinction in his works, and certainly it is not observed by Eudemus in the present book, where both νους πρακτικός and διάνοια θεωρητική are spoken of. In the place before us διάνοια apparently means the exercise of the reason.

4 ἐπεὶ δ'—βεβουλεῦσθαι] 'But since the term "rightness" is used in more senses than one, it is plain that "good counsel" does not answer to all the senses. For the incontinent or bad man will obtain, by his calculation, what he proposes to himself to obtain, so that he will have deliberated rightly, yet secured a great evil. Whereas, to have deliberated well is generally thought (δοκεῖ) to be a good.'

πλεοναχῶs] i.e. rightness of means, either respective or irrespective of rightness in the end; or, again, rightness of end (§ 5), whatever may have been the means.

ό γὰρ ἀκρατής] It would seem rather the abandoned man (ἀκόλαστος) who by calculation attains bad ends. The incontinent man would not generally have deliberation attributed to him; cf. Eth. vII. ii. 2. But the characters cannot be kept very distinct.

δοκεί δ' ἀγαθόν] Fritzsche quotes Herod. VII. 10: τὸ γὰρ εδ βουλεύεσθαι κέρδος μέγιστον εὐρίσκω ἐὐν. Sophocles, Απίιζ. 1050: κράτιστον κτημάτων εὐβουλία. Isocr. Demon. p. 9, c. § 35: ἡγοῦ κράτιστον εἶναι παρὰ μὲν τῶν θεῶν εὐτυχίαν, παρὰ δὲ ἡμῶν αὐτῶν εὐβουλίαν.

5 ἀλλ' ἐστι—είναι] 'But, further, it is possible to obtain what is good by a false syllogism, and to hit on doing what one ought, not however by the right means, but with a false middle term.' It is an inaccuracy to speak of a 'false middle term.' Falsehood or truth is the attribute of a proposition, not a term; cf. De Interpret. i. 3: περί γὰρ σύνθεων καὶ διαίρεσίν ἐστι τὸ ψεῦδος καὶ τὸ ἀληθές. If the conception of the end be right and yet the syllogism wrong, it follows that the minor premiss must be false, thus:

Preservation of health is good:
Abstinence from intellectual labour is preservation of health:

the result of which syllogism will be the preservation of health, but by the sacrifice of mental culture. 6 δι' οὖ ἔδει. ἔτι ἔστι πολὺν χρόνον βουλευόμενον τυχεῖν, τὸν δὲ ταχύ. οὐκοῦν οὐδ' ἐκείνη πω εὐβουλία, ἀλλ' ὀρθότης 7 ἡ κατὰ τὸ ὡφέλιμον, καὶ οῦ δεῖ καὶ ὡς καὶ ὅτε. ἔτι ἔστι καὶ ἀπλῶς εῦ βεβουλεῦσθαι καὶ πρός τι τέλος. ἡ μὲν δὴ ἀπλῶς ἡ πρὸς τὸ τέλος τὸ ἀπλῶς κατορθοῦσα, ἡ δέ τις ἡ πρός τι τέλος. εἰ δὴ τῶν φρονίμων τὸ εῦ βεβουλεῦσθαι, ἡ εὐβουλία εἴη ἃν ὀρθότης ἡ κατὰ τὸ συμφέρον πρός τι τέλος, οῦ ἡ φρόνησις ἀληθὴς ὑπόληψίς ἐστιν.

10 "Εστι δὲ καὶ ἡ σύνεσις καὶ ἡ ἀσυνεσία, καθ' ᾶς λέγομεν συνετοὺς καὶ ἀσυνέτους, οἴθ' ὅλως τὸ αὐτὸ ἐπιστήμη ἡ δόξη

6-7 The writer first raises good counsel to the rank of one of the virtues, by the mention of all the qualifications necessary; afterwards he seems to modify this by saying that, besides the absolute good counsel which aims at the absolute and, there is also such a thing as relative good counsel aiming at relative ends.

One might have thought that it was unnecessary to give so separate a psychological existence to excellence in deliberation. However, the quality here described answers more nearly than φρόνησις to what we call 'prudence.' Φρόνησις, we are here told, is the conception of ends, and afterwards (ch. xii, § 9) it is shown to be the faculty of means. In truth, it is both, according to the Aristotelian views (as far as we can discern them); it implies both prudence (εὐβουλία), and also a certain moral condition (doern), and it is implied by both of them. As compared with the one it is of ends, and as compared with the other it is of means.

X. This chapter treats of another faculty which forms an element in wisdom, and yet may be distinguished from it, namely, apprehension (σύνεσις). Apprehension is not mere opinion (else all would possess it), nor is it a science, for it deals with no separate class of objects whether necessary or contingent (οδτε γάρ περί των άει δυτων και άκινήτων ή σύνεσις έστιν, ούτε περί των γιγνομένων ότουoûv). It deals with all that can be matter of human deliberation, in short. with the same objects as Thought. But Thought commands; it is concerned with right action; in short, it belongs to the will as well as to reason. But apprehension only judges, it is merely intellectual. It is neither the having nor the getting Thought, but rather it is the application of one's knowledge to give a meaning to the dicta of wisdom. It is 'understanding,' as its name implies, or 'putting things together' (συνιέναι) when another person speaks.

Aristotle had spoken of civesus as one of the intellectual excellences, Eth. I. xiii. 20: cooptar why and civesus and opporture in the contract of civesus the contract of civesus the contract of civesus, the operation of which he contract of the contract of the contract of civesus, the operation of which he contract of the contract of civesus, the operation of which he contract of civesus of the civesus the meaning of moral dicta and critical judgment thereon. That there is such a faculty of apprehension, and of sympathetic or critical understanding, quite distinct from moral goodness in people, the experience of life seems to show.

The author of the Magna Moralia gives a much inferior account of σύνεσις (I. xxxv. 17), making its characteristic to be that it deals with small matters, περl μκρων τε καί εν μικρών ή κρίσις.

Ι διό περί τὰ αὐτὰ μὲν τῷ φρονήσει] It is used nearly equivalently to φρόνησει by Thuoyd. I. 140: Δικαιῶ τοῦς κοινῷ δόξασιν, ἡν ἄρα τι καὶ σφαλλώμεθα, βοηθεῖν, ἡ μηδὲ κατορθοῦντας τῆς ξυνέσεως μεταποιεῖσθα.

2 ἡ μὲν γὰρ φρόνησις ἐπιτακτική ἐστιν—ἡ δὲ σύνεσις κριτική μόνον] The opposition of these terms is taken from Plato, Politicus, p. 259 k—260 c, where it is argued that the arithmetician (λογιστή») is content with a knowledge and judgment about numbers, whereas the architect (ἀρχιτέκτων) must go on to apply his knowledge by directing the workmen—thus that all science may be divided under the two heads of critical and mandatory. (260 A) Οδκοῦν γνωστικα! μὲν αἴ τε νοιαθται ξύμπασαι καὶ δπόσαι ξυνέπονται τἢ λογιστική, κρίσει δὲ καὶ ἐπιτάξει διαφέρετον ἀλλήλοιν τούτω τὼ γένες —φαίνεσθον, *Αρ' οδιν συμπάσης τῆς γνωστικής εἰ τὸ μὲν ἐπιτακτικὸ μέρος, τὸ δὲ κρίτικὸν διαιρούμενοι προσείπουμεν, ἐμμελῶς ἄν φαίμεν διηρήσθαι; κατά γε τὴν ἐμὴν δόξαν.

3 άλλ' ώσπερ το μανθάνειν λέγεται συνιέναι δταν χρήται τη έπιστήμη] The word μανθάνειν was ambiguous in Greek; it meant either to 'learn' or to 'understand,' The Sophists used to play on this ambiguity, arguing that one could 'learn what one knew already.' Cf. Ar. Soph. Elench. IV. I, 2, which illustrates the present passage: Είσι δέ παρά μέν την όμωνυμίαν οί τοιοίδε των λόγων, οίον ότι μανθάνουσιν οί έπιστάμενοι τὰ γὰρ άποστοματιζόμενα μανθάνουσιν οί γραμματικοί. XI. This chapter (which is not conveniently divided as it stands) opens with a mention of the quality of considerateness  $(\gamma \gamma \omega_{\mu} u_{\eta})$ , and proceeds to point out how various qualities unite in 'thought,' and what are the natural and intuitive elements which it contains.

I ἡ δὲ καλουμένη γκώμη] By the progress of psychology, this term came to bear the special meaning of considerateness.' At first it meant knowledge in general, cf. Theognis, vv. 895 sq.

Οὐδ' αγνωμοσύνης, Κύρν', δδυνηρότερον.

In Thucydides it bore a variety of significations, especially when used in the plural, standing for almost anything mental, 'minds' as opposed to bodies, 'thoughts' as opposed to deeds; 'feelings,' 'principles,' 'maxima,' &c. In Aristotle's Rhetoric, II. Axiz. 2-15, γνώμη is used for a moral maxim (such as those of the so-called Gnomic Poets); so also for all popular sayings, Soph. El. xvii. 17. It was probably from the association of συγγνώμη that γνώμη came to have its distinctive meaning. The author of the Magna Moralia calls it εύγνωμοσύνη, and makes it a sort of passive form of έπιείκεια (II. ii. 1): έστι μέν οδν ούκ άνευ έπιεικείας ἡ εύγνωμοσύνη. Τό μέν γὰρ κρύναι τοῦ εὐγνωμοσόνη. δὲ δὴ πράττειν κατὰ τὴν κρίσιν τοῦ έπιεικούς.

όρθη δ' ή τοῦ ἀληθοῦς] 'Now by a right considerateness is meant a true one.' This must be the import of the sentence, but the writer says not ἀληθοῦς—probably 'by attraction' to τοῦ ἐπιεικοῦς. But it is an inaccuracy of language to speak of 'a true man' in the sense of 'a man whose judgment is true.' Stahr translates τοῦ ἐπιεικοῦς as if it were neuter. But the 'equitable man' here apparently gives the standard for γικόμη, as the φρόνιμος for virtue, Εth. II. vi. 15.

είναι περὶ ὧν ὁ φρόνιμος, συνετὸς καὶ εὐγνώμων ἡ συγγνώμων τὰ γὰρ ἐπιεικῆ κοινὰ τῶν ἀγαθῶν ἀπάντων ἐστὶν ἐν τῷ πρὸς ἄλλον. ἔστι δὲ τῶν καθ' ἔκαστα καὶ τῶν ἐσχά- 3 των πάντα τὰ πρακτά καὶ γὰρ τὸν φρόνιμον δεῖ γινώσκειν αὐτά, καὶ ἡ σύνεσις καὶ ἡ γνώμη περὶ τὰ πρακτά, ταῦτα δ' ἔσχατα. καὶ ὁ νοῦς τῶν ἐσχάτῶν ἐπ' ἀμφότερα καὶ 4 γὰρ τῶν πρώτων ὅρων καὶ τῶν ἐσχάτων νοῦς ἐστὶ καὶ οὐ λόγος, καὶ ὁ μὲν κατὰ τὰς ἀποδείξεις τῶν ἀκινήτων ὅρων naturally tend to the same point; we apply (emidenovies) the terms considerateness, apprehension, thought, and reason to the same persons, and say (λέγομεν) that they have considerateness, that they have attained to  $(\hbar \delta \eta)$ reason-that they are thoughtfulthat they are apprehensive. For all these faculties deal with ultimate truths (των ἐσχάτων) and particulars; and it is by being able to judge of those matters with which the thoughtful man is concerned that a man is apprehensive, considerate, or forgiving. Equity extends itself over all the forms of good which consist in a relation to one's neighbour.'

νοθν ήδη | What this means is not quite clear. It may refer to what is said in § 6, ήδε ή ήλικία νουν έχει. Thus it might be nearly equivalent to our saying of a person that he had 'attained to years of discretion.' Or again, it may refer to the moment of action, and hon would be thus equivalent to the French voild. 'There is reason exhibited. "Hôn is used similarly to denote the present moment, Eth. Eud. II. viii. II: Kal γάρ ὁ έγκρατευόμενος λυπείται παρά την επιθυμίαν πράττων ήδη, και χαίρει την άπ' έλπίδος ήδονήν, ότι σστερον ώφεληθήσεται, ή και ήδη ώφελειται bytalrav.

4-5 και ὁ νούς των ἐσχάτωνvols | 'And reason is of the ultimates at both ends of the series. Both the first and the last terms are apprehended, not by inference, but by reason. On the one hand, the scientific and demonstrative reason (6 µèv κατά τὰς ἀποδείξεις) apprehends those terms which are immutable and primary. And on the other hand. the practical reason (δ έν ταῖς πρακ-Tixaîs) apprehends the ultimate (¿σχάτου) and contingent truth, and the minor premiss. For these constitute the sources of our idea of the end, the universal being developed out of the particulars. Of these particulars, then, one must have perception, and this perception is reason.' The writer having before (in § 3) connected the faculties of 'apprehension,' &c., with 'Thought,' on the ground of their all being concerned with ultimate truths, proceeds to include reason (voûs) under the same category, and says that this apprehends foyara at both ends of the series. But now comes in a piece of confusion which is thoroughly Eudemian, for he goes on to say that the scientific reason apprehends first truths or principles (cf. ch. vi.), while the practical reason apprehends last terms or particulars. To mix up considerations of the scientific reason with the present discussion is to introduce what is entirely irrelevant. We see καὶ πρώτων, ὁ δ' ἐν ταῖς πρακτικαῖς τοῦ ἐσχάτου καὶ ἐνδεχομένου καὶ τῆς ἐτέρας προτάσεως ἀρχαὶ γὰρ τοῦ οῦ 5 ἔνεκα αδται ἐκ τῶν καθ ἕκαστα γὰρ τὸ καθόλου. τούτων οῦν ἔχειν δεῖ αἴσθησιν, αὕτη δ' ἐστὶ νοῦς. διὸ καὶ φυσικὰ δοκεῖ εἶναι ταῦτα, καὶ φύσει σοφὸς μὲν οὐδείς, γνώμην δ' ὅ ἔχειν καὶ σύνεσιν καὶ νοῦν. σημεῖον δ' ὅτι καὶ ταῖς ἡλικίαις οἰόμεθα ἀκολουθεῖν, καὶ ἥδε ἡ ἡλικία νοῦν ἔχει καὶ γνώμην, ὡς τῆς φύσεως αἰτίας οὔσης. διὸ καὶ ἀρχὴ καὶ here a bringing together of two things which were before placed in contrast with each other (ch. viii. § 9), namely, the reason which apprehends first principles, and thought apprehending particular facts (ἐσχάτων). In the present passage, what was before called thought (poornous) is called reason (vovs), and it is said that reason is the faculty which perceives or apprehends the particular in moral subjects (èv raîs πρακτικαîs). This, then, is the main purport of the present remarks. Setting aside as irrelevant what is said of the scientific reason, we learn that the moral judgment is intuitive, that moral intuitions are to be attributed to the reason, and that out of these particular intuitions the moral universal grows up. When stripped of its ambiguities of statement, the sense of the passage becomes unexceptional. We may compare it with the incidental observations of Aristotle, Eth. I. iv. 7: 'Αρχή γάρ τὸ ὅτι' καὶ εἰ τούτο φαίνοιτο άρκούντως, οὐδέν προσδεήσει τοῦ διότι, ὁ δὲ τοιοῦτος ή έχει η λάβοι αν άρχὰς βαδίως. Ib. vii. 20: lκανον έν τισι το ότι δειχθήναι καλώς, οΐον και περί τὰς ἀρχάς τὸ δ' ὅτι πρώτον και άρχή. The expression of Eudemus is not so strong as that of Aristotle. Eudemus says ἐκ τῶν καθ' ξκαστα τὸ καθόλου, while Aristotle said doxn to oti. The latter must be true if reason be the organ by which the fact is apprehended, for reason is in itself universal, and whatever it apprehends must be of the nature of the universal.

άρχαὶ γὰρ τοῦ οδ ἔνεκα αδται] This is similar in form of expression to ch. iii. § 3: ἡ μὲν δὴ ἐπαγωγὴ ἀρχή ἐστι καὶ τοῦ καθόλου. On οδ ἔνεκα see below, ch. xii. § 10. note.

avry &' earl vovs] To say that 'reason is a perception of particulars' is only the counterpart of Aristotle's saying that we can have 'a perception of universals.' Eth. I. vii. 20: τῶν άρχωναί μεν αίσθήσει θεωρούνται, Aristotle expresses the intuitive character of reason by saying that it 'touches' its object. Cf. Metaphys. VIII. x. 5, τὸ μέν θιγεῖν καὶ φάναι άληθές . . . . τό δ' άγνοείν μη θιγγάνειν. Ib. XI. vii. 8. αύτον δε νοεί ο νούς κατά μετάληψιν τοῦ νοητοῦ νοητὸς γάρ γίγνεται θιγγάνων και νοών, ώστε ταύτον νούς και νοπτόν. That reason, while it is on the one hand intuitive, is on the other hand developed by experience, we learn from the discussions in Post. Anal, II. ch. xix. The same is expressed above in the saying that 'reason is the beginning and the end.' Kal φυσικά - δρθώς] 5-6 80 reason. A proof of this is, that we think theyought successively to appear as age advances, and (we say that) such and such an age possesses reason and considerateness, as if these things came from nature. Hence reason is the beginning and the end, the matter of premises and conclusions is the same. Thus we must pay regard to the unproved assertions and opinions of the elderly and experienced, or of the thoughtful, no less than to demonstrations. For, from having obtained the eye of "old experience," they see aright.' In these excellent remarks the subject is brought round again to the contrast between Philosophy and Thought. The former never comes naturally, but the latter does. The nature of reason, and its growth in the mind, is illustrated by the common fact of the respect paid to age.

XII. In this and the following chapter, by mooting the question, Of what use are Thought and Philosophy? the writer shows the relation of the two qualities to each other, and the inseparable connection existing between thought and virtue. The following difficulties are first stated. (1) Philosophy is not practical, it does not consider at all the means to happiness, how then can it be useful? (2) Thought, on the other hand, though it treats of happiness, might be said to be mere knowledge. It might be said that a man no more acts well from having this knowledge of the good, than he is well from having a knowledge of medicine. again, if thought be useful for telling us how to be good, why not get this advice from others? Why should it be necessary to have thought, any more than it is to learn medicine, when one can go to a doctor? (4) If philosophy be better than thought, how is it that the latter controls the former? The answer to question (1) is, that both philosophy and thought are good in themselves, and desirable as being perfections of our nature, even though they were not useful as means to anything beyond. But they are not without results. Philosophy, if it does not serve as an instrument to happiness, is identical with happiπος (οὐδεμιῶς γάρ ἐστι γενέσεως), ἡ δὲ φρόνησις τοῦτο μὲν ἔχει, ἀλλὰ τίνος ἔνεκα δεῖ αὐτῆς, εἴπερ ἡ μὲν φρόνησις ἐστιν ἡ περὶ τὰ δίκαια καὶ καλὰ καὶ ἀγαθὰ ἀνθρώπως, ταῦτα δ' ἐστὶν ὰ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ ἐστὶν ἀνδρὸς πράττειν, οὐδὲν δὲ πρακτικώτεροι τῷ εἰδέναι αὐτά ἐσμεν, εἴπερ εξεις αὶ ἀρεταὶ εἰσιν, ὥσπερ οὐδὲ τὰ ὑγιεινὰ οὐδὲ τὰ εὐεκτικά, ὅσα μὴ τῷ ποιεῖν ἀλλὰ τῷ ἀπὸ τῆς εξεως εἶναι λέγεται οὐθὲν γὰρ πρακτικώτεροι τῷ ἔχειν τὴν ἰατρικὴν καὶ γυμναστικήν 2 ἐσμεν. εἰ δὲ μὴ τούτων χάριν φρόνιμον θετέον ἀλλὰ τοῦ γίνεσθαι, τοῖς οὖσι σπουδαίοις οὐθὲν ὰν εἴη χρήσιμος, ἔτι δ' οὐδὲ τοῖς μὴ ἔχουσιν οὐθὲν γὰρ διοίσει αὐτοὺς ἔχειν ἡ ἄλλοις ἔχουσι πείθεσθαι, ἰκανῶς τ' ἔχοι ἄν ἡμῖν ὥσπερ καὶ ἄλλοις ἔχουσι πείθεσθαι, ἰκανῶς τ' ἔχοι ἄν ἡμῖν ὥσπερ καὶ ness itself. Questions (2) and (3) are answered by showing the relation of thought to virtue. Virtue gives the right aim, and thought the right means. They are inseparable from one another. Thought without virtue would be mere cleverness, apt to degenerate into cunning, and virtue without wisdom would be a mere gift of nature, a generous instinct capable of perversion. While thus inseparable from virtue, thought is not to be identified with it. In this respect an advance has been made beyond the crude formula of Socrates. Wisdom accompanies the virtues, and is a sort of centre-point to them all (aua τη φρονήσει μια οδση πασαι υπάρξουσιν, xiii. 6). Question (4) is easily answered, since wisdom rather ministers to philosophy than thinks of controlling it.

Ι ούδεμιᾶς γάρ ἐστι γενέσεως] Suggested perhaps by Ετλ. x. vii. 5, where it is said of the θεωρητική ἐνέργεια—ούδὲν γάρ ἀπ' αὐτῆς γίνεται παρὰ τὸ θεωρῆσαι. Ib. § 7: δοκεῖ... παρ' αὐτὴν ούδἐνος ἐφἐσεθαι τέλους.

είπερ ή μὲν φρόνησίς ἐστιν ἡ περὶ τὰ δίκαια καὶ καλὰ καὶ ἀγαθὰ ἀνθρώπω] 'If thought be that which is concerned with things just and beautiful and good for man.' 'H is indefinite, being probably feminine on account of the preceding φρόνησε. This passage the first that asserts strongly the moral nature of 'thought.' We are told here that it takes eognisance of the just and the beautiful; before it was only said to be concerned with what was good (περί τὰ ἀνθρώπενα ἀγαθά, ch. v. § 6). These concluding discussions about φρόνησε show the inadequacy of the term 'prudence,' by which it has been so often translated, really to represent it.

ούδὲν δὲ πρακτικώτεροι τῷ εἰδέναι αἰτά] The answer to this objection has virtually been already given, ch. v. § S: where φρόνησι was said not to be a merely intellectual quality.

. 2 el δè μὴ—πείθεσθαι] 'But suppose we assume that a man is thoughtful not for this object (i.e. mere knowledge of virtue), but with a view to becoming (virtuous), we must then concede that to those who are virtuous thought will not be useful,—nor any more so to those who have not got (virtue), for there will be no difference whether they have (thought) themselves, or follow the advice of others possessing it.' The compression used here is quite in the style of Eudemus, and so is the confusion caused by the careless writing in τοῦς μὴ ἔχουσων οὐθὲν γὰρ διοίσει αὐτοῦς ἔχεων, where ἔχουσων and ἔχεων appear to refer to two different things.

3 el χείρων τῆς σοφίας οδσα κυριωτέρα αὐτῆς ἔσται] This difficulty may have been partly suggested by the prominent position assigned to Thought in the present book (cf. ch. vii. § 7: είη δ' ἀν τις καὶ ἐνταῦθα ἀρχιτεκτονική), partly by the authoritative character attributed to politics by Aristotle, Εth. I. ii. 4-6: δόξειε δ' ἀν της κυριωτάτης καὶ μάλιστα ἀρχιτεκτονικῆς τοιαύτη δ' ἡ πολιτική φαίνεται κ.τ.λ. Cf. Plato on the βασιλική τέχνη, Ευιλημέσω. p. 291 B, quoted Vol. I. Essay III. p. 191.

4 Thought and Philosophy cannot be otherwise than desirable, as they are the best state of the human mind. And the mind must necessarily (draykalor) desire its own best state.

5 έπειτα — εὐδαίμονα] Furthermore they do produce happiness—philosophy produces it, not in the way that medicine produces health, but rather it operates like health itself. Being a part of the entire well-being (τῆς δλης dρετῆς) of man, it makes one happy by the consciousness of possessing it.'

της δλης άρετης This phrase, which never occurs in the writings of Aristotle, is frequent in those of Eudemus. Cf. Eth. Eud. II. i. 9: Kal EoTL ζωή και τελέα και άτελής, και άρετή ώσαύτως (ή μέν γάρ όλη, ή δὲ μόριον). 1b. § 14 : διό και άλλο εί τι μόριον έστι ψυχής, οίον τὸ θρεπτικόν, ή τούτου άρετη ούκ έστι μόριον της όλης άρετης. Eth. Eud. IV. (Nic. V.) ii. 7: ὅτι μέν οδν είσι δικαιοσύναι πλείους, και ότι έστι τις και έτέρα παρά την δλην άρετην, δήλον. 16. $ 10: ή μέν οθν κατά τήν όλην άρετην τεταγμένη δικαιοσύνη. This conception Eudemus came to identify with καλοκάγαθία, Eth. Eud. VIII. iii. I : κατά μέρος μέν οδυ περί έκάστης άρετης είρηται πρότερον ' έπεί δέ χωρίς διείλομεν την δύναμιν αθτών, καί περί της άρετης διαρθρωτέον της έκ τούτων, ην έκαλουμεν ήδη καλοκάγα-Olav.

τῷ ἔχεσθαι καὶ ἐνεργεῖν] 'Ενεργεῖν added on to ἔχεσθαι expresses the fruition, as well as the possession, of philosophy. It implies that philosophy exists not only in, but for, the mind. See Vol. I. Essay IV. pp. 243 sq.

6 &ri - rouror] 'Again, man's proper function is discharged by an accordance with thought and moral virtue. For virtue makes the aim right, and thought the means to the attainment of this.' The conception of to Epyov is taken from Ar. Eth. I. vii. 10. The rest of the psychology here is different from that of Aristotle (see Eth. III. v. I, note), but is identical with that adopted by Eudemus in his earlier books. Cf. Eth. Eud. Π. xi. I: τούτων δὲ διωρισμένων λέγωμεν πότερον ή άρετη άναμάρτητον ποιεί την προαίρεσιν και το τέλος δρθόν, ούτως ώστε οδ ένεκα δεί προαιρείσθαι, ή ώσπερ δοκεί τισί, τὸν λόγον. "Εστι δὲ τοῦτο ἐγκράτεια αῦτη γὰρ οὐ διαφθείρει τὸν λόγον. "Εστι δ' άρετη και έγκράτεια έτερον. Λεκτέον δ' υστερον περί αὐτῶν (this refers to ch. v. § 6, where, however, σωφροσύνη is substituted for έγκράτεια). .16. § 3 : πότερον δ' ή άρετη ποιεί τὸν σκοπόν ή τὰ πρὸς τὸν σκοπόν; τιθέμεθα δή ότι τὸν σκοπόν, διότι τούτου οὐκ ἔστι συλλογισμὸς ούδὲ λόγος. 1b. § 6, quoted below.

τοῦ δὲ τετάρτου κ.τ.λ.] The parts are: (1) the scientific reason, (2) the practical reason, (3) the moral nature (λόγον μετέχον), (4) the vegetative element,—'Αρετή τοιαύτη, i.e. 'moral virtue.' The vegetative soul has its own ἀρετή or 'excellence,' in a general sense.

8 την μέν-δυνάμεως] 'Now virtue makes the purpose right, but the means to this (δσα έκείνης ένεκα πέφυκε πράττεσθαι) do not belong to virtue, but to another faculty.' There is some confusion here in speaking of the means to a purpose, mposipeous itself being in the Aristotelian psychology a faculty of means; but cf. Eth. Eud. II. xi. 5-6, where mpoalpeges is said to imply both end and means, and whence the present passage is repeated almost verbatim. "Bors yap πασα προαίρεσίς τινος και ένεκά τινος. Οδ μέν οδν ένεκα το μέσον έστίν, οδ alría ή άρετη τὸ (τῷ, Fritzsche, e conj.) προαιρείσθαι οδ ένεκα. "Εστι μέντοι ή προαίρεσις οὐ τούτου, άλλά

8-10 λεκτέον δ'-άγαθόν] 'But we must speak on the point with a more exact attention. There is a certain faculty which is called "cleverness," this is of a nature to perform and to hit upon the means that conduce to any given aim. Now if the aim be good, this faculty is praiseworthy, but if bad, it turns to cunning. Hence it even comes to pass (kal) that thoughtful men get called "clever" and "rogues." Now thought is not cleverness, but it is not without a faculty of the kind. But this eye of the mind attains its full condition not without virtue, as we have already stated, and as is clear, for the syllogisms of action have as their major premiss-"Since such and such is the end and the best"-(being whatever it is, -something for the sake of argument, it matters not what). But this (major premiss) cannot be apprehended except by the good man; for vice distorts (the mind), and makes it false with regard to the principles of action. Hence it is evident that one cannot possess "thought" unless he be good.

10 ή δ' έξις τῷ δμματι τούτω] The whole conception of reason, 'the eye of the soul,' being capable of being perverted into worldly cunning or of being kept pure by good moral habits, comes, originally, no doubt, from Plato, Repub. 518 E: ή δὲ τοῦ φρονήσαι παντός μάλλον θειστέρου τινός τυγχάνει, ώς ξοικεν οδσα, δ την μέν δύναμιν ούδέποτε άπόλλυσιν, ύπο δὲ τῆς περιαγωγής χρήσιμον και ώφέλιμον και άχρηστον αθ καί βλαβερον γίγνεται. οι γὰρ συλλογισμοι τῶν πρακτῶν]
The form of the practical syllogism is similarly given, Εελ. Ευα. 11. κ1. 4: ὅσπερ γὰρ ταῖς θεωρητικαῖς αι ὑποθέσεις ἀρχαί, οὐτω καὶ ταῖς ποιητικαῖς τὸ τέλος ἀρχὴ καὶ ὑπόθεσις 'ἐπειδὴ δεῖ τόδε ὑγιαίνευ, ἀσάγκη τοδὶ ὑπάρξαι, εἰ ἔσται ἐκεῖνο,' ὡσπερ ἐκεῖ, 'εὶ ἔστι τὸ τρίγωνον δύο ὁρθαί, ἀνάγκη τοδὶ είναι.' On the doctrine of the practical syllogism, see Vol. I. Essay IV. pp. 263, sq.

XIII. 1 Σκεπτόον δη—κυρίων] 'We must consider then, over again, the nature of virtue. For there is a relation in virtue analogous to that borne by 'thought' to eleverness. Cleverness, though not the same as 'thought,' is similar to it, and this is the way in which natural virtue stands related to virtue proper.' The doctrine of the natural element in virtue was clearly given by Aristotle, cf. Eth. x. ix. 6-8: Γίνεσθαι δ' ἀγαθούς οίονται, οί μὲν φύσει, οἱ δ' ἔθει, οἱ δὲ διδαχῆ. Τὸ μὲν οδυ τῆς φύσεως δῆλον ὡς οἰκ οἱον τῆς έφ' ἡμιν ὑπάρχει, άλλὰ διά τινας θείας αίτίας τοις ώς άληθως εύτυχέσιν ύπαρχει-Δεί δη το ήθος προϋπάρχειν πως οίκειον της άρετης, στέργον το καλών καί δυσχεραίνον τὸ αίσχρόν. In the present passage, the analogy between the development of the reason and of the moral will is well drawn out. At first, there is the intellectual faculty, cleverness, undetermined as yet for good or bad, but requiring a right direction to be given to its aims. This the moral feelings can alone supply. On the other side, there is the generous instinct, the impulse to bravery, justice, and the like, but this is deficient in consciousness and in the idea of a law, which reason can alone supply. The joint development of these two sides gives, on the one hand, 'thought,' on the other hand, virtue, in its complete and proper form. What there is difficult or strange in the doctrine is, that virtue has apparently assigned to it the intellectual function of apprehending the end of action. This appears an inversion. 'Αρετή seems now to have changed places with hoyos. But, at all events, the point is clearly established that an intellectual side and a moral side are entirely inseparable.

At least this seems evident, that as a strong body, if moved without sight, comes into violent collisions because it has not sight to guide it, so is it in mental things (ἐνταῦθα). If the natural qualifications have reason added to them, they then excel in action, and the state, which (before) was a semblance of virtue, now becomes virtue in the true sense of the term.' Φυσικαί έξεις is used inaccurately for φυσικαί διαθέσεις, cf. Eth. II. vii. 6, note. On the moral qualities of brutes Aristotle often speaks; cf. Hist. An. I. i.; IX. i. &c. The 'courage' of brutes, being undirected, is no doubt harmful, so the generosity, &c., of boys. That fine natures are capable of the worst perversion, is an opinion to be found stated in Plato's Republic, p. 491 E: Οὐκοῦν, ἢν δ' ἐγώ, ὢ 'Αδείμαντε, καὶ τάς ψυχάς ούτω φώμεν τάς εὐφυεστάτας κακής παιδαγωγίας τυχούσας διαφερώντως κακάς γίγνεσθαι; ή οίει τά μεγάλα άδικήματα καὶ τὴν ἄκρατον πονηρίαν έκ φαύλης, άλλ' οὐκ έκ νεανικής φύσεως τροφή διολομένης γίγνεσθαι, άσθενη δὲ φύσιν μεγάλων οδτε άγαθῶν οὅτε κακῶν αἰτίαν ποτὲ ἔσεσθαι; 3-5 διόπερ - μετά λόγου] 'Hence it is that some say that all the virtues are manifestations of thought; and thus Socrates was partly right and partly wrong in his investigations. He was wrong in considering the virtues manifestations of thought, but perfectly right in holding that they were inseparable from thought. The same point is testified to by the fact that, at present, persons, when they wish to define virtue, add the terms "state (specifying the particular object), according to the right law." And that law is right which is in accordance with thought. All men therefore seem to have a presentiment that a particular state in accordance with thought is virtue. But a little alteration is necessary. Not merely the state according to the right law, but that which is conscious of (µετά) the right law constitutes virtue. Now in such matters thought is right law. Socrates then considered that the virtues were laws (for he defined them all as sciences), but we consider that they are conscious of a law.'

καl Σωκράτης] On the doctrine of Socrates that 'virtue is science,' see Vol. I. Essay II. pp. 165, sq. In Eth. III. viii. 6, the phrase is δθεν καλ ο Σωκράτης, on which Bishop Fitzgerald remarks, that by prefixing the article Aristotle appears to have indicated the Socrates of Plato's dialogues, the dramatic, and not the historical, philosopher. Thus speaking similarly of characters in books, Aristotle says, Eth. III. viii. 2, Tor Διομήδην και τον "Εκτορα, Ib. II. ix. 3, ή Καλυψώ. ΙΙ. ίκ. 6, πρὸς τὴν Ἑλένην. And contrariwise of real persons he speaks without the article. Eth. 1. iv. 5, Εθ γαρ και Πλάτων ήπόρει. Ιδ. Ι. ν. 3, όμοιοπαθείν Σαρδαναπάλφ. I. vi. 8, οίς δή και Σπεύσιππος. Ι. Χ. Ι, κατά Σόλωνα. All through the first book of the Metaphysics, when writing the history of philosophy, Aristotle speaks of the different philosophers without the article, and so too elsewhere in contrasting Socrates with Plato, &c. The only exceptions to this rule are the cases of renewed mention. Cf. Met. XII. iv. 5 : Δύο γάρ ἐστιν ἄ τις αν αποδοίη Σωκράτει δικαίως-'Αλλ' ό μέν Σωκράτης κ.τ.λ. But in discussing Plato's Republic and Laws (Pol. II. i-vi.). Aristotle invariably speaks οί ὁ Σωκράτης, οἱ τοῦ Σωκράτους λόγοι, &c., as referring not to a real but to a represented personage. Assuming that Eudemus has followed the same rule, we may conclude that here and in Eth. VII. ii. Ι. Σωκράτης μέν γάρ όλως εμάχετο, Ib. VII. iii. 14, δ εξήτει Σωκράτης, -the actual and historical Socrates is designated.

και γάρ νῦν πάντες] i.e. since the establishment of the Peripatetic doctrine. Eudemus (§ 5) refines upon the usual Peripatetic formula, substituting μετὰ λόγου for κατὰ λόγου. On the meaning of this alteration, see Eth. I. vii. I.4. note.

'Thus the opinion is refuted of him who would argue that the virtues are separated from one another, that the same man is not equally gifted by nature for all the virtues, so that he will acquire one now and another later. This is possible with regard to natural good qualities, but not so with regard to those which constitute a good man absolutely; for together with Thought, which is one, all the virtues will be in his possession.' The same perfect character is attributed to Thought below, Eth. vii. ii. 5: πρακτικός γε δ φρόνιμος των γάρ έσχάτων τις και τάς άλλας έχων aperds. The theory is, that he who has thought can do no wrong. It will be seen how nearly this approaches to the Stoical idea of the 'wise man.'

7 This section is a mere repetition, in Eudemian fashion, of what has gone before, ch. xii. §§ 4, 10; Eth. Eud. II. xi. 6 (l.c.) Cf. also ch. ii. § 4: διὸ οῦτ' ἀνευ νοῦ καὶ διανοίας οῦτ' ἀνευ ἡθικῆς ἐστὶν ἔξεως ἡ προαίρεσις.

8 The relation of thought to Philosophy is clearly stated by the author of the Magna Moralia, who paraphrases the present passage (Μ. Μ. Ι. ΧΧΧΥ. 32), ή φρόνησις ὥσπερ ἐπίτροπός τίς ἐστι τῆς σοφίας, καὶ παρασκευά-ἐει ταύτη σχολήν καὶ τὸ ποιεῦν τὸ αὐτῆς ἔργον, κατέχουσα τὰ πάθη καὶ ταῦτα σωφρονίζουσα.

PLAN OF BOOK VII.

THIS last of the Nicomacho-Eudemian Books consists of two parts, of which the one is a necessary complement to Aristotle's cthical system; the other superfluous, being little more than a modification of Aristotle's (far superior) treatise on Pleasure.

Part I. having enumerated the moral states which are above, below, and between virtue and vice, mentions six ordinary opinions on these states (Ch. I.), points out the difficult questions to which those opinions give rise (Ch. II.), and proceeds to elucidate them.

In Ch. III. the question is discussed, How is Incontinence compatible with a knowledge of the right?

In Ch. IV. the question, Whether Incontinence is confined to any definite object-matter?

Chs. V. and VI., pursuing the same inquiry, treat of certain morbid and unnatural kinds of Incontinence, and of Incontinence (analogously so called) in the matter of anger.

Ch. VII. compares generally Incontinence with Intemperance, treats of the subordinate forms of the intermediate moral states (endurance, softness, &c.), and traces Incontinence to two separate sources in the character.

Ch. VIII. continues the comparison between Intemperance and Incontinence, reverts to two questions before mooted, namely:—
(1) Is Intemperance more curable than Incontinence? (2) Is Incontinence to be regarded as absolutely bad? and gives a negative answer to both.

Ch. IX. §§ 1-4 discusses the question mooted in Ch. II., Does Continence consist in sticking to an opinion or purpose, right or wrong? In answering this question, a good distinction is drawn between Obstinacy and Continence.

Ch. IX. § 5-Ch. X. winds up the previous discussions, and formally settles the remaining questions of Ch. 11. Is Intemperance the same as Incontinence? Can the thoughtful man be incontinent?

These chapters form, as we have said, a necessary complement to the Aristotelian ethical system, taking a more practical point of view (ἄλλην ἀργήν) than that which would divide mankind simply into the virtuous and the vicious. Moral systems in general have perhaps too much neglected this field of the intermediate states; and general language has not definitely adopted the distinction between the 'Intemperate' and the 'Incontinent,' as the use of these English words at once testifies, for we are evidently obliged to give a certain special and technical meaning to the word 'Intemperate' in order to make it stand as the representative of ἀκόλαστος.1 A subtle, but not always clear psychology is employed to explain the phenomena of moral weakness, and it is observable that physical and medical considerations are prominently appealed to throughout this book. The remarks on bestiality, cretinism, or morbid depravity (Angiorns) here made have attracted the notice of modern writers on the psychology of insanity (as, for instance, Dr. Thomas Mayo).2 And the interesting allusions here made to the

<sup>1</sup> The attributes assigned (c. vii. § 2) to the Intemperate man, who 'of deliberate purpose pursues excessive pleasures, for their own sake, and never repents of doing so, and thus is incurable,' make this a sort of ideally vicious character. A similar conception of ideal vice in its extremest form, with the element of cruelty added, is to be found in Shelley's portrait of Count Cenci : see The Cenci, Act 1. so. 1.

As to my character for what men call crime,

Seeing I please my senses as I list, And vindicate that right with force or guile,

It is a public matter, and I care not If I discuss it with you.

All men delight in sensual luxury,
All men enjoy revenge; and most

Over the tortures they can never feel; But I delight in nothing else. I love The sight of agony, and the sense of joy.

When this shall be another's and that mine.

And I have no remorse, and little fear, Which are, I think, the checks of other men. &c.

<sup>2</sup> 'Now, according to this view of the subject, we have a class of persons, differing from the majority of mankind in their incapacity for moral distinction, differing from the insane, in not labouring under any suspension of the power of will. On the first of these grounds, they have a right to a place in our system of mental pathology. On the last, they must constitute a distinct head from insanity. I am not at present considering this class generally; I exclude indeed that melancholic or bilious temperament might be illustrated, not only from Aristotle's Problems, but also from Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy. The chief thing that we have to complain of in this book is the too vague way in which incontinence is treated. For the sake of forming a more definite notion of the standard of Greek morality, we could have wished a graphic portrait of the continent man, in the style of Aristotle's fourth Book. As it is, we must be content to know that the continent man yields to temptation less, and the incontinent man more, than people in general.

Part II. consists of that superfluous treatise on Pleasure, the authorship of which has been so much disputed. While professing to treat of pleasure as falling under the philosophy of human life, the writer seems to confine himself almost entirely to a refutation of three positions maintained by the Platonic school; 1st. That pleasure is in no sense a good. 2nd. That most pleasures (i.e. physical pleasures) are bad. 3rd. That no pleasure can be the chief good.

The first and third of these positions are refuted in Chs. XII. and XIII., and the second in Ch. XIV. The subject is treated in this book under a more physiological and practical aspect than in the tenth book of the Nicomachean work.

section of persons, in whom the absence of principle is obviated by the harmlessness of their tendencies. I am speaking of persons destitute of the moral faculty, and also vicious in their propensities. For these I have borrowed the designation given to them by Aristotle: and I call them brutal.'—Mayo, Elements of the Pathology of the Human Mind, p. 127.

ΗΘΙΚΩΝ [ΕΥΔΗΜΙΩΝ] VII.

ΜΕΤΑ δὲ ταῦτα λεκτέον, ἄλλην ποιησαμένους ἀρχήν, ὅτὶ τῶν περὶ τὰ ἤθη φευκτῶν τρία ἐστὶν εἴδη, κακία ἀκρασία θηριότης. τὰ δ' ἐναντία τοῖς μὲν δυσὶ δῆλα· τὸ μὲν γὰρ ἀρετὴν τὸ δ' ἐγκράτειαν καλοῦμεν· πρὸς δὲ τὴν θηριότητα μάλιστ' ἄν ἀρμόττοι λέγειν τὴν ὑπὲρ ἡμᾶς ἀρετήν, ἡρωϊκήν τινα καὶ θείαν, ὥσπερ "Ομηρος περὶ "Εκτορος πεποίηκε λέγοντα τὸν Πρίαμον ὅτι σφόδρα ῆν ἀγαθός.

I. This chapter proposes a new field of inquiry (ἄλλην ἀρχήν) in Ethics, namely, to consider those intermediate states, continence and incontinence, together with their subordinate forms (softness, luxury, and endurance), which are 'neither identical with virtue and vice, nor yet wholly distinct from them.' an enumeration of the moral states above, below, and between, virtue and vice, the writer announces that his method of inquiry will be, as elsewhere, to collect current opinions on the subject, to raise doubts and objections to them, and by a process of sifting to reject such existing opinions as are untenable, and to leave a residue of 'sufficiently demonstrated' theory. He accordingly mentions six common notions about the states in question.

I τὰ δ' ἐναντία κ.τ.λ.] A scale of the moral states is here drawn out, which stands as follows: I. Divine virtue, or pure reason. 2. Virtue (afterwards called temperance, σωφροσύνη), or the perfect harmony of passion subjugated to reason. Continence, or the mastery of reason over passion after a struggle. 4. Incontinence, or the mastery of passion over reason after a struggle. 5. Vice (afterwards called drohaola, intemperance), or the perfect harmony of reason subjugated to passion. Bestiality, or pure passion. remarkable that the terms σωφροσύνη and aκολασία, which in this book certainly supply the place of dρετή and κακία, are actually introduced extremely late. Cf. ch. v. § 8.

ήρωϊκήν τινα] Cf. Arist. Pol. VII. xiv. 2, where the gods and heroes are mentioned as excelling men. Dr. Hampden, in his Bampton Lectures, mentions that, in the canonisation of a Roman Catholic Saint, it was customary to declare that he had graduated 'in heroico gradu virtutis.'

5 δεί δ' ωσπερ έπὶ των άλλων - ίκαvŵs] 'Our course must be, as elsewhere, to state existing ideas (τὰ φαινόμενα), and, having gone through the doubts (which these ideas suggest), to establish thus, if possible all, but if not all, anyhow the greater number and the most important of the ideas which are generally admitted (ἔνδοξα) about these conditions of mind. For if the difficulties be resolved and at the same time the generally admitted ideas be suffered to stand, the thing will be established sufficiently.' This passage is obscure, chiefly on account of the ambiguity in the words έαν γαρ λύηταί τε τά δυσχερή και καταλείπηται τά ἔνδοξα. Two meanings might be attributed to λυήται τὰ δυσχερή, which might either refer (1) to the rejection of ideas that involved a difficulty; or (2) to the clearing up of difficulties attaching to any of the popular ideas. The former interpretation would seem best to suit the context, and to be justified by the actual procedure of subsequent chapters, and accordingly the following is the way in which the passage is rendered by the Paraphrast. Λέγωμεν δή περί αὐτῶν κατά τὸν τρόπον καθ' δν και περί των άλλων είπομεν. έκθησόμεθα γάρ τούς δοκούντας περί αὐτῶν λόγους, ὧν τοὺς μὴ συμβαίνοντας τή άληθεία έλέγξαντες, τούς μάλιστα ένδύξους καταλείψαντες βεβαιώσομεν. καί οδτως έσται φανερός ὁ περί αὐτῶν λόγος. But on looking below we find a sentence answering to, and in fact repeating, the present one in such a way that we cannot help taking it as a decisive guide as to what is here After a statement of the meant.

various ideas, and of the difficulties which they suggest, the writer adds αί μέν οθν άπορίαι τοιαθταί τινες συμβαίνουσιν, τούτων δέ τὰ μέν άνελεῖν δεῖ, τὰ δὲ καταλιπεῖν' ἡ γὰρ λύσις τῆς ἀποplas especis ester (ii. 12). The words before us, λύηται τὰ δυσχερῆ, correspond with τὰ μέν ἀνελεῖν (τῶν ἀποριῶν) and with h hoois This amoplas. It is to be observed, however, that καταλιπείν is used in the one place to refer to the popular ideas, and in the other to the objections (amoplas) urged against those ideas. τὰ φαινόμενα, as shown by what follows, is here equivalent to 7à λεγόμενα in § 7, the common sayings and ideas of men. It is used in the same sense, Eth. Eud. I. vi. I: πειρατέον δέ περί τούτων πάντων ζητείν την πίστιν διά των λόγων, μαρτυρίοις και παραδείγμασι χρώμενον τοις φαινομένοις.

6-7 The common ideas are now enumerated. They are six in number:

- (1) 'That continence and endurance are morally good, while incontinence and softness are morally bad.'
- (2) 'That the continent man is he who sticks to his opinion, while the incontinent man is he who departs from his opinion.'
  - (3) 'That the incontinent man errs through his peculiar state, knowing all the while that he is doing wrong; while owing to this knowledge the continent man abstains.'

- (4) 'That temperance is the same as continence, and in like manner incontinence is sometimes confused with intemperance.'
- (5) 'It is occasionally maintained that "thoughtful" and clever men may be incontinent.'
- (6) 'That there is such a thing as incontinence of other things beside pleasure, e.g. of anger, of honour, and of gain.'
- 6 δοκεῖ δὴ κ.τ.λ.] Cf. Xenophon, Memorab. I. v. 4-5, where it is said that Socrates considered ἐγκράτεια the foundation of the virtues. (Cf. Ib. IV. v. I, IV. v. 3-7, II.)

τὸν ἀκόλαστον ἀκρατῆ] Fritzsche refers to Xen. Μεπ. Ιν. ν. 6 sqq., and for the opposite comparison to Xen. Μεπ. Ιι. ἱ. Ι: ἐδόκει προτράπειν τοὺς συνόντας ἀσκεῖν ἐγκράτειαν βρωτοῦ καὶ ποτοῦ καὶ λαχνείας καὶ ὅπνου καὶ ρίγους καὶ ἀλλπους καὶ πόνου. γνοῦς γάρ τινα τῶν συνόντων ἀκολαστοτέρως ἔχοντα ποὸς τὰ τοιαῦτα, κ.τ.λ.

7 ακρατεῖς λέγονται καὶ θυμοῦ καὶ τιμῆς καὶ κέρδους ] Cf. Plato, Legg, ix. p. 869 α. Isocr. Demon. p. 6: ὑψ' ἄν κρατεῖσθαι τὴν ψυχὴν αἰσχρόν, τούτων ἐγκράτειαν ἄσκει πάντων, κέρδους, ὀργῆς, ἡδονῆς, λύπης.

II. This chapter contains a statement of the objections and difficulties which may be raised against the above-mentioned ideas.

I-4 state the difficulties which attach to the third-mentioned idea—that the incontinent man sins against knowledge. How is this possible? how can one know the best and not do it? Socrates denied the possibility of incontinence altogether, making it convertible with ignorance; but with what kind of ignorance remains to be asked. Others confess that it is not knowledge which is perverted in the mind of the incontinent, but only opinion, i.e. a vague and weak conviction.

5 Continuing the same subject, introduces also an objection to idea (5)—that the thoughtful man may be incontinent. Some fancy that Thought (though not knowledge in the scientific sense) may co-exist with incontinence. But this shows a misconception of the nature of 'thought.' The thoughtful man can do no wrong.

6 Contains an objection to idea (4). How can continence be the same as temperance, since the former implies evil desires to be controlled, but the latter is a harmonious state of the moral nature?

7-10 Shows the difficulties and absurdities which attach to idea (2), that continence consists in sticking to your opinion. If so, it must be bad sometimes; Neoptolemus was incontinent; folly and incontinence combined will produce right actions; the abandoned man will be a more hopeful character than the incontinent, &c.

II Urges against the sixth of the ideas that the term 'incontinence' cannot be indiscriminately relative to wealth, honor, &c. There must be some absolute conception of incontinence, independent of these qualifications.

I 'Απορήσειε δ'—άγνοιαν] 'Now one might raise the question, how it is that a person with right conceptions comes to act incontinently. That a man who had absolute knowledge should do so, some say would be impossible, for it would be a strange δεινὸν γὰρ ἐπιστήμης ἐνούσης, ὡς ῷετο Σωκράτης, ἄλλο τι κρατεῖν καὶ περιέλκειν αὐτὸν ὥσπερ ἀνδράποδον. thing, as Socrates thought, if knowledge were in a man, that anything else should master him and twist him about like a slave, Socrates, in short, was totally opposed to the idea, (arguing) as if incontinence did not exist at all, for he said no one with a conception of what was best could act differently from that best, but he could only so act through ignorance.' On this doctrine of Socrates, and on its connection with the rest of his ethical views, see Vol. I. Essay II. p. 166. The omission of the article before Σωκράτης seems to show that the real man, and not the personage of Plato's dialogues, is referred to (see above, note on Eth. vr. xiii. 3), but yet the words of the passage before us have obvious reference to Plato's Protagoras, D. 352 Β: δοκεί δὲ τοίς πολλοίς περὶ έπιστήμης τοιοθτόν τι, οδκ ίσχυρον οδό ηνεπονικόν ούδ, φυλικόν εξραι, ούξε ης περί τοιούτου αύτοῦ έντος διανοούνται, άλλ' ένούσης πολλάκις άνθρώπω έπιστήμης, οὐ τὴν ἐπιστήμην αὐτοῦ ἄρχειν, άλλ' άλλο τι, τοτέ μέν θυμόν, τοτέ δέ ήδονήν, τοτέ δέ λύπην, ένίστε δέ ξρωτα, πολλάκις δὲ φόβον, ἀτεχνῶς διανοούμενοι περί της έπιστήμης, ώσπερ περί ανδραπόδου, περιελκομένης ύπο των άλλων ἀπάντων,

ούκ έφη άκρασίαν εΐναι, λέγων ὅτι οὐθεὶς είδῶς τὰ κακὰ ὅτι κακά είσιν Ἑλοιτ' ἄν. Cf. Plato, Protag. p. 357 Ε: ἡ δὲ ἐξαμαρτανομένη πρᾶξις ἄνευ ἐπιστήμης Ιστε που καὶ αὐτοὶ ὅτι ἀμαθία πράττεται, &c.

2 ούτος μέν ούν-φανερόν] 'Now this reasoning is manifestly at variance with experience, and we require to ask with regard to the state, supposing it to arise from ignorance, what manner of ignorance it is that takes place, for it is plain that the person who acts incontinently does not at all events think (that he must so act) before he gets into the particular state.' Paironérois here refers no doubt to the actual facts of life, and accordingly the rendering of the Paraphrast is ούτος δε δ λόγος έναντίος έστι τοίς φανεροίs. And yet there is probably some allusion also to the φαινόμενα mentioned above (i. 5); we may represent the double allusion of the word by translating it 'experience,' comparing with it also the use of 7à ὑπάρχοντα, Eth. I. viii. I.

ούκ ο[εταί γε] There seems to be an ellipsis of δεῶν πράττειν ἃ πράττειν Cf. below, iii. 2: ὁ δ' οὐκ ο[εται μέν, διώκει δέ. The writer argues that if incontinence be ignorance, it is a peculiar kind of ignorance, an ignorance that comes on (γίνεται), not a consistent ignorance; for the incontinent person does not think ignorantly, i.e. wrongly, before the time of temptation. On

7 The rough and hasty conception of continence which would confound it with obstinacy is here refuted by showing that absurdities would follow from it. Continence would be sometimes an evil, and incontinence sometimes a good. From this point of view, the conduct of Neoptolemus (who first promised to deceive Philoctetes, and afterwards abandoned the design as unworthy) must be called incontinent and at the same time right. The

8-9 έτι ὁ σοφιστικός-κακὰ πράξει] 'Again (if we accept the above-mentioned definition of continence) the sophistical argument [though lying] will cause us perplexity. For from the Sophists wishing to confute, and at the same time astonish (παράδοξα έλέγχειν), in order that on succeeding they may establish a reputation for ability - they construct a piece of reasoning which perplexes, since the intellect is fettered, on the one hand not wishing to abide by a conclusion which does not please, and, on the other hand, being unable to get loose, from having no means of breaking the chain of argument. Now from one of their reasonings it ensues that folly together with incontinence will make up virtue; for (he who possesses these qualities) does the reverse of what he conceives (he ought) by reason of his incontinence, but he conceives good to be bad and that he ought not to do it, and thus he will do what is good and not what is bad.' In the Oxford edition of Bekker (1837) there is a misprint of µéveu μέν δή. The Berlin edition of Bekker, like all other editions, reads μένειν μέν μή. The MSS. appear to vary with regard to μέν (which by some of them is omitted), but not with regard to un. γίνεται· δέδεται γὰρ ή διάνοια, ὅταν μένειν μὲν μὴ βούληται διὰ τὸ μὴ ἀρέσκειν τὸ συμπερανθέν, προϊέναι δὲ μὴ 9 δύνηται διὰ τὸ λῦσαι μὴ ἔχειν τὸν λόγον. συμβαίνει δ' ἔκ τινος λόγου ἡ ἀφροσύνη μετὰ ἀκρασίας ἀρετή. τὰναντία γὰρ πράττει ὧν ὑπολαμβάνει διὰ τὴν ἀκρασίαν, ὑπολαμβάνει δὲ τὰγαθὰ κακὰ εἶναι καὶ οὐ δεῖν πράττειν, ὥστε τὰγαθὰ καὶ

The great difficulty in the passage before us is caused by the word ψευδόμενος. This is explained either to be (I) an additional adjective to ὁ σοφιστικός λόγος, in which position it has an awkward appearance, or (2) to refer to the well-known puzzle of Eubulides the Megarian, which was called & ψευδόμενος, and in logic books 'Mentiens ' or 'the liar.' The puzzle was as follows: 'If a man says that he lies, does he lie or speak the truth?' to which of course no simple answer can be given. He may lie, and yet speak the truth in saving that he lies; for if he lies in saying that he lies, then he speaks the truth. This was a specimen of the 'eristic' of the Megarians, which consisted to a great extent in drawing out the difficulties that beset the common forms of language. Chrysippus wrote six books on the puzzle of 'the Liar;' and Philetas of Cos is said to have died of vexation from failing to solve it. Hegel (Geschichte der Philos. IL 117) compares it to the squaring of the circle. But clearly this puzzle has nothing to do with the subject under discussion in the text. Indeed one might almost fancy that the word ψευδόμενος was an interpolation which had crept in owing to the occurrence of the words διά τὸ  $\lambda \nu \pi \epsilon i \sigma \theta a \iota \psi \epsilon \nu \delta \delta \mu \epsilon \nu \sigma s$  in the line before. The acquaintance of the copyist with the fallacy 'Mentiens' might have tended to shroud the mistake. Evidently the words συμβαίνει δ' έκ τινος λόγου are an explanation of ὁ σοφιστικός λόγος, and the Paraphrast, seeing this, ignores the word ψευδόuevos altogether. Supposing, however, that it be allowed to stand, we must interpret it in a logical sense. not as if it had anything to do with the fallacy of Eubulides. The explanation of it is to be found in the Sophist, Elench, of Aristotle, iii, 1-2, where it is said that the aims of the Sophists and Eristics are five in number, έλεγχος και ψεύδος και παράδοξον και σολοικισμός (making one talk bad grammar), και πέμπτον το ποιήσαι άδολεσχήσαι (making one repeat the same thing over and over) . . . μάλιστα μέν γάρ προαιρούνται φαίνεσθαι έλέγχοντες, δεύτερον δε ψευδόμενόν τι δεικνύναι, τρίτον είς παράδοξον άγειν, κ.τ.λ. In the above passage we see that the writer has brought together two of these separate terms, speaking of παράδοξα έλέγχειν. It is possible that he may also have qualified the 'sophistical reasoning' with another of these logical formulæ, The abovementioned fallacy is an instance of the Sophists' way of tampering with moral notions in order to be thought clever.

δέδεται ἡ διάνοια] Cf. Ar. Metaph. Had he not been convinced before with regard to his actions, there might have been a hope of his mind being enlightened and his ceasing so to act; but as it is, with all the conviction in the world, he still acts contrary to it,' This is a reductio ad absurdum of the saying that incontinence means never acting on your conviction, and that continence means sticking to your conviction, If it were so, intemperance (dxolagía) would seem to be a sort of continence, and, on the other hand, incontinence would seem incurable. The reverse, however, of all this is true. See below ch. viii.

el μὲν γὰρ μὴ ἐπέπειστο] Some MSS. VOL. II. omit  $\mu \dot{\eta}$ , which is not to be wondered at, as there is a transition of meaning in the use of  $\ell \pi \ell \pi e \iota \tau \sigma c$ : (1) the intemperate man is said to act  $\tau \dot{\varphi}$   $\pi \epsilon \tau e \iota \sigma \theta a \iota$ , i.e. with a wrong conviction, thinking bad to be good; (2) the incontinent man acts of  $\tau \dot{\varphi}$   $\pi \epsilon \pi e \iota \sigma \theta a \iota$ , not by reason of a conviction that he ought to do so as he does; (3) the incontinent man  $\pi \ell \pi e \iota \sigma \tau a \iota$   $\delta \pi \rho \Delta \tau \tau e \iota$ , has a full conviction with regard to what he does (i.e. that it is wrong), but does not abide by that conviction.

III. This chapter discusses that which is really the most important and interesting question with regard

λέγω δὲ πότερον περὶ πᾶσαν ήδονην καὶ λύπην η περί τινας ὰφωρισμένας, καὶ τὸν ἐγκρατη καὶ τὸν καρτερικόν, πότερον ὁ αὐτὸς η ἔτερός ἐστιν· ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ περὶ τῶν ἄλλων ὅσα συγγενη τῆς θεωρίας ἐστὶ ταύτης. ἔστι δ' 2 ἀρχη τῆς σκέψεως, πότερον ὁ ἐγκρατης καὶ ὁ ἀκρατης εἰσι τῷ περὶ ἃ η τῷ πῶς ἔχοντες τὴν διαφοράν, λέγω δὲ πότερον τῷ περὶ ταδὶ εἶναι μόνον ἀκρατης ὁ ἀκρατης, η οῦ ἀλλὰ τῷ ὥς, η οῦ ἀλλ' ἐξ ἀμφοῦν· ἔπειτ' εἰ περὶ πάντ' ἐστὶν ἡ ἀκρασία καὶ ἡ ἐγκράτεια ἡ οῦ οὕτε γὰρ περὶ πάντ' ἐστὶν ὁ ἀπλῶς ἀκρατης, ἀλλὰ περὶ ἄπερ ὁ ἀκόλαστος, οὕτε τῷ πρὸς ταῦτα ἀπλῶς ἔχειν (ταὐτὸν γὰρ ἄν ην τῆ ἀκολασία), ἀλλὰ τῷ ώδὶ ἔχειν. ὁ μὲν γὰρ ἄγεται προαιρούμενος, νομίζων ἀεὶ δεῖν τὸ παρὸν ήδὸ διώκειν· ὁ δ΄ to incontinence and the whole nature of the moral will, namely, how is it possible to know the right and yet do the wrong? It treats of the third of the popular opinions mentioned above (ch. i. § 6), and the difficulties arising out of the same (ch. ii. §§ 1-4). The commencement of the chapter is rather confused, as it touches on, without discussing, the nature of the objectmatter of continence and incontinence, &c. With § 3 the main question is opened, namely, the relation of knowledge to incontinence, and a preliminary step is taken by the assertion that it makes no difference whether it be right opinion or knowledge which the incontinent man possesses, since opinion may be held quite as strongly as knowledge.

In §§ 5-8 it is shown that the real point to be ascertained is, what is meant by knowing or having knowledge. A man may have knowledge which is in abeyance, either because he does not apply a minor premiss to his general principle, or because he is under the influence of sleep, wine, madness, or the like.

9-14 A more intimate examination tells us that there may be two syllogisms in the mind, the one leading to continence and the other to incontinence. The former is not drawn out, but remains in want of a minor premiss; the latter through the instincts of sense and desire becomes realised and is acted on. However, the former knowledge cannot be said to have been present in a complete form to the mind, and therefore Socrates was not wrong in denying that knowledge of the right could exist, and yet be overborne.

1-2 There is something awkward in the way in which the questions to be discussed in succeeding chapters are here propounded. The writer might have made it his dρχή τήτ σκέψεων to consider what is the exact point of difference between continence and incontinence, but as a matter of fact he has not done so. There is a want of art in the sudden announcement (ὁ μὲν γὰρ ἀγεται, κ.τ.λ.) of the distinction between intemperance and incontinence. The same want of art, proceeding from whatevercause, marks

οὐκ οἴεται μέν, διώκει δέ. περὶ μὲν οὖν τοῦ δόξαν ἀληθη 3 ἀλλὰ μὴ ἐπιστήμην εἶναι παρ' ἢν ἀκρατεύονται, οὐθὲν διαφέρει πρὸς τὸν λόγον· ἔνιοι γὰρ τῶν δοξαζόντων οὐ διστάζουσιν, ἀλλ' οἴονται ἀκριβῶς εἰδέναι. εἰ οὖν διὰ τὸ ἢρέμα 4 πιστεύειν οἰ δοξάζοντες μᾶλλον τῶν ἐπισταμένων παρς ἔνιοι γὰρ πιστεύουσιν οὐδὲν ἢττον οἶς δοξάζουσιν ἢ ἔτεροι οἶς ἐπιστανται· δηλοῖ δ' Ἡράκλειτος. ἀλλ' ἐπεὶ διχῶς λέγομεν 5 τὸ ἐπίστασθαι (καὶ γὰρ ὁ ἔχων μὲν οὐ χρώμενος δὲ τῆ ἐπιστήμη καὶ ὁ χρώμενος λέγεται ἐπίστασθαι), διοίσει τὸ ἔχοντα μὲν μὴ θεωροῦντα δὲ ἃ μὴ δεῖ πράττειν τοῦ ἔχοντα καὶ θεωροῦντα· τοῦτο γὰρ δοκεῖ δεινόν, ἀλλ' οὐκ εἰ

the whole of these two sections, and the main business of the chapter only commences with section 3.

3-4 περί μέν οδυ τοῦ δόξαν άληθη к.т. λ.] Cf. above ch. ii. §§ 3-4. We must dismiss any idea that the phenomena of incontinence can be explained by saying that the incontinent man has only moral opinions, and that opinions are weak. 'Heraclitus shows' that opinions may be as strongly held as scientific certainties. Of course neither Aristotle nor his school would wish to do away with the distinction which Plato had established between δόξα and ἐπιστήμη. It is only as connected with the will, and as forming a ground for action, that opinion can be considered as strong as science.

δηλοί δ' Ἡράκλειτος ¡ Heraclitus had a reputation with the ancients for pride and dogmatism; cf. Diog. Laert. IX. i. 5: ἤκουσέ τε ούδενδε άλλ' αὐτὸν ἔφη διξήσασθαι και μαθεῦν πάντα παρ' ἐαντοῦ. Ἰδ. ΙΧ. i. ι: μεγαλόφρων δό ἀγγονε παρ' ἀντιναοῦν και ὑπερόπτης, ὡπ και ἐκ τοῦ συγγράμματος αὐτοῦ δῆλον ἐν ῷ ἀρησι' πολυμαθίη νόον οὁ διδάσκει. Ἡσίοδον γὰρ ῶν ἐδίδαξε και Ἡνθαγόρην, αθθίς τε Ζενοφάνεά τε και Ἡκαταῖον. εἶνοι γὰρ ἐν τὸ σοφὸν ἐπίστασθαι γνῶεινοι γὰρ ἐν τὸ σοφὸν ἐπίστασθαι γνῶεινοι γράρ.

5 άλλ' έπεὶ διχώς-θεωρών] 'But since we use the term "knowing" in two senses, both to denote the man who possesses without applying, and the man who applies knowledge, there will be a difference between doing what is wrong, when you have the knowledge but do not attend to it, and doing the same when you have the knowledge and pay attention to it. The latter case seems strange, but not so if you act without attending.' This distinction between the possession and the application of knowledge, which is of the utmost importance for explaining moral weakness, was perhaps first started by Plato in the Theatetus, pp. 197-198, where he introduces his famous image of the pigeon-house. Every knowledge once acquired by the mind is like a bird caught and placed in a pigeon-house; it is possessed, but not available, till it be chased within the enclosure and captured anew.

μὴ θεωροῦντα] θεωρεῖν is used to express 'direct observation,' just as in Eth. VI. iii. 2: ὅταν ἔξω τοῦ θεωρεῖν γένηται.

6 έτι έπει-θαυμαστόν] 4 Again since the premisses (in a syllogism) are of two modes, nothing hinders a man acting against knowledge, although he possesses both these, if he apply only the universal premiss, but not the particular, for it is particulars which are the objects of action. Moreover there is a distinction which may be made in the universal itself; part of it applies to the subject (¿φ' ἐαυτοῦ), and part to the object (ἐπὶ τοῦ πράγmaros); for instance (you may have the universal) "dry things are good for all men," and (the minor premiss) "this is a man," or "such and such is dry;" but (the farther knowledge) that "this object is such and such," the person either has not or it is not According then to these realised. different modes of the premisses there will be an immense difference (in the way one knows), so that there is nothing paradoxical in (the incontinent man) "knowing" in the way I have specified, but that he should know otherwise would be marvellous. This section well points out the number of particular applications which have to be made before a general moral principle can be realised and acted on. Else it remains in abeyance, and the man who possesses it may yet act against it.

7 έν τῷ γὰρ ἔχειν οἰνωμένων] ' For in the case of having and not using we see that the having (τὴν ἔξιν) becomes quite a different thing, so that in such cases a man has (knowledge) after a manner, and has it not, as for instance in sleep, in madness, and in drunkenness.' Esis is used here simply as the active verbal noun of fyw, as it is in a passage of Plato, already alluded to, which the writer possibly had before his mind, Theætetus, p. 197 A: anhκοας οὖν δ νῦν λέγουσι τὸ ἐπίστασθαι; - Ισως · οὐ μέντοι ἔν γε τῷ παρόντι μνημονεύω.- Έπιστήμης που έξιν φασί αύτὸ είναι.

καὶ μανίας ποιούσιν. δῆλον οὖν ὅτι ὁμοίως ἔχειν λεκτέον τοὺς ἀκρατεῖς τούτοις. τὸ δὲ λέγειν τοὺς λόγους τοὺς ἀπὸ 8 τῆς ἐπιστήμης οὐδὲν σημεῖον καὶ γὰρ οἱ ἐν τοῖς πάθεσι τούτοις ὅντες ἀποδείξεις καὶ ἔπη λέγουσιν Ἐμπεδοκλέους, καὶ οἱ πρῶτον μαθόντες συνείρουσι μὲν τοὺς λόγους, ἴσασι δ' οὔπω δεῖ γὰρ συμφῦναι, τούτω δὲ χρόνου δεῖ ὥστε καθάπερ τοὺς ὑποκρινομένους, οὔτως ὑποληπτέον λέγειν καὶ τοὺς ἀκρατευομένους. ἔτι καὶ ὧδε φυσικῶς ἄν τις ἐπι- 9

8 τὸ δὲ λέγειν - ἀκρατευομένους] Now repeating the words which belong to knowledge is no sign, for those also who are in the states I have mentioned repeat demonstrations and verses of Empedocles, and those who are beginning to learn string the words together without yet understanding them : for (to be understood) a thing must be assimilated, and for this time is required. So in short we must suppose that men in a state of incontinence speak just like actors.' This is an extremely subtle observation. The writer having said that passion is like sleep or madness, which make one know and yet not know at the same time, proceeds to remark that men acting incontinently will often speak as if they were fully aware of the nature of their acts. They will say at the very moment of yielding to temptation, 'I know I ought not to do this.' But such words are no sign that the knowledge is really felt and realised; they are only like the verses of Empedocles which a man might mutter in his sleep; they are like the repetition of a schoolboy's task; they are hollow like the ranting of an actor.

dπò τῆεἐπιστήμηε] 'That are caused by, are the results of, science,' Cf. Met. I. iv. 4: ἀλλ' οῦτε ἐπεῖνοι ἀπὸ ἐπιστήμηε, 'they do it not because of science;' and see below, IX. ix. 6. ol πρώτον μαθόντες] Cf. Eth. VI. viii. 6.

9-II έτι καὶ ώδε-μνήμην] 'Again in the following manner one might psychologically consider the cause. There is first a general belief, and secondly a particular belief, which is no longer under the domain of reason, but under that of sense. Now when out of these two a third is created, it is a necessity that the mind should on the one hand assert the conclusion, and in the sphere of practice should straightway carry it out. As, for instance, if (there be the general proposition) "one ought to taste all that is sweet," and the particular one "this thing is sweet," it is a necessity that he who is able, and is not hindered. should at once proceed to act upon the knowledge. When therefore there is in the mind one universal which forbids tasting, but another which says, "all that is sweet is pleasant" (having a minor), "this thing is sweet," and thus the second universal is realised,-and supposing that desire happen to be there; (in this case) the first universal says, "avoid this," but desire leads us on (to take it), from the power which it has of setting in motion every one of our organs. Thus the result is that one is incontinent under the sanction as it were of reason and belief, and a belief too which is opposed not directly but only accidenβλέψειε την αιτίαν. η μεν γάρ καθόλου δόξα, η δ' ετέρα περὶ τῶν καθ' ἔκαστά ἐστιν, ὧν αἴσθησις ήδη κυρία· ὅταν δὲ μία γένηται ἐξ αὐτῶν, ἀνάγκη τὸ συμπερανθὲν ἔνθα μὲν φάναι τὴν ψυχήν, ἐν δὲ ταῖς ποιητικαῖς πράττειν εὐθύς, οἴον, εἰ παντὸς γλυκέος γεύεσθαι δεῖ, τουτὶ δὲ γλυκὰ ὡς ἔν τι τῶν καθ' ἔκαστον, ἀνάγκη τὸν δυνάμενον καὶ μὴ κωλυό10 μενον ἄμα τοῦτο καὶ πράττειν. ὅταν οῦν ἡ μὲν καθόλου ἐνῆ κωλύουσα γεύεσθαι, ἡ δέ, ὅτι πῶν τὸ γλυκὰ ἡδύ, τουτὶ δὲ γλυκὰ (αὕτη δὲ ἐνεργεῖ), τύχη δ' ἐπιθυμία ἐνοῦσα, ἡ μὲν λέγει φεύγειν τοῦτο, ἡ δ' ἐπιθυμία ἄγει· κινεῖν γὰρ ἕκαστον δύναται τῶν μορίων· ὥστε συμβαίνει ὑπὸ λόγου tally (to the true knowledge). For it is desire, and not the intellectual belief, which is opposed to the right law. And this consideration leads us to see why it is that brutes are not incontinent, namely, because they have no conception of universals, but only an image and a memory of particulars.'

This passage gives an admirable explanation of the way in which a man under temptation may ignore his moral principles, Action (as the writer implies) always depends on a syllogism in the mind, and, if a minor premiss were applied to the right moral principle, wrong action could never take place. But it is equally true that the man who acts wrongly does so under some sort of shadow of reason. The story of the temptation of Eve is typical of all similar cases of vielding. There are always arguments and considerations on which the mind, self-deceived and blinded by desire, may form a syllogism, And as the writer observes, the misleading principle thus applied is not directly false or contrary to what is right. The saving 'sweet things are pleasant' is not in itself contrary to the principle 'intemperance is to be avoided.' Accidentally and in their effects the two

φυσικῶτ] Perhaps 'psychologically' is the most representative translation which we can give of this word in the present passage. Psychology, up to a certain extent, was considered as a branch of physics by Aristotle, see Vol. I. Essay V. p. 295, and cf. Eth. Ix. ix. 7.

#$\delta_n\] A circumlocution is necessary to express what was probably here meant by this word. Cf. Eth. vi. xi.2.

trθα μέν] i.e. in the sphere of the reason, to which èν δὲ ταῖς ποιητικαῖς is opposed. For the latter phrase we should have expected to find ταῖς πρακτικαῖς, a formula which occurs Eth. vi. xi. 4. But in the Eudemian Ethics, II. xi. 4, exactly the same usage is found: ἑωπερ γιὰρ ταῖς θεωρητικαῖς al ὑποθέσεις ἀρχαί, οθτω καὶ ταῖς ποιητικαῖς τὸ τέλος ἀρχὴ καὶ ὑπόθεσις. It is not easy to say what substantive is understood. Perhaps al πρακτικαὶ (or ποιητικαὶ) ἐπιστήμαι was the original phrase.

άνάγκη—πράττειν εὐθύς] On the doctrine of the practical syllogism, see Vol. I. Essay IV. pp. 263-270.

τῶν μορίων] i.e. ' the parts of the body.' This is mixing up a physical explanation with the account of mental phenomena. The same thing is done πως καὶ δόξης ἀκρατεύεσθαι, οὐκ ἐναντίας δὲ καθ΄ αὐτήν, ἀλλὰ κατὰ συμβεβηκός ἡ γὰρ ἐπιθυμία ἐναντία, ἀλλ' 11 οὐχ ἡ δόξα, τῷ ὀρθῷ λόγῳ ὅστε καὶ διὰ τοῦτο τὰ θηρία οὐκ ἀκρατῆ, ὅτι οὐκ ἔχει τῶν καθόλου ὑπόληψιν, ἀλλὰ πῶν καθ΄ ἔκαστα φαντασίαν καὶ μνήμην. πῶς δὲ λύεται ἡ 12 ἄγνοια καὶ πάλιν γίνεται ἐπιστήμων ὁ ἀκρατής, ὁ αὐτὸς λόγος καὶ περὶ οἰνωμένου καὶ καθεύδοντος καὶ οὐκ ἴδιος τούτου τοῦ πάθους, ὁν δεῖ παρὰ τῶν φυσιολόγων ἀκούειν. ἐπεὶ δ' ἡ τελευταία πρότασις δόξα τε αἰσθητοῦ καὶ 13 κυρία τῶν πράξεων, ταύτην ἡ οὐκ ἔχει ὁ ἐν τῷ πάθει ὤν, in the Peripatetic treatise De Motu Animalium; cf. especially with the present passage Ib. viii 5: διά τοδτο δ΄ άμα ών είπεὐν νοεί δτι πορευτέον καί πορεύεται, ἀν μή τι ἐμποδίξη ἔτερον. τὰ μὲν γὰρ ὀργανικὰ μέρη παρασκευάζει ἐπιτηδείων τὰ πάθη, ἡ δ΄ δρεξιν τὰ πάθη, την δ΄ δρεξυ ἡ φαντασία αξτη δὲ γίνεται ἡ διὰ νοήσεων ἡ διὰ αισθήσεων.

II The mere intellectual knowledge that a thing is pleasant is not opposed to the moral law. It is only when this knowledge has become desire, i.e. part of the will, which implies acting, that an opposition is felt. Brutes act on desire, but their intellectual apprehension being entirely of particulars, there is a harmony between desire and the data of perception which prevents our attributing incontinence to brutes .- It might be said that there are dawnings of the moral faculty, traces of a sense of right and wrong, in some animals, for instance, dogs; but the writer here does not enter upon the subject. On the meaning given by Aristotle to parragla, see note on Eth. III. v. 17.

12 'New to explain how the oblivion ($\delta_{\text{polar}}\omega_{\text{a}}\) of the incontinent man is stopped, and how he comes again to the use of his knowledge, requires no special account peculiar to this condition, but the same account as is to be given about (the recovery of) the intoxicated man or the sleeper, for which we must inquire of the physiologists.' The most interesting relic of the speculations of the old physiologists upon the above question which has come down to us, is the account given by Sextus Empiricus (Adv. Math. VII. 129) of the opinion of Heraclitus, who thought that our rationality depended upon our communion through the senses with the universal reason that surrounds us; in sleep we become foolish because cut off from all communication with this, except through the act of breathing alone, but on awaking we are again replenished. Τοῦτον δη τὸν θεῖον λόγον καθ' Ἡράκλειτον δι' άναπνοής σπάσαντες νοεροί γινόμεθα, καὶ ἐν ὅπνοις ληθαῖοι, κατὰ δὲ έγερσιν πάλιν έμφρονες. Εν γάρ τοις ϋπνοις μυσάντων των αlσθητικών πόρων, γωρίζεται της πρός το περιέγον συμφυίας ό ἐν ὑμῶν νοῦς, μόνης τῆς κατὰ ἀναπνοὴν προσφύσεως σωζομένης, ολογεί τινος βίζης · χωρισθείς τε ἀποβάλλει ήν πρότερον είχε μνημονικήν δύναμιν, έν δέ έγρηγορόσι πάλιν διά των αίσθητικών πόρων, ώσπερ διά τινων θυρίδων προκύψας και τώ περιέχοντι συμβάλλων λογικήν ἐνδύεται δύναμιν.

and being what determines action,this is either not possessed by a man in the condition we have been describing, or he possesses it in a way in which, as we said (ώς οὐκ ἢν), possession is not knowledge, but is only a form of words, like the drunken man spouting Empedocles. And since the minor term is not universal and has not the same scientific character as the universal, the question raised by Socrates seems really (kal) to be substantiated. For it is not knowledge properly so called that is present when the condition arises, nor is it this which is twisted about by the condition of mind that comes on,-but only perceptional knowledge.' This section winds up the discussion of the compatibility of knowledge with incontinence. The first sentence is clear enough, but there is some little obscurity in the saying that perceptional knowledge is present in incontinence, and is overborne by passion. What is meant apparently is, that passion prevents that perception which would cause the moral principle existent in the mind to be realised. Hence, in short, there is a moral oblivion, and it is quite true that Socrates was justified in saying that incontinence could not take place if knowledge of the right were really present to the consciousness of the actor.

καὶ διὰ τὸ μὴ καθόλου] Lambinus, followed by Fritzsche, places a full stop before these words, and connects them with καl ξοικεν δ Σωκράτης. This punctuation has been adopted in the above translation as making far better sense. It must be confessed, however, that the Paraphrast favours the punctuation of Bekker. The occurrence of καl before ξοικεν would naturally lead to a full stop being placed after δροκ, but καl is rather to be explained as giving emphasis to ξοικε συμβαίνειν; cf. ch. x. 2: δι καl δοκοδωτ μόσε κ.τ.λ. Εth. III. viii. 6: δθεν καl δωκράτης. Ib. § 10, δθεν καl "Ομηρος.

ή τελευταία πρότασις] This phrase is equivalent to ή έτέρα πρότασις, Εέλ. VI. Xi. 4. The minor premiss is so called as containing the έσχατος δρος, or minor term, which is mentioned shortly after.

ἀπ οὐκ ἡν] With this use of the past tense, cf. Eth. v. vi. 9: κατὰ νόμον γὰρ ἡν, 'for this is, as we have said, according to law.'

δ ἐξήτει] This is sometimes translated 'what Socrates meant,' for which the Greek would have been δ ήθελε οτ ἐβούλετο λέγειν. δ ἔξήτει must mean 'the questionings' or 'doubts' of Socrates, i.e. as to the possibility of acting against knowledge. Cf. Eth. 1. iv. 5: Εδ γὰρ καὶ Πλάτων ήπόρει τοῦτο καὶ ἔξήτει.

της αίσθητικης] The phrase αίσθητικη ξπιστήμη would to some philosophers Πότερον δ' ἐστί τις ἀπλῶς ἀκρατης ἡ πάντες κατὰ μέ- 4 ρος, καὶ εἰ ἔστι, περὶ ποῖά ἐστι, λεκτέον ἐφεξῆς. ὅτι μὲν οὖν περὶ ἡδονὰς καὶ λύπας εἰσὶν οἴ τ' ἐγκρατεῖς καὶ καρτερικοὶ καὶ οἱ ἀκρατεῖς καὶ μαλακοί, φανερόν. ἐπεὶ δ' ἐστὶ τὰ 2 μὲν ἀναγκαῖα τῶν ποιούντων ἡδονήν, τά δ' αἰρετὰ μὲν καθ' αὐτὰ ἔχοντα δ' ὑπερβολήν, ἀναγκαῖα μὲν τὰ σωματικά. λέγω δὲ τὰ τοιαῦτα, τά τε περὶ τὴν τροφὴν καὶ τὴν τῶν ἀφροδισίων χρείαν, καὶ τὰ τοιαῦτα τῶν σωματικῶν περὶ ὰ τὴν ἀκολασίαν ἔθεμεν καὶ τὴν σωφροσύνην. τὰ δ' ἀναγκαῖα μὲν οὔ, αἰρετὰ δὲ καθ' αὐτά. λέγω δ' οἶον νίκην τιμὴν πλοῦτον καὶ τὰ τοιαῦτα τῶν ἀγαθῶν καὶ ἡδέων. τοὺς μὲν οὖν πρὸς ταῦτα παρὰ τὸν ὀρθὸν λόγον ὑπερβάλλοντας be a contradiction in terms, as they would hold that sensible things cannot be known. A doctrine was attributed to Speusippus, of which we may be here reminded, viz. that besides science there is 'scientific perception.' Cf. Sextus Empiricus adv. Math. VII. 145: Σπεύσιππος δέ, ἐπεὶ τῶν πραγμάτων τὰ μὲν αΙσθητά τὰ δὲ νοητά, τῶν μὲν νοητῶν κριτήριον ἐλεξεν εἶναι τὸν ἐπιστημονικὸν λόγον, τῶν δὲ αἰσθητῶν τὴν ἐπιστημονικὴν αἰσθησιν, ἐπιστημονικὴν δὲ αἰσθησιν ὑπείληφε καθεστάναι τὴν μεταλαμβάνουσαν τῆς κατὰ τὸν λόγον ἀληθείας.

IV. This chapter discusses the question mooted above (ch. i. § 7, ch. ii. § 11), as to whether incontinence is an absolute term, having a definite object-matter, or is merely relative. The answer is very simple. Pleasure is divided into necessary and desirable (§ 2), or into good, bad, and indifferent (§ 5). Incontinence, in an absolute sense, applies only to the necessary or bodily pleasures. It has then the same range of objects as were before assigned to Temperance and Intemperance and differs from Intemperance chiefly in that it goes against the reason and the will, instead of carrying them on its side. Having thus laid down a definite notion of Incontinence as something absolute and positive, it is easy to see that the idea and the term may be applied in a sort of analogous sense to mean an ill-control of the desires for other kinds of pleasures also, beside the bodily pleasures, e.g. wealth or honour. In such applications we must recollect that the use of the word Incontinence is metaphorical.

2 περί α την ακολασίαν εθεμεν και την σωφροσύνην] Cf. Εth. Εud. III, ii. 5: 'Επεί δ' ο σώφρων έστι περί ήδουάς, ανάγκη και περί επιθυμίας τινάς αύτον εθναι. Δεί δη λαβεύν περί τίνας. Ου γάρ περί πάσας ουδό περί απαντα τὰ ήδια ό σώφρων έστίν, άλλα τῆ μὲν δόξη περί δίο τῶν αίσθητῶν, περί τε τὸ γευστὸν και τὸ ἀπτόν, τῆ δ' άληθεία περί τὸ ἀπτόν, κ.τ.λ.] This is of course taken from Eth. Nic. III. x. 3-8.

(i.e. good pleasures) transgress that right law which they have within themselves, we do not call simply "incontinent," but we add a qualifying term (προστιθέντες) and speak of them as incontinent of wealth, gain, honour, rage, -not as absolutely incontinent, because they are different from this and are only called incontinent by analogy, as in the phrase "Man that has been victor at Olympia;" there the general conception (of man) differed but little from the special conception of the individual in question, and yet still it was different.' The meaning of this passage is clear, not so however that of the illustration which closes it. It is plain that the word ἀκρατής when spoken of in relation to anger, money, &c., has a somewhat different sense from the unqualified term departs, which implies a certain moral weakness with regard to bodily indulgence. But what is meant by saying that ἄνθρωπος ὁ τὰ 'Ολύμπια νενικηκώς is different from the general conception Man? There appear to be only two explanations possible: (1) that supported by the Scholiast on this place and also the Scholiast on Eth. v. i .- by Alexander Aphrod, ad

Topica I, xvi., by Suidas, and by Eustathius on Iliad, A, p. 847: namely, that there was a certain Olympionices whose name was "Ανθρωπος. It might be said that this name "Ανθοωπος was not more distinct from the general term 'Man,' than the term departs in the phrase ἀκρατης θυμοῦ is from the general conception of incontinence. The historical tenses διέφερεν and έτερος ήν are in favour of this interpretation. (2) It might be argued that these very tenses had given rise to a conjectural fiction about a person called "Ανθρωπος. The Paraphrast takes no notice of the tradition, and treats the illustration as a logical one, which would come merely to this, 'the conception of an individual implies a certain diversity from the conception of the genus.' If this be accepted, the past tenses of the verbs must be understood to mean a reference to some previous logical discourse with which the school was familiar. In short, the passage must be considered to bear traces of being a scrap from some oral lecture-a hypothesis not to be entirely set aside with regard to parts of the Ethics of Aristotle.

διό μᾶλλον ἀκόλαστον κ.τ.λ.] It is more intemperate to pursue luxury, &c., in cold blood, than to do so under the influence of passion. It shows that luxury has become more a part of the mind itself.

5-6 The remainder of this chapter is little more than a repetition of what has gone before. Indulgence in the good pleasures is no harm, except it be to excess; even excess in them is rather folly than vice, and is not to be called by the name of incontinence, except as a sort of metaphor.

έπει δέ--ύπερβάλλεω] 'Now since some desires and pleasures are in their kind beautiful and good-according to our former division of pleasures into the naturally desirable, the naturally detestable, and the intermediate-as, for instance, wealth, gain, victory, and honour (are good); with regard then to all such, and the intermediate pleasures, men are not blamed for feeling, desiring, and loving them, but for some sort of excess in them.' The present division of pleasures can hardly be said to have been made 'before,' though it can be harmonised with that given above in § 2. The φύσει alpera (of which wealth and honour are specimens) answer to the alpera uèv καθ' αὐτά έχοντα δ' ὑπερβολήν; while τὰ μεταξύ here correspond with the 'necessary or bodily pleasures' of the former passage. The writer has here introduced a mention of pleasures 'naturally detestable,' by which must be meant the bestial pleasures which are discussed in the following chapter. The formula τὰ δ' ἐναντία, τὰ δὲ μεταξύ, is used by Eudemus in Eth. Eud. II. x. 24: άλλα μην έκάστου γε φθορά καί διαστροφή ούκ είς τὸ τυχόν, άλλ' είς τὰ έναντία και τὰ μεταξύ. Later in the present book (ch. xiv. § 2) there is a mention made of pleasures which are not only good in themselves, but do not admit of excess.

μοχθηρία μὲν οδν] This is an anacoluthon. The sentence ought to form an apodosis and supply a verb to διό δσοι μὲν κ.τ.λ. We therefore require μοχθηροί μὲν οἰκ elef, &c.

6 δι ομοίστητα δέ] The writer seems here to make a mistake about the history of the word ἀκρατής, just as before (Είδι. v. x. 1) about the history of the word ἐπεικής. 'Ακρατής in a limited and special sense, to denote want of control over a particular set of desires, is certainly later than the general use of the word, as in the phrase ἀκρατής ὀργῆς, &c. Hence the latter is not to be regarded (historically) as a metaphorical extension of the former.

V. This chapter discusses those kinds of incontinence which are something more than incontinence, being morbid or bestial. Certain pleasures are specified which imply a depravity either of nature or habits. A sort of classification of these is suggested, but the whole style of the chapter is careless and inaccurate.

I ἐπεὶ δ'-ἔξεις] 'Now while some things are natural pleasures, either absolutely so, or relatively to the different races of animals and men, other pleasures are not natural, but depend on physical defects or habits or depravity of the nature; and we may see moral conditions corresponding to each of these latter kinds.' The apodosis to exel is fore kal week τούτων. The things which are 'pleasures absolutely ' are for instance life and consciousness; while it depends on the constitution of the race whether it be pleasant to live on land or water, &c. In this passage φύσις is used in two senses, (I) φύσει = in accordance with the entire constitution of things. not only what is, but what ought to be. (This corresponds with head V. in the note on Eth. II. i, 3,) (2) φύσεις means individual natures, not as they ought to be, but as they are. (See the same note, head IV.)

2 τὰς θηριώδεις] i.e. ἔξεις. τὴν ἄνθρωπον] 'The female.' The word ἄνθρωπος (in the feminine) was applied contemptuously, as, for instance, to female slaves. Here it denotes the monstrous nature of the person in question, who was not to be called 'a woman.' Perhaps for the same reason it was applied by Herodotus to the gigantic Phys. Book I. ch. 60 : και έν τῷ ἄστεϊ πειθόμενοι τὴν γυναίκα είναι αύτην την θεόν προσεύχοντό τε την άνθρωπον και έδέκοντο τὸν Hεισίστρατον. Cf. Mag. Mor. I. xv. 2: Οξόν φασι ποτέ τινα γυναϊκα φίλτρον τινί δούναι πιείν είτα τὸν άνθρωπον άποθανείν ύπὸ τοῦ φίλτρου, την δ' άνθρωπον έν 'Αρείω πάγω άποφυγείν.

τούς δὲ τὰ παιδία δανείζειν ἀλλήλοις εἰς εὐοχίαν ' And others (they say) lend their children to each other (in turn) to be served up as a banquet. Cf. 2 Kings vi. 26–29, where the same horrible arrangement is said to have been made under the compulsion of famine. The shores of the Black Sea seem to have had a character for cannibalism. Cf. Ar. Pol. viii. iv. 3: πολλά δ' ἐστὶ τῶν ἐθνῶν ἄ πρὸς τὸ κτείνειν καὶ πρὸς τὴν ἀνθρωποφαγίαν εὐχερῶν ἔχει, καθάπερ τῶν περὶ τὸν Πόντον 'Αχαιοί τε καὶ Ἡρίοχοι.

ή των άφροδισίων τοις άρρεσιν] It is important to observe here the strong terms in which the unnatural character of these practices is denounced. An equally strong and more explicit passage occurs in the Laws of Plato, p. 636 B, where the advantages and disadvantages of the gymnasia and syssitia are discussed: Kal oh kal παλαιών νόμιμον δοκεί τούτο τὸ ἐπιτήδευμα κατά φύσιν τὰς περί τὰ ἀφροδίσια ήδονας οὐ μόνον άνθρώπων άλλά καί θηρίων διεφθαρκέναι. 4-5 όσοις μέν οθν - λεκτέον] Where nature is the cause, one cannot call people incontinent, just as no one would find fault with women for being not male but female; and it is the same with those who by habit have superinduced a morbid condition. To possess, indeed, any of these tendencies is beyond the pale of vice, just as bestiality is; and if a person possesses them, his subduing them or being subdued by them is a matter not of simple incontinence (or continence), but is the "analogous" kind, exactly as a man who is in this condition with regard to his angry passions may be called (incontinent of anger), but not simply incontinent.' What the writer here implies is quite true, that morality requires for its sphere certain natural conditions of body and mind. In states that are entirely morbid, whether originally so or from the

VI. It having been repeatedly laid down that there are some kinds of incontinence not simply to be called so without a qualification, there now follows a comparison of some of these kinds, from a moral point of view, with incontinence proper. Incontinence of anger is not so bad as incontinence of lust, (1) because there is more semblance of reason in anger: (2) because anger is more a matter of constitution; (3) it admits of less deliberate purpose; (4) because anger is exercised under a sort of pain, and not in wantonness. As to the rest, incontinence which exceeds the pale of human weakness is more horrible, but at the same time is rarer and less mischievous, than vice.

τιμωρίαν. ὁ μὲν γὰρ λόγος ἡ ἡ φαντασία ὅτι ὕβρις ἡ ολιγωρία ἐδήλωσεν, ὁ δ' ὥσπερ συλλογισάμενος ὅτι δεῖ τῷ τοιούτῳ πολεμεῖν χαλεπαίνει δὴ εὐθύς ἡ δ' ἐπιθυμία, ἐὰν μόνον εἴπη ὅτι ἡδὺ ὁ λόγος ἡ ἡ αἴσθησις, ὁρμῷ πρὸς τὴν ἀπόλαυσιν. ὥσθ' ὁ μὲν θυμὸς ἀκολουθεῖ τῷ λόγῳ πως, ἡ δ' ἐπιθυμία οὔ. αἰσχίων οὖν. ὁ μὲν γὰρ τοῦ θυμοῦ ἀκρατὴς τοῦ λόγου πως ἡττᾶται, ὁ δὲ τῆς ἐπιθυμίας καὶ οὐ τοῦ ² λόγου. ἔτι ταῖς φυσικαῖς μᾶλλον συγγνώμη ἀκολουθεῖν

I ὁ μὲν γὰρ λόγος—σἔ] 'For first (μέν) reason or fancy tells that there is insult or slight, and then (anger) drawing a sort of conclusion, "I must fight with such and such," forthwith rages accordingly. But desire, if reason or sense merely assert that a thing is pleasant, rushes to the enjoyment of it : so that anger in a way follows reason, but desire does not.' Φαντασία here seems nearly to correspond to our word 'fancy,' which has of course grown out of the Greek term, though it has come to imply widely different associations. are told in Ar. De An. III. iii. 15 that paraola may be mistaken. See the note on Eth. III. v. 17.

The present passage might seem discrepant from ch. iii. § 10, ωστε συμβαίνει ύπο λόγου πως και δόξης ἀκρατεύεσθαι, where incontinence is said to have some sort of reasoning in what it does. And if the comparison were exactly carried out, it would probably appear that incontinent anger had no more reason in it than incontinent desire. But it is true that anger is fundamentally based on an idea of justice, however wild that idea may he. Hence there is a peculiar force in συλλογισάμενος ότι δεί. And hence, too, anger is a less immediately selfish passion than desire. It is less debasing in the long run to the character. On anger, cf. Eth. v. viii. 10: odôè περί του γενέσθαι ή μή άμφισβητείται, άλλά περὶ τοῦ δικαίου ' ἐπὶ φαινομένη γὰρ ἀδικία ἡ ὀργή ἐστυν; and Ar. Rhet. II. ii. I: Ἐστω δὴ ὀργὴ ὁρεξιε μετά λύπης τιμωρίας φαινομένης διὰ φαινομένην ὀλιγωρίαν. The illustrations in the text comparing anger to an over-hasty servant who runs off before he has heard half the message, or to a dog who barks without waiting to see who it is, are most admirable.

2 The next plea urged in favour of anger is that it is more natural (or, we might say, constitutional) than desire: in support of which two humorous stories are told in the text (see Vol. I. Essay III. p. 217). The argument appears somewhat contradictory to Eth. II. iii. 10; έτι δὲ γαλεπώτερον ήδονή μάχεσθαι ή θυμώ, καθάπερ φησίν 'Ηράκλειτος. However, when we look closely at the text, we find that it is 'excessive and unnecessary desire' with which anger is here compared (των επιθυμιών των της ύπερβολης καί των μή ἀναγκαίων). This no doubt makes the above assertion true, but it gives a new conception of incontinence as compared with the mention of ἀναγκαῖα ἡδέα, c. iv. § 2. It sets incontinence too much in the light of θηριότης. But indeed the vagueness of the term drpavia, and the uncertainty as to what it exactly implies, must be felt throughout the present discussions.

With regard to anger, it is true that hot temper is frequently consti-

4 Incontinence of desire is full of wantonness and exultation, while anger implies pain and suffering. This argument is similar to that used, Eth. III. xii. 2, to prove that intemperance is more voluntary than cowardice.

ό δ' ὑβρίζων μεθ' ἡδονῆκ] 'While he who wantons acts with pleasure.' There seems to be a double meaning in this passage to the word ὑβρίζει, exactly as there might be to our word 'wantonness.' It first means 'to act insolently' or 'wantonly' in a general sense, and secondly, it means to 'act wantonly' in a particular sense, i.e. lasciviously.

6 αύτων δε τούτων τὰς διαφοράς ληπτέον] i.e. the difference between continence and incontinence, which with other things is treated of in the There is a want of next chapter. method about the sequence of different parts in this book. The reference which follows, ώσπερ είρηται κατ' άρχάς only goes back to ch. v. I, and gives colour to a suspicion that the book may have been put together out of separate pieces, and perhaps lectures, one of which may have commenced with the fifth chapter.

διδ και τὰ θηρία—ἀνθρώπων] 'Hence we do not call brutes either temperate or intemperate, except by a metaphor, and where it happens that one whole race of animals in comparison with another is remarkable for wantonness it may be (run), or lechery, or voracity; for (animals) have no purpose or reasoning, but are beside themselves like madmen.' Different races of animals have good or bad moral characteristics ascribed to them. The goat, the ass, and the monkey have a bad reputation for wantonness, and the shark, &c., for voracity. It is not quite clear what is meant by εξέστηκε της φύσεως. Perhaps it may best be taken to imply not that animals transgress their own nature, but simply that they get into a state of ecstasy, like madmen, and have no senses nor any principle which would justify their being called either temperate or intemperate.

7 ελαττον δὲ—θηρίου] 'Now brutality is a less evil than vice, though it is more fearful, for in it the good principle is not corrupted, as in a man, but does not exist. Evil is always less harmful when it has no guiding principle, and reason is the guiding principle. So it is just like comparing injustice with an unjust man; each is in a different sense worse. A bad man will do ten thousandfold more evil than a beast.'

έχει] sc. τὸ θηρίον. The whole passage is briefly expressed, but perhaps requires no further comment.

VII. This chapter, after a general comparison between intemperance and incontinence (§ 1-3), makes some remarks on endurance, softness, and childishness (§ 4-7); and ends by distinguishing two kinds of incontinence, of which the one proceeds from impetuosity, the other from weakness of character.

έστι μέν-χείρους] 'It is possible to be in such a state as to yield to things that most men are superior to, and again it is possible to overcome things that most men yield to, Of those who possess these opposite dispositions with regard to pleasures, the first is an incontinent man, and the second a continent man; with regard to pains, the first is soft and the second enduring. But the state of the majority of mankind lies between these opposites, albeit men verge rather to the side of the worse.' Moral designations may be fixed either in relation to the standard of what is, or of what ought to be. Cf. Eth. III. xi. 4: των γάρ φιλοτοιούτων λεγομένων ή τῷ χαίρειν οίς μή δεί, ή τω μαλλον ή ol πολλοί. Ib. IV. iv. 4: ἐπαινοῦντες μὲν ἐπὶ τὸ μάλλον ή οι πολλοί, ψέγοντες δ' έπι τὸ μάλλον ή δεί, The above passage fixes the terms 'continent' and 'incontinent' relatively to what is, as implying more or less continence than people in general have. And yet there is evidently some reference beside to the standard of what ought to be, else it could not be said that people in general verge rather to the worse side. To represent the majority of mankind as possessing a mediocre moral character, neither eminently good nor bad, but inclining to weakness, was in accordance with the Greek point of view. Widely different from this was what may be called the Semitic point of view, which, regarding man with greater religious earnestness, attributed to him 'desperate wickedness.' The latter feeling was not confined to the Jews and to the pages of the Bible, but in some degree made itself known to the world in the Stoical philosophy. See Essay VI. p. 357, &c.

2 ἐπεὶ δ' ἔνιαι—ἀνίατος] 'Now as some pleasures are necessary, but others are not to be called so, as being (kal) only necessary in certain degrees, while their excesses or deficiencies are not necessary (and the same division holds with regard to desires and pains), he who pursues excessive pleasures, or who pursues pleasures not in themselves excessive in an excessive way, and does so from deliberate purpose, with no ulterior aim beyond the pleasures themselves, is abandoned (ἀκόλαστος), (and he may well be called so), for it stands to reason (draykn) that he is not likely to repent, and so he is incurable; for without repentance there is no cure.'

οὐδ' al ἐλλείψεις] This might seem superfluous. But what is meant is,

ή καθ' ὑπερβολάς + ή διά προαίρεσιν] The Paraphrast well expresses the meaning of this passage as follows: ό μέν τὰς ὑπερβολὰς διώκων τῶν ἡδονῶν, και ή τὰς φύσει μεγάλας ἀεὶ ζητών ήδονάς, ή τὰς φύσει μετρίας ὑπερβαλλόντως ζητών, οὐχ ἐλκόμενος βιαίως πως ὑπ' αὐτῶν, ἀλλὰ μετὰ προαιρέσεως έπ' αύτας τρέχων, ού δι' άλλο τι, δόξαν, φέρε είπειν, ή κέρδος, άλλά αὐτὰς δι' έαυτάς, ἀκόλαστος. It is plain that A before διά προαίρεσιν in the text must be a mistake. One of Bekker's MSS. reads kal, which would be very easily changed into $, especially with the clause ή καθ' ὑπερβολάς preceding. It would answer also to the expansion of the Paraphrast, σὐχ έλκό-MEYOS K.T. A.

ανάγκη γὰρ] If a man with deliberate purpose pursues pleasure for its own sake, he is not likely to repent of his course, therefore he is ἀκόλαστος. This is the first intimation we have had that an unrepenting character belongs to 'intemperance;' it is an irregular argument, unless we regard it as laying some stress on the etymology of the word ἀκόλαστος. Cf. Eth. III. xii. 5-7, IV. i. 5.

3 &στε διαφέρουσω ἀλλήλων] 'So that they are distinct from one another,' i.e. on the one hand the reprobate (Δκόλαστοι), in his two forms of systematically seeking pleasure, and of systematically avoiding pain; and, on the other hand, the morally weak, whether in the form of yielding to the allurements of pleasure (ἀκρατής), or flying from the pressure of pain (μαλακός). The comparison is not between the two forms of the μὴ προαιρούμενοι, but these are together contrasted with ἀκολασία.

τῶν δὴ λεχθέντων τὸ μὲν μαλακίας εἰδος μᾶλλον, ὁ δ' ἀκόλαστος ] The temptation is great to refer τῶν δὴ λεχθέντων to τῶν μὴ προαιρουμένων, and to read ἀκρατής for ἀκόλαστος, taking the sentence in connection with what follows. But when we consider (1) the unanimity of MSS.; (2) that μαλακία has been already distinguished from ἀκρασία, in § 1; (3) the import of μάλλον (cf. Εὐλ. VI. Viii. 9, αἕτη μᾶλλον αἰσθησιε ἡ φρόνησιε, ἐκεἰνης δ' άλλο είδοs), we shall be led to see that the sentence comes in, though rather in a disjointed way, to wind up the comparison here made generally between incontinence and intemperance (cf. ch. vi. § 5, and above, § 1). Incontinence may be said to be more like a kind of softness, while determinate vice is something different. Maλasia, according to this interpretation, is used here in a general sense, in the next section with a special and limited import.

4 Continence, it is argued, is finer than endurance, just as victory is finer than holding out. This argument is not sound, since continence is in reality nothing more than holding out against temptation. To noble natures continence would doubtless cause a greater struggle than mere endurance of pains, and in this sense it might be called finer.

5 δ δ' ἐλλείπων--δμοιος ών] 'Now he who faints before things against which most men hold out and are strong, he is soft and luxurious (for luxury, it may be added, is a kind δ' ἔχει καὶ περὶ ἐγκράτειαν καὶ ἀκρασίαν οὐ γὰρ εἴ τις ἰσχυρῶν καὶ ὑπερβαλλουσῶν ἡδονῶν ἡττᾶται ἡ λυπῶν, θαυμαστόν, ἀλλὰ συγγνωμονικόν, εἰ ἀντιτείνων, ὥσπερ ὁ Θεοδέκτου Φιλοκτήτης ὑπὸ τοῦ ἔχεως πεπληγμένος ἡ ὁ Καρκίνου ἐν τὴ ᾿Αλόπη Κερκύων, καὶ ὥσπερ οἱ κατέχειν πειρώμενοι τὸν γέλωτα ἀθρόον ἐκκαγχάζουσιν, οἷον συνέπεσε Ξενοφάντω, ἀλλ' εἴ τις πρὸς ἃς οἱ πολλοὶ δύνανται ἀντέχειν, τούτων ἡττᾶται καὶ μὴ δύναται ἀντιτείνειν, μὴ διὰ φύσιν τοῦ γένους ἡ διὰ νόσον, οἶον ἐν τοῖς Σκυθῶν βασιλεῦσιν ἡ μαλακία διὰ τὸ γένος, καὶ ὡς τὸ θῆλυ πρὸς τὸ τ ἄρρεν διέστηκεν. δοκεῖ δὲ καὶ ὁ παιδιώδης ἀκόλαστος εἶναι, ἔστι δὲ μαλακός ἡ γὰρ παιδιὰ ἄνεσίς ἐστιν, εἴπερ ἀνάπαυσις τῶν δὲ πρὸς ταύτην ὑπερβαλλόντων ὁ παιδιώδης εἐστίν. ἀκρασίας δὲ τὸ μὲν προπέτεια τὸ δ' ἀσθένεια οἱ μὲν γὰρ βουλευσάμενοι οὐκ ἐμμένουσιν οἶς ἐβουλεύσαντο διὰ τὸ of softness), he, for instance, who trails his cloak rather than have the trouble of lifting it, and who imitates the langour of an invalid, without seeing that it is miserable to be like one who is miserable.' This passage is somewhat in the style of the Characters of Theophrastus. To illustrate the affectation of weakness described above, Coray quotes from Athenæus a story of the Sybarites, one of whom said that he had been in the fields, and that 'to see the men digging had given him a rupture.' To which his friend replied, that 'the very mention of it gave him a pain in his side.'

6 ὁ Θεοδέκτου Φιλοκτήτητς] A play by Theodectes the rhetorician, a friend of Aristotle's. Fritzsche quotes Cicero, Tusc. II. vii. 19: Adspice Philoctetam, cui concedendum est gementi: ipsum enim Herculem viderat in Eta magnitudine dolorum ejulantem, &c.

Καρκίνου] Of this tragic poet nothing appears to be known,

Ξενοφάντω] Giphanius finds in Seneca, De Ira, II. 2, a mention of Xenophantus as a musician of Alexander the Great.

οίον έν τοίς Σκυθών βασιλεύσιν ή μαλακία διά τὸ γένος] Aspasius for Σκυθών reads Περσών. But the commentators refer us to Herodotus I. 105: τοίσι δὲ τῶν Σκυθέων συλήσασι τὸ Ιρὸν τὸ ἐν 'Ασκάλωνι καὶ τοῖσι τούτων άει έκγονοισι ενέσκηψε ή θεός θήλεαν νούσον ' ώστε άμα λέγουσί τε οί Σκύθαι διά τοῦτό σφεας νοσέειν. Hippocrates gives a description of this malady, which appears to have been a kind of impotence (De Aer. Ag. et Loc. VI. 108): εὐνουχίαι γίνονται καὶ γυναικεῖα έργάζονται καὶ ώς αὶ γυναίκες διαλέγονταί τε όμοίως, καλεύνται τε οι τοιούτοι dvardpieis. 'This impotency Hippocrates ascribes to venesection, but he mentions that the natives believed it to be a judgment from the gods. It is said that traces of the disease are still found among the inhabitants of Southern Russia.'-See Rawlinson's Herodotus, Vol. I. p. 248.

and sometimes weakness. Some men when they have deliberated, do not abide by their deliberations, owing to the state into which they are thrown, (and this is weakness); while others, from never having deliberated, are carried away by their feelings. Some, on the contrary, like the beginners in a tickling match, who cannot be tickled,-having prescience, and foresight, and having roused up themselves and their reason beforehand, are not overcome by their feelings, whether pleasant or painful. It is especially persons of a quick or bilious temperament who are subject to the impetuous kind of incontinence, for the one through the rapidity, and the other through the intensity, of their nature, do not wait to see what is the law of right, because they are apt to follow impressions,' ἄσπερ οι προγαργαλίσαντες] The Paraphrast understands ἐαυνούς, rendering the passage ἄσπερ τὰ προγαργαλισθέντα μέλη οὐ γαργαλίζονται. And two of Bokker's MSS. read ol προγαργαλισθέντε. It might be possible by previous tickling to exhaust the irritability of the cuticle, but this would not be a usual process, and in one of the Problems attributed to Aristotle (xxxv. vi.) it is discussed, 'Why cannot a mantickle himself?' To which the answer is, 'For the same reason that he can hardly be tickled by anybody else if he knows that it is going to happen. For laughter implies a sudden revulsion and a surprise.' Surely this is exactly what is meant in the text.

ol ôfeis kal μελαγγολικοί] An account which seems at first sight the opposite of this is given by the author of the Magna Moralia (II. vi. 43): Exelvy µèv ov (the impetuous kind of incontinence) οὐδ' ἀν λίαν δόξειεν είναι ψεκτή και γάρ έν τοις σπουδαίοις ή τοιαύτη έγγίνεται, έν τοῖς θερμοῖς καὶ εὐφυέσιν ' ή δè (the weak kind) èv τοῖς ψυχροίς και μελαγχολικοίς, οι δέ τοιούτοι ψεκτοί. If however we consult the curious disquisition on μελαγχολικοί and the μέλαινα χολή in Ar. Problems, xxx, i., we shall see that both passionate impetuosity and cold sluggishness were considered by the ancient physiologist to be different manifestations of the same strange temperament. Ib. xxx. i. 18: "Οσοις δὲ ἐν τῆ φύσει συνέστη κράσις τοιαύτη, εύθύς οδτοι τά ήθη γίνονται παντοδαποί, άλλος κατ' άλλην κράσιν' ολον δσοις μέν πολλή καλ ψυχρά ένυπάρχει, νωθροί και μωροί, όσοις δέ λίαν πολλή και θερμή, μανικοί και εύφυείς και έρωτικοί και εύκινητοι πρός τούς θυμούς και τὰς ἐπιθυμίας, ἔνιοι δὲ και λάλοι μάλλον. With the moderns the term 'melancholy' is restricted to the cold and dejected mood; while the ancients much more commonly applied the term μελαγχολικός to denote 8 "Εστι δ' ὁ μὲν ἀκόλαστος, ὅσπερ ἐλέχθη, οὐ μεταμελητικός ἐμμένει γὰρ τῆ προαιρέσει ὁ δ' ἀκρατὴς μεταμελητικὸς πᾶς. διὸ οὐχ ὥσπερ ἤπορήσαμεν, οὕτω καὶ ἔχει, ἀλλ' ὁ μὲν ἀνίατος, ὁ δ' ἰατός ἔοικε γὰρ ἡ μὲν μοχθηρία τῶν νοσημάτων οἶον ὑδέρω καὶ Φθίσει, ἡ δ' ἀκρασία τοῖς ἐπιληπτικοῖς ἡ μὲν γὰρ συνεχής, ἡ δ' οὐ συνεχής πονηρία. καὶ ὅλως δ' ἔτερον τὸ γένος ἀκρασίας καὶ κακίας ἡ μὲν γὰρ κακία λανθάνει, ἡ δ' ἀκρασία οὐ λανθάνει.

warmth, passion, and eccentricity of genius. Cf. Plato, Repub. 573 c: Τυραννικός δέ, Ϋν δ΄ έγώ, ῷ δαιμόνιε ἀνὴρ ἀκριβῶς γίγνεται, ὅταν ἢ φύσει ἢ ἐπιτηδεύμασιν ἢ ἀμφοτέροις μεθυστικός τε καὶ ἐρωτικός καὶ μελαγχολικός γένηται. Cf. also Ar. Probl. XI. XXXVIII: το τῆ φαντασία ἀκολουθεῦν ταχάως τὸ μελαγχολικόν εἶναι ἐστίν. In the language of our own day, 'The passionate heart of the poet is whirl'd into folly and vice.' For more remarks on μέλανα χολή, see below.

VIII. This chapter is not separated by any marked logical boundary from the preceding one. Rather it is a continuation of the same subject, as it goes on comparing incontinence with intemperance. Two previously mooted questions are now discussed, namely, is intemperance more curable than incontinence? (which is answered in the negative), and, is incontinence to be regarded as absolutely bad? (See above, ch. i. § 6.) This is also answered in the negative.

1 Ἐσσι δ' ὁ μὲν ἀκόλαστος, ὅσπερ ἐλέχθη, οὐ μεταμελητικός] Cf. ch. vii. § 2. The continuity of the subject is preserved, if we consider that the writer, having mentioned the various ways in which incontinent people submit to temptation, next reflects that, after yielding, these are all repentant  $(\mu\epsilon\tau\alpha\mu\epsilon\lambda\eta\tau\iota\kappa\delta\sigma \ \pi\hat{a}s)$ , while the intemperate man forms a contrast to them and is unrepentant.

διὸ οὐχ ὥσπερ ἡπορήσαμεν] Cf. ch.ii. § 10. Intemperance, which is a corruption of the will, is like a chronic disorder, while incontinence, which is a temporary derangement of the will, is like an epileptic seizure.

2 αὐτῶν δὲ-ἐμμένοντες δέ] 'Now looking at incontinence itself and the two kinds of it which I have mentioned, those people who are carried away are better than the sort who are in possession of "the law" but do not abide by it.' As said before, the thread of reasoning goes on continuously from the end of the preceding chapter (according to Bekker's division), and so there is nothing remarkable in the writer's now reverting to the two kinds of incontinence, as if he had never digressed from discussing them. Ol exorarixol here answers to the offis kal μελαγχολικοί (οί) την προπετή άκρασίαν είσιν άκρατείς. The words έκστασις, έκστήναι, and ἐκστατικός, are frequently used in the Problems (l.c.) in connection with the μελαγγολικοί. Cf. Ib. xxx. i. 3: ήττωνται, καὶ οὐκ ἀπροβούλευτοι ὥσπερ ἄτεροι ὅμοιος γὰρ ὁ ἀκρατής ἐστι τοῖς ταχὺ μεθυσκομένοις καὶ ὑπ' ὀλίγου οἴνου καὶ ἐλάττονος ἡ ὡς οἱ πολλοί. ὅτι μὲν οὖν κακία ἡ ȝ ἀκρασία οὐκ ἔστι, φανερόν. ἀλλά πη ἴσως τὸ μὲν γὰρ παρὰ προαίρεσιν τὸ δὲ κατὰ προαίρεσίν ἐστιν. οὐ μὴν ἀλλ΄ ὅμοιόν γε κατὰ τὰς πράξεις ὥσπερ τὸ Δημοδόκου εἰς Μιλησίους 'Μιλήσιοι ἀξύνετοι μὲν οὐκ εἰσίν, δρῶσι δ΄ οἶά-περ οἱ ἀξύνετοι,' καὶ οἱ ἀκρατεῖς ἄδικοι μὲν οὐκ εἰσίν, ἀδικοῦσι δέ. ἐπεὶ δ' ὁ μὲν τοιοῦτος οἶος μὴ διὰ τὸ πε- 4 πεῖσθαι διώκειν τὰς καθ' ὑπερβολὴν καὶ παρὰ τὸν ὀρθὸν λόγον σωματικὰς ἡδονάς, ὁ δὲ πέπεισται διὰ τὸ τοιοῦτος εἶναι οἶος διώκειν αὐτάς, ἐκεῖνος μὲν οὖν εὐμετάπειστος, ὁ δ' οὕ ἡ γὰρ ἀρετὴ καὶ ἡ μοχθηρία τὴν ἀρχὴν ἡ μὲν Φθείwhere it is said of Ajax, ἐκστατικὸς ἐγἐνετο παντελος (i.e. mad). Cf. above, ch. vi. § 6. Ἐκστατικὸς is used presently (§ 5) in a different sense to express 'departing from' a purpose, as also before, ch. i. § 6, and ii. § 7.

ol τὸν λόγον ἔχοντες] On this phrase see Eth. vi. i. i, and note.

δμοιος γὰρ—οί πολλοί] 'For the man who is weakly incontinent is like those who are soon intoxicated, and by a small quantity of wine, less than intoxicates people in general.' 'Ο ἀκρατής seems used in this sentence as if specially applicable to the weak kind of incontinence. It is in contrast to ἐκστατικός. Weakness is worse than being carried away by passion, for it is acting against warning and with less temptation.

3 Incontinence is not vice, though it resembles vice in what it does (κατὰ τὰs πράξει), but it goes against the will, while vice goes with the will. It is like the saying of Demodocus against the Milesians: 'The Milesians are not fools, but they are just as if they were fools.' The incontinent are not bad, but they do wrong.

Δημοδόκου] This was an epigrammatist of the island of Leros, not far VOL. II. from Miletus. Some of his epigrams against different cities are preserved in the Anthology. A slight change in the reading shows the above to be in verse:

Μιλήσιοι ἀξύνετοι μέν Οὐκ εἰσίν, δρώσιν δ' οἶάπερ ἀξύνετοι.

4 ή γάρ άρετη-έναντίος] 'For virtue, on the one hand, preserves, while vice destroys the major premiss. Now the end is in action just what the hypotheses are in mathematics, namely, a major premiss on which everything depends; hence, neither in the one case nor in the other is it the chain of inference (& \lambda \delta \gamma \gamma \gamma \sigma \text{s}) that demonstrates the major premiss, but in the case of action (ἐνταῦθα) it is virtue, either natural or acquired, to which a right opinion with regard to the major premiss is due. He who possesses this is temperate, while the contrary person is intemperate.' This passage comes in as a final argument against the notion that incontinence is more curable than intemperance. In the latter the fountain-head of action (the down) is destroyed. While the temperate man has in himself the source of all good action, the intemperate man is the direct opposite, and the al ὑποθέσεις] This term is used precisely in the same way in the Eudemian Ethics, II. x. 20: περί μέν τοῦ τέλους οὐθείς βουλεύεται, άλλά τοῦτ' έστιν άρχη και ύπόθεσις, ώσπερ έν ταίς θεωρητικαίς έπιστήμαις ὑποθέσεις * εξρηται δὲ περί αὐτῶν ἐν μὲν τοῖς ἐν ἀρχή βραχέως, ἐν δὲ τοῖς ἀναλυτικοῖς δι' άκριβείας (i.e. the Analytics of Eudemus). Cf. Ib. ch. xi. § 4: ωσπερ γάρ ταίς θεωρητικαίς αι ύποθέσεις άρχαί, ούτω και ταις ποιητικαίς το τέλος άρχη και ὑπόθεσις. In Eth. Eud. Aristotle, Post. Analyt. I. ii. 7, defines thesis or assumption as an immediate syllogistic principle, indemonstrable, but not (as the axioms are) a necessary antecedent to all reasoning, He divides these into hypotheses and definitions, which differ in that the former assert existence or non-existence, while the latter do not. The hypothesis, then, is a peculiar principle (οlκεία ἀρχή), and differs from an axiom, (I) in that it varies in the different sciences: (2) in that it is wanting in recognisable necessity. (Cf. Post, Anal. I. x. 6; ούκ ξστι δ' ὑπόθεσις . . , δ ἀνάγκη είναι δι' αὐτό και δοκείν ἀνάγκη). The Aristotelian hypothesis is, however, widely different from the hypothesis of the moderns, which means, in short, little more than a conjecture. For more particulars on this subject see Mr. Poste's Logic of Science (Oxford, 1850), p. 139-143.

τοῦ ὀρθοδοξεῦν] By what the grammarians call zeugma, this genitive goes with τῶν ἀρχῶν, as governed by διδασκαλικόs. One would have expected atria.

5 đàλos δ' έναντίος κ.τ.λ.] Incontinence having been shown to be an intermediate state not so bad as intemperance, it is here added that the true opposite to the incontinent man is he 'Who, through the heat of conflict, keeps the law

i.e. not the temperate, but the continent. And though incontinence is not absolutely bad, yet relatively, if you compare it with its opposite, you must call one bad and the other good.

IX. The first part of this chapter ($$ 1-4) takes up again the question before started (ch. i. § 6, ch. ii. § 7-10). Does continence consist in sticking to any opinion and purpose, whether wrong or right? After some refinements, which are perhaps unnecessary. as to the continent man 'accidentally' or 'non-essentially' maintaining a wrong opinion, a good distinction is given between obstinacy and continence. Obstinate people (Ισγυρογνώμονες), if not mere dullards (ol άμαθεῖς ral of dypouror), are self-opinionated. which state of mind is rather incontinence than continence, for it is a yielding to the desire for victory and self-assertion. The continent man, on the other hand, is not at all deaf to the voice of persuasion; it is only the voice of passion when opposed to reason which he resists. Nor is a man to be called incontinent if he deserts a resolution even for the sake of pleasure, since Neoptolemus deserted his resolution to deceive in order to obtain the noble pleasure of preserving his honour.

Ι ή ό τω ψευδεί λόγω και τη προαιρέσει τη μη δρθή] Various solutions have been proposed for the difficulty involved in this sentence. (1) Aspasius, followed by Argyropulus, Fritzsche, &c., think that euméror is to be understood as carried on from un έμμένων in the line before. But this will not do. The dκρατής cannot be said to 'abide by a false opinion.' (2) Some understand the clause as applying to cases like those of Neoptolemus, 'Is a man incontinent who does not stick to a false opinion?' But all this is implied in & oworgown κ.τ.λ. And moreover this interpretation would give a new sense to A. making it a particle of apposition instead of a particle of contrast, which is required for the sake of correspondence with the opening sentence. (3) One of Bekker's MSS, reads Tw ub ψευδεί λόγω και τη προαιρέσει τή δρθή. This is a very natural correction to make, and it seems followed by καθ' αύτο δε τῷ ἀληθεῖ λόγω καὶ τῆ ορθή προαιρέσει ό μεν εμμένει ό δ' οὐκ εμμένει; εί γάρ τις τοδί διὰ τοδί αίρειται ή διώκει, καθ' αυτό μέν τουτο διώκει και αίρειται, κατά συμβεβηκός δε το πρότερον, άπλως δε λέγομεν το καθ' αύτό, ώστε έστι μεν ώς όποιαοῦν δόξη ό μεν εμμένει 2 ο δ' εξίσταται, άπλως δε ο τη άληθεί. είσι δε τινες καί έμμενετικοί τη δόξη ούς καλούσιν ισχυρογνώμονας, οίον δύσπειστοι καὶ οὐκ εὐμετάπειστοι οἱ ὅμοιον μέν τι ἔχουσι τῷ ἐγκρατεῖ, ὤσπερ ὁ ἄσωτος τῷ ἐλευθερίω καὶ ὁ θρασὺς τῷ θαρραλέω, εἰσὶ δ' ἔτεροι κατὰ πολλά, ὁ μὲν γὰρ διὰ πάθος καὶ ἐπιθυμίαν οὐ μεταβάλλει, ὁ ἐγκρατής, ἐπεὶ εύπειστος, όταν τύχη, έσται ο εγκρατής ο δε ούχ ύπο λόγου, έπεὶ ἐπιθυμίας γε λαμβάνουσι, καὶ ἄγονται πολλοί 3 ύπο των ήδονων, είσι δε ισχυρογνώμονες οι ιδιογνώμονες καὶ οἱ ἀμαθεῖς καὶ οἱ ἄγροικοι, οἱ μὲν ἰδιογνώμονες δὶ ἡδονην και λύπην χαίρουσι γάρ νικῶντες, ἐὰν μη μεταπείθωνται, καὶ λυποῦνται, ἐὰν ἄκυρα τὰ αὐτῶν ἢ ὥσπερ ψηφίσματα ωστε μάλλον τῷ ἀκρατεῖ ἐοίκασιν ἡ τῷ 4 έγκρατεί, είσι δέ τινες οι τοις δόξασιν ουκ εμμένουσιν ου δι' ακρασίαν, οἷον έν τῷ Φιλοκτήτη τῷ Σοφοκλέους ό

the Paraphrast, who has  $\delta \mu \dot{\hat{\gamma}} \ \ell \mu \mu \ell r \omega r \hat{\eta} \ \delta \rho \theta \hat{\eta}$ . But since the correction is so natural, why should such a preponderance of MSS, have failed to adopt it? Though the sense absolutely requires some such reading, it seems better to conclude that there is some original confusion in the text. The author may have carelessly written as above from a mistaken antithesis to  $\dot{\eta}$  or  $\dot{\eta}$  op $\theta \dot{\eta}$  in the former sentence.

One chooses the means 'accidentally,'
This is a mere illustration of the import of καθ' αὐτό and συμβεβηκόs.
The whole paragraph seems perfectly irrelevant. It may be compared with Εὐλ. v. xi. 3: καθ' αὐτό μὲν οῦν τὸ ἀδικείσθαι ἢττον φαῦλον, κατὰ συμβεβηκὸς δ' οὐθὲν κωλύει μεζξον εἴναι κακόν, which is a weak qualification of the moral principle, that to injure is worse than to be injured.

2 ώσπερ ὁ ἀσωτος κ.τ.λ.] The same illustrations are coupled together in the Eudemian Ethics, III. vii. 14: τὸ ὁμοιότερον ἤττον έναντίον φαίνεται, οδον πέπουθε τὸ θράσος πρὸς τὸ θάρσος καὶ ἀσωτία πρὸς ἐλευθεριότητα.

δ δὲ οὐχ—ἡδονῶν] 'But the obstinate man (is immovable), not from the influence of reason, for such men assuredly admit desires, and many of them are carried away by the allurement of pleasures.' The curious phrase ἐπιθυμίας λαμβάνουσι occurs in the Eudemian Είλιζος, ΙΙΙ. ii. 13: πάντες γὰρ τούτοις φύσει τε χαίρουσι, καὶ ἐπιθυμίας λαμβάνουσι.

5-ch. x. § 5. In his later edition Bekker makes this portion of the text into a separate chapter, which seems a better arrangement. We have now a winding up of the previous discussions. Continence is not only the contrary of incontinence, but is also a sort of mean. It bears an analogy to temperance, but must not be identified with it. Neither must incontinence and intemperance be confounded (see above, ch. i. § 6). Nor must it be thought possible that the 'thoughtful' man can be incontinent, though the clever man may (see ch. i. § 7). Incontinence is like sleep or drunkenness, not a state of wakeful knowledge (see ch. iii. §§ 6-8). Its acts are voluntary, but yet it is not absolutely wicked, since it implies no deliberate purpose, The incontinent man is like a state which has good laws, but does not act upon them. The bad man like a state with a bad code, which she carries out. Both the terms incontinence and continence are used comparatively, as implying more firmness than is common, or less. Of the two kinds of incontinence, that which is caused by passion is more curable than that caused by weakness; that which proceeds from habit is more curable than that which is natural.

5 καὶ οὐδὰ δι' ἔτερον μεταβάλλει] This is an Atticism for καὶ δι' οὐδάτερον. The attempt to make continence into 'a mean' can hardly be called successful. It can only be done by assuming the same ἐλλειψις for this quality as for temperance. You will have one set of terms, ἀκολασία, αφοροσύνη, ἀναισθησία, and another set ἀκρασία, ἐγκράτεια is not a mean, in the sense of being a balance or harmony of the mind. It is only imperfect temperance; it is temperance in the act of forming.

6 ἡ ἐγκράτεια ἡ τοῦ σώφρονοι καθ' ὁμούτητα ἡκολούθηκεν] 'The "continence" of the temperate man has come to be called so derivatively (ἡκολούθηκεν) and by analogy.' τοῦ σώφρονος καθ' ὁμοιότητα ἦκολούθηκεν ὅ τε γὰρ ἐγκρατὴς οἶος μηδὲν παρὰ τὸν λόγον διὰ τὰς σωματικὰς ἦδονὰς ποιεῖν καὶ ὁ σώφρων, ἀλλ' ὁ μὲν ἔχων ὁ δ' οὖκ ἔχων φαύλας ἐπιθυμίας, καὶ ὁ μὲν τοιοῦτος οἶος μὴ ἤδεσθαι παρὰ τὸν λόγον, ὁ δ' οἶος ἤδεσθαι ἀλλὰ μὴ ἄγεσθαι. 7 ὅμοιοι δὲ καὶ ὁ ἀκρατὴς καὶ ὁ ἀκόλαστος, ἔτεροι μὲν ὅντες, ἀμφότεροι δὲ τὰ σωματικὰ ἡδέα διώκουσιν, ἀλλ' ὁ μὲν καὶ οἰόμενος δεῖν, ὁ δ' οὐκ οἰόμενος.

2 τὸν εἰρημένον τρόπον ἐν τοῖς πρώτος λόγοις] Cf. Eth. vi. xii. 8-9. The phrase ἐν τοῖς πρώτος is used by Aristotle, Eth. iv. i, 4, in reference to the Second Book of Ethics. It must mean something more than πρότερον, one would think. It seems to point to a sort of interval between the later passage and that referred to. Cf. ch. i. § I: ἄλλην ποιησαμένους ἀρχήν.

3 και ἐκὼν μὲν] Cf. Eth. v. ix. 4-6, where the question is discussed, Does the incontinent man voluntarily do wrong and injury to himself as well as harm?

ή γάρ προαίρεσις έπιεικής] Προαίρεσις here must mean the general state of the will. It is only one form of incontinence, which errs against a definitely formed purpose. Incontinence is always παρά την βούλησιν (cf. Eth. v. ix. 6): in passionate natures it is διεν προαιρέσεων. The Aristotelian psychology seems however to thave admitted the formation of προαιρέσεων which are not carried out into action, and the question thus arose, Are purposes or actions most decisive as constituting virtue? See Eth. III. ii. I, note, and Eth. x. viii. 5.

ἄσθ' ἡμιπόνηρος] 'So that he is only half depraved.' This epithet occurs in Ar. Pol. v. xi. 34: ἔτι δ' ἀντὸν (the monarch) διακεῖσθαι (ἀναγκαῖον) κατὰ τὸ ἣθος ἤτοι καλῶς πρὸς ἀρετὴν ἡ ἡμίχρηστον ὅντα, καὶ μὴ πονηρὸν ἀλλ'

XI. We now come to a treatise upon the nature of Pleasure. With regard to the authorship and character of this treatise see the remarks in Vol. I. Essay I. pp. 64-65, and Essay III. p. 250. A notable scholium, discovered by Professor Brandis in the Vatican, and quoted by Spengel and Fritzsche, attributes it to Eudemus, though in a merely conjectural way; see below, ch. xiii. § 2, note. In the outset of the Eudemian Ethics, a discussion on Pleasure is promised in terms which correspond both to the contents and the position of the present chapters ( th. Eud. I. v. II). τούτων δ' (i.e. with regard to the three kinds of life) ἡ μὲν περί τὰ σώματα και τὰς ἀπολαύσεις ἡδονή, και τίς και ποία τις γίνεται και διά τίνων, ούκ άδηλον, ώστ' οὐ τίνες είσι δεί ζητείν αὐτάς, άλλ' εί συντείνουσί τι πρός εὐδαιμονίαν ή μή, καὶ πῶς συντείνουσι, και πότερον εί δεί προσάπτειν τώ ζην καλάς ήδονάς τινας, ταύτας δεί προσάπτειν, ή τούτων μέν άλλον τινά τρόπον ἀνάγκη κοινωνείν, ἔτεραι δ' είσιν ήδοναί δι' ας εύλόγως οίονται τον εύδαίμονα ζην ήδέως και μη μόνον άλύπως. άλλά περί μέν τούτων δστερον έπισκεπτέον, περί δ' άρετης και φρονήσεως πρώτον θεωρήσωμεν. It is quite in agreement with the terms of this programme that the present treatise is prominently concerned with the discussion of bodily pleasure (ή περί τὰ σώματα και τὰς ἀπολαύσεις ἡδονή). At the close of the Eudemian Ethics there is also a reference backward to these chapters (Eth. Eud. VIII. iii. 11): Kal περί ήδονης δ' εξρηται ποίον τι και πώς άγαθόν, και ότι τά τε άπλως ήδέα και

'Pleasure and pain are subjects which come within the scope of him who makes politics a philosophy, for he has to frame the idea of that supreme end, in reference to which we call things absolutely good and bad. Also these are quite necessary for us to consider, since we have laid down the principle that moral virtue and vice are concerned with pains and pleasures, and since people in general hold that pleasure is involved in happiness, whence they have given the happy man his name (μαχάριος from γαίρειν).'

There are three reasons given here for discussing pleasure: (1) Because it has claims to be 'the end.' (Cf. Eth. Eud. II. i. I, where as a reason for discussing psychology it is said, φρόνησες γάρ και άρετη και ήδονη έν ψιχῆ, ἄν ένια ἡ πάντα τέλος είναι δοκεῖ πᾶσιν.) (2) From the connection before shown to exist between pleasure and morality; et. Eth. Eud. II. iv. 2-4. (3) Because the idea of pleasure is involved in the common idea of happiness, as shown by the etymology (a false one) of μακάρος.

άρχιτέκτων τοῦ τέλουσ] i.e. to conceive in a grand and liberal way, independently of details, that supreme human good at which a state should aim. Cf. Eth. I. xiii. I-3, and I. i. 4, note.

ἀπλῶς λέγομεν] There is some conαὐτῶν τήν τε γὰρ ἀρετήν καὶ την κακίαν την ηθικήν περί λύπας και ήδονας έθεμεν, και την ευδαιμονίαν οι πλείστοι μεθ' ήδονης είναι φασιν, διο και τον μακάριον ωνομάκασιν άπὸ τοῦ χαίρειν. τοῖς μέν οὖν δοκεῖ οὐδεμία ήδονή εἶναι 3 άγαθόν, ούτε καθ' αυτό ούτε κατά συμβεβηκός ου γάρ είναι ταὐτὸν ἀγαθὸν καὶ ἡδονήν· τοῖς δ' ἔνιαι μὲν είναι αί δέ πολλαί φαύλαι. έτι δέ τούτων τρίτον, εί και πάσαι αγαθόν, όμως μη ενδέχεσθαι είναι το άριστον ήδονήν. όλως μεν ούκ αγαθόν, ότι πάσα ήδονή γένεσις έστιν είς 4 Φύσιν αἰσθητή, οὐδεμία δὲ γένεσις συγγενής τοῖς τέλεσιν, οίον ούδεμία οικοδόμησις οικία. έτι ο σώφρων φεύγει τας ήδονας. έτι ο φρόνιμος το άλυπον διώκει, ου το ήδύ. έτι έμπόδιον τω Φρονείν αι ήδοναί, και όσω μαλλον χαίρει, μάλλον, οίον την των άφροδισίων οὐδένα γάρ αν δύνασθαι νοησαί τι έν αυτή. έτι τέχνη ουδεμία ήδονης καίτοι παν άγαθον τέχνης έργον. έτι παιδία καὶ θηρία διώκει τὰς ήδονάς, του δε μη πάσας σπουδαίας, ότι είσι καί 5 fusion in this expression, for though things are called good in reference to the supreme end, yet they are not called so absolutely. All such goods are merely means, and therefore goods relatively. What is here meant is more definitely expressed in Eth. Eud. 1. viii. 18. ότι δ' αίτιον τὸ τέλος των ύφ' αὐτό, δηλοί ή διδασκαλία. όρισάμενοι γάρ το τέλος τάλλα δεικνύουσιν, ότι ξκαστον αὐτῶν ἀγαθόν · αίτιον γὰρ τὸ οὐ ἔνεκα. On ἀπλῶς ἀγαθὰ as a Eudemian formula, see Vol. I. Essay I. p. 63.

μεθ' ήδονης The first sentence of the Eudemian Ethics asserts that happiness is not only most good and beautiful, but also most pleasurable; this is taken, of course, from Eth. Nic. I. viii. 4.

3-5 The writer now mentions three existing opinions with regard to pleasure, and the arguments by which they are supported.

VOL. II.

- I That pleasure is in no sense a good.
  - (a) because it is a state of becoming (yéveous):
  - (β) because the temperate man avoids pleasures;
  - (γ) because the thoughtful man aims not at pleasure, but at a painless condition ;
  - (8) because pleasure hinders thought;
  - (e) because there is no art of pleasure;
  - (5) because children and brutes follow pleasure.
- 2 That some pleasures may be good, but that most are bad; supported by instances of morbid and hurtful pleasures.
- 3 That pleasure is at all events not the chief good; because it is not an end-in-itself, but a state of becoming.

τοις μέν οθν δοκεί] The opinions stated here are negative. The writer GG

αἰσχραὶ καὶ ὀνειδιζόμεναι, καὶ ἔτι βλαβεραί· νοσώδη γὰρ ἔνια τῶν ἡδέων. ὅτι δ' οὐκ ἄριστον ἡ ἡδονή, ὅτι οὐ τέλος ἀλλὰ γένεσις. τὰ μὲν οὖν λεγόμενα σχεδὸν ταῦτ' ἐστίν.

12 "Ότι δ' οὐ συμβαίνει διὰ ταῦτα μη εἶναι ἀγαθὸν μηδὲ τὸ ἄριστον, ἐκ τῶνδε δῆλον. πρῶτον μέν, ἐπεὶ τὸ ἀγαθὸν in all probability had before him Aristotle's treatise on Pleasure (Eth. x. i.-v.) He deviates from it slightly, and exhibits that kind of differences which might be expected under the circumstances. He does not, like Aristotle, state the positive view (held by Eudoxus) that pleasure is the chief good, but commences with the opinions of the objectors to this view (i.e. Speusippus and the Platonists of his school). The principal argument which he attributes to them (that pleasure is a yéveous) is given, though not in such a definite form, Eth. x. iii. 4. Argument (5) appears to be implied in the objection against Eudoxus which is mentioned Eth. x. ii. 4. Argument (ε) may be the same perhaps as that given Eth. x. iii. 2 (that pleasure is άδριστον). The other arguments are not taken from Aristotle; they may perhaps have been derived from the books of Speusippus on this subject (περὶ ἡδονῆς ά, 'Aρίστιππος d. See Vol. I, Essay III. p. 218).

The second view belongs probably to a more moderate section of the Older Academy. It still, however, requires qualification, and to this effect the writer argues below, in ch. xii.

The third view,—that pleasure, however good, cannot be the chief good,—was held by both Plato and Aristotle (though the argument by which it is supported, δτι οὐ τέλος ἀλλά γένεσις, was Plato's alone; cf. Philebus, p. 53 c, 54 a, &c. £th. x. ii. 3, x. iii. 8-13. Eudemus, identifying pleasure with happiness, denies this, ch. xii. § 1, ch. xiii. § 2.

XII. The arguments used in this chapter are as follows: (1) Before deciding on the goodness or badness of pleasure, a distinction has to be made between absolute and relative goodness or badness, and then various degrees have to be admitted among the relative kinds of goodness, § 1. (2) We must allow that real pleasure consists in life itself (ἐνέργεια), not what merely produces life (γένεσις). Hence all the arguments founded on defining pleasure to be a yéreous fall to the ground. Those processes which restore nature are only pleasures in a subsidiary and accidental way. And even in them what is pleasant is the life (ἐνέργεια) which accompanies them, §§ 2-3. (3) Some pleasures may be morbid or they may hinder thought; but this only proves that from one point of view they are not good; but again the pleasures of thought are an assistance to thought, §§ 4-5. (4) There is no art of pleasure, because art is of conditions, not of functions, not of life itself, § 6. (5) The arguments about the thoughtful man, the temperate man, and the child (ch. xi. § 4), all apply merely to the inferior and subsidiary, that is, the bodily, pleasures, § 7.

The course of procedure here is like that in Eth. x. ii.—iii, where the objections of the school of Speusippus are answered before Aristotle gives his own theory of the nature of pleasure. The arguments above are rather confused in statement. Those in § I are apparently meant to answer the assertion that no pleasure is good, οδτε κατὰ συμβεβηκόs. The writer wishes first to urge that pleasure may be relatively good, if not absolutely so; he afterwards goes on to maintain that it is absolutely good.

διχῶς (τὸ μὲν γὰρ ἀπλῶς τὸ δὲ τινί), καὶ αἰ φύσεις καὶ αἰ εξεις ἀκολουθήσουσιν, ὥστε καὶ αἰ κινήσεις καὶ αἰ γενέσεις, καὶ αἰ φαῦλαι δοκοῦσαι εἶναι αἰ μὲν ἀπλῶς φαῦλαι τινὶ δ' οῦ ἀλλ' αἰρεταὶ τῷδε, ἔνιαι δ' οὐδὲ τῷδε ἀλλὰ ποτὲ καὶ ὀλίγον χρόνον, αἰρεταὶ δ' οῦ αὶ δ' οὐδὶ ήδοναί, ἀλλὰ φαίνονται, ὅσαι μετὰ λύπης καὶ ἰατρείας ενεκεν, οἶον αὶ τῶν καμνόντων. ἔτι ἐπεὶ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ τὸ 2

Other passages of Eudemus bear a similarity to this; cf. Eth. Eud. III. 17. άλλ' Ισων τό φοβερδν λέγεται, ὥσπερ καὶ τὸ ἡδύ καὶ τάγαθν, διχῶν. τὰ μὲν γὰρ ἀπλῶν, τὰ δὲ τυνὶ μὲν καὶ ἡδέα καὶ ἀγαθὰ ἐστυν, ἀπλῶν δ' οῦ, ἀλλὰ τοὐναντίον φαῦλα καὶ οὐχ ἡδέα, ὅσα τοῖν πονηροῖν ὡφέλιμα, καὶ ὅσα ἡδέα τοῦν πουθροῖν ὡφέλιμα, καὶ ὅσα ἡδέα τοῦν παιδίοιν ή παιδία. VII. ii. 4-7, &c.

Ι ότι δ' οὐ συμβαίνει - καμνόντων] 'But that it does not follow from these arguments that (pleasure) is not a good, nor even that it is not the chief good, will be seen from the following considerations. First, the term "good" has a double import; it means either the absolute or the relative good : in accordance with this distinction, different constitutions and states will be either absolutely or relatively good, and so too the processes of change and transition (which produce them). Thus some of these processes which appear bad may be so in the abstract (άπλῶs), while they are not so relatively (revl), but are desirable for the particular individual. Others again cannot be called desirable even for the particular individual, except on occasion and for a short time; others are not pleasures at all, but only seem so, being accompanied by pain and being (merely) for the sake of relief; as, for instance, the pleasures of the sick.'

2 ἔτι ἐπεί-ἀπὸ τούτων] 'Secondly, "good" may be either the state or the operation of a state, and so the processes which restore any one to his normal state (φυσικήν έξιν) are pleasurable (not in themselves, but) accidentally (and by association). fact, there is an operation or vital action in desire, namely, that of the powers in us which remain unimpaired (τής υπολοίπου έξεως και φύσεως). (And it may be proved that pleasure depends not on want and desire, but on vital action) because there are pleasures which do not imply want and desire, as, for instance, the pleasures of thought, which take place when the nature is in no respect deficient. A proof (that the processes before-mentioned are only accidentally pleasurable) is to be found in the fact that men do not find delight in the same pleasure while their nature is being recruited (ἀναπληρουμένης) and when it is in a settled condition, but when it is settled they delight in things which are absolutely pleasant, and during the other process in things that are even quite the reverse; as in sharp and bitter things, which are not naturally nor abstractedly pleasant. Nor is the enjoyment of them natural, for as pleasant things, regarded objectively (τὰ ἡδέα), are to one another, so are the subjective feelings which these excite (hôorai).'

μὲν ἐνέργεια τὸ δ' ἔξις, κατὰ συμβεβηκὸς αἱ καθιστάσαι εἰς τὴν ψυσικὴν ἔξιν ἡδεῖαἱ εἰσιν. ἔστι δ' ἡ ἐνέργεια ἐν ταῖς ἐπιθυμίαις τῆς ὑπολοίπου ἔξεως καὶ φύσεως, ἐπεὶ καὶ ἄνευ λύπης καὶ ἐπιθυμίας εἰσὶν ἡδοναἰ, οἶον αἱ τοῦ θεωρεῖν ἐνέργειαι, τῆς φύσεως οὐκ ἐνδεοῦς οὔσης. σημεῖον δ' ὅτι οὐ τῷ αὐτῷ χαίρουσιν ἡδεῖ ἀναπληρουμένης τε τῆς φύσεως καὶ καθεστηκνίας, ἀλλὰ καθεστηκνίας μὲν τοῖς ἀπλῶς ἡδέσιν, ἀναπληρουμένης δὲ καὶ τοῖς ἐναντίοις καὶ γὰρ ὀξέσι καὶ πικροῖς χαίρουσιν, ὧν οὐδὲν οὔτε φύσει ἡδὺ οὔθ' ἀπλῶς ἡδύ. ὤστ' οὐδ' ἡδοναὶ ὡς γὰρ τὰ ἡδέα πρὸς ἄλληλα συνέστηκεν, οὕτω καὶ αἱ ἡδοναὶ αἱ ἀπὸ τούτων. 3 ἔτι οὐκ ἀνάγκη ἔτερόν τι εἶναι βέλτιον τῆς ἡδονῆς, ὤσπερ

This passage is expressed so elliptically as to require several links of thought to be supplied. In the above translation this has been attempted. A bare rendering of the sentences into English would leave them utterly unintelligible.

al καθιστάσαι] i.e. al κινήσεις καl al γενέσεις, carried on from the previous section. The argument is that it is only life and the vital action (φυτική εξες καl ταύτης ἐνέργεια) which is good and pleasant; the restorative processes are only secondarily, non-essentially, and by a sort of inference, pleasant. The words καθιστάσαι and καθεστηκιίας correspond with the term κατάστασις, which is used of pleasure in Ar. Rhetoric, I. xi. I: κατάστασις άθρθα καl αλσθτή εἰς τὴν ὑπάρχουσαν ψόσεν.

τῆς ὑπολοίπου ἔξεως] The argument goes on to add that even in these restorative processes there is vital action (ἐνέργεια), namely, of those organs that remain unimpaired. The Paraphrast and others understand ὑπολοίπου to mean 'deficient,' and as being equivalent to ἐνδεοῦς in the next line. But the above translation is not only more suitable to the doctrine of the Peripatetics (see Vol. I. Essay IV.

pp. 247-250), but it is borne out by c. xiv. § 7 : Λέγω δὲ κατὰ συμβεβηκὸς ἡδέα τὰ Ιατρεύοντα· ὅτι γὰρ συμβείμει ἱατρεύεσθαι τοῦ ὑπομένοντος ὑγιοῦς πράττοντός τι, διὰ τοῦτο ἡδύ δοκεί εἶναι. Cf. Εth. x. iii. 6.

δξέσι και πικροῖς] Mentioned as an instance of things only pleasant during a morbid condition of the body. Cf. Eth. x. iii. 8.

3 έτι ούκ ἀνάγκη-έστι δ' έτερον] 'Moreover it does not follow that there must be something better than pleasure, as some argue, in the same way that the end is better than the process which leads to it. For all pleasures are not transition-states nor the accompaniments of such, but they are rather life itself and the end itself. They do not result from our coming to our powers (γινομένων), but from our using those powers (χρωμένων); and it is not true that all pleasures have an end separate from them; this is only true of such as are felt by persons in the process of being restored to their normal condition. Hence it is not right to define pleasure as a "sensible transition," but rather we should call it "a vital action of one's natural state," and τινές φασι τὸ τέλος τῆς γενέσεως οὐ γὰρ γενέσεις εἰσὶν οὐδὲ μετὰ γενέσεως πάσαι, ἀλλ' ἐνέργειαι καὶ τέλος οὐδὲ γινομένων συμβαίνουσιν, ἀλλὰ χρωμένων καὶ τέλος οὐ πασῶν ἔτερόν τι, ἀλλὰ τῶν εἰς τὴν τελέωσιν ὰγομένων τῆς φύσεως. διὸ καὶ οὐ καλῶς ἔχει τὸ αἰσθητὴν γένεσιν φάναι εἶναι τὴν ἡδοιγήν, ἀλλὰ μᾶλλον λεκτέον ἐνέργειαν τῆς κατὰ φύσιν ἔξεως, ἀντὶ δὲ τοῦ αἰσθητὴν ἀνεμπόδιστον. δοκεῖ δὲ γένεσίς τις εἶναι, ὅτι κυρίως ἀγαθόν τὴν instead of "sensible," "unimpeded."

Now pleasure appears to people to be a transition-process from its being good in the full sense of the term, for people confound the ideas of process and action, whereas they are distinct.'

ὥσπερ τινές φασι] In all probability the school, and perhaps the actual writings of Speusippus, are here alluded to. Nowhere in Plato do the exact words of this definition of pleasure occur (γένεσις είς φύσιν αίσθητή), but they represent his views, though perhaps carried rather farther. The present section places in opposition to . each other the theories of the Platonic and the Aristotelian school, of whom the one considered pleasure to be a relief from pain, a return from depression, an addition to the vital powers; the other considered it to be the play of life itself, the flow of life outward rather than anything received. On these two divergent theories see Vol. I. Essay IV. pp. 247-250. The same subject may be found worked out at greater length, and with interesting notices of the opinions held by later philosophers, in Sir W. Hamilton's Lectures on Metaphysics, vol. IL lect. xliii. pp. 444-475.

αλλά μαλλον λεκτέον ἐνέργειαν] Aristotle when writing accurately distinguishes pleasure from the moments of life and consciousness (ἐνέργειαι), from which it is inseparable. Cf. Eth.

x. v. 6: αί δὲ (ἡδοναί) σύνεγγυς ταίς ένεργείαις, και άδιδριστοι ούτως ώστε έχειν αμφισβήτησιν εί ταὐτόν έστιν ή ένέργεια τη ήδονη. οὐ μὴν ξοικέ γε ή ήδονη διάνοια είναι οὐδ' αἴσθησις ' ἄτοπον γάρ άλλα δια τό τη χωρίζεσθαι φαίνεταί τισι ταὐτόν. He however does not more specifically define it than as έπιγιγνόμενον τι τέλος (τη ένεργεία), Eth. x. iv. 8, &c. Eudemus does not preserve the distinction, but simply says that pleasure should be defined as 'the unimpeded play of life.' Aristotle himself occasionally writes in this way; cf. Metaphys. XI. vii. 7: &mel και ή ήδονη ένέργεια τούτου.

άνεμπόδιστον] This word is borrowed from Aristotle's Politics, IV. xi. 3. See Vol. I. Essay I. pp. 55–56.

δοκεί δὲ γένεσις τις είναι, ὅτι κυρίως aγaθόν] At first sight there appears to be a contradiction in saying that pleasure is thought not to be a good, because it is a yéreous (ch. xi. § 4); and that it is thought to be a yéveous because it is a good. The explanation is that the latter clause refers not to the Platonists, but to the Cyrenaics. The Cyrenaics, who considered pleasure the chief good, defined it as an equable process in the soul. accepted this definition, and turned it against them, arguing that by the very terms used the Cyrenaics had proved pleasure not to be the chief good. The Platonists then were originally γὰρ ἐνέργειαν γένεσιν οἴονται εἶναι, ἔστι δ' ἔτερον. τὸ δ' εἶναι φαύλας ὅτι νοσώδη ἔνια ἡδέα, τὸ αὐτὸ καὶ ὅτι ὑγιεινὰ ἔνια φαῦλα πρὸς χρηματισμόν. ταὐτη οὖν φαῦλα ἄμφω, ἀλλ' οὐ φαῦλα κατά γε τοῦτο, ἐπεὶ καὶ τὸ θεωρεῖν 5 ποτὲ βλάπτει πρὸς ὑγίειαν, ἐμποδίζει δὲ οὕτε φρονήσει οὖθ' ἔξει οὐδεμιᾳ ἡ ἀφ' ἐκάστης ἡδονή, ἀλλ' αὶ ἀλλότριαι, ἐπεὶ αἱ ἀπὸ τοῦ θεωρεῖν καὶ μανθάνειν μαλλον πουήσουσι 6 θεωρεῖν καὶ μανθάνειν. τὸ δὲ τέχνης μὴ εἶναι ἔργον ἡδονὴν μηδεμίαν εὐλόγως συμβέβηκεν οὐδὲ γὰρ ἄλλης ἐνεργείας οὐδεμιᾶς τέχνη ἐστίν, ἀλλὰ τῆς δυνάμεως καίτοι καὶ ἡ μυρεψικὴ τέχνη καὶ ἡ ὀψοποιητικὴ δοκεῖ ἡδονῆς εἶναι. τὸ δὲ τὸν σώφρονα φεύγειν καὶ τὸν φρόνιμον διώκειν τὸν ἄλυπον βίον, καὶ τὸ τὰ παιδία καὶ τὰ indebted for their definition of pleasure  $(\alpha l \sigma \theta \eta \tau \dot{\eta} \gamma \ell \nu \epsilon \sigma \iota s)$  to the Cyrenaics, See Vol. I. Essay II. pp. 176–177.

4-5 τὸ δ' είναι φαύλας-μανθάνειν] 'To say that pleasures are bad because some pleasant things are unhealthy is like saying (health is bad) because some healthy things are bad for money-making. From that point of view it is true they are both bad, but they are not on account of this incidental badness bad simpliciter, since even thinking is sometimes injurious to health; but neither thought nor any other state of mind is impeded by its own pleasure, but only by foreign pleasures; for the pleasures of thinking and learning will make one think and learn more.' The argument here is that a thing good in itself may be relatively bad, e.g. health, and thought itself. One good may clash with another, and be from that point of view (ταύτη) bad. The writing is elliptical; we might have expected άπλῶς to be added to φαῦλα. The last clause in section 5, which asserts that a mental function is rather assisted than impaired by its own proper pleasure, is taken from Ar.

Eth. x. v. 2-3. Nοσώδη seems to mean 'producing disease;' cf. ch. xi. § 5: as νοσματώδης before (ch. v. § 3, &c.) means 'produced by disease.' Φρονήσει is evidently used above as the verbal noun of φρονεῦν, in the general sense of 'thought,' and not in the restricted sense which is given to it in Book vi. Cf. Eth. i. vi. 11; Eth. Eud. II. i. I (quoted above).

6 τὸ δὲ τέχνης κ.τ.λ.] Cf. ch. xi. § 6. An answer is now given to an argument probably occurring in the works of Speusippus. This argument, if fairly represented here, must have had a false major premiss, namely, 'All that is good is the subject of art.' The answer consists of two different pleas: (1) pleasure, like life, is above art, which can only deal with the conditions tending to those things. (2) In another sense there are arts of pleasure, e.g. the cook's or the perfumer's art.

7 Most of the arguments against pleasure ignore the distinction between different kinds of pleasures, the one kind being of the nature of life, and the end, and therefore good in themselves (§ 3); the other kind being θηρία διώκειν, τῷ αὐτῷ λύεται πάντα. ἐπεὶ γὰρ εἴρηται πῶς ἀγαθαὶ ἀπλῶς καὶ πῶς οὐκ ἀγαθαὶ πῶσαι αἱ ἡδοναί, τὰς τοιαύτας τὰ θηρία καὶ τὰ παιδία διώκει, καὶ τὴν τούτων ἀλυπίαν ὁ φρόνιμος, τὰς μετ' ἐπιθυμίας καὶ λύπης καὶ τὰς σωματικάς (τοιαῦται γὰρ αὖται) καὶ τὰς τούτων ὑπερβολάς, καθ' ὡς ὁ ἀκόλαστος ἀκόλαστος. διὸ ὁ σώφρων φεύγει ταύτας, ἐπεὶ εἰσὶν ἡδοναὶ καὶ σωφρονος.

'Δλλὰ μὴν ὅτι καὶ ἡ λύπη κακὸν ὁμολογεῖται, καὶ 13 Φευκτόν ἡ μὲν γὰρ ἀπλῶς κακόν, ἡ δὲ τῷ πῆ ἐμποδιconnected with inferior conditions of our nature, with pain, want, &c., and being therefore only secondarily and accidentally good (§ 2). This latter kind of pleasures, and excess in them, are made the ground of reproaches against pleasure in general.

XIII. In this chapter, after refuting (§ 1) the objection of Speusippus (that pleasure may be the opposite of pain without being a good), Eudemus urges the claims of pleasure, of the highest kind, to be considered the chief good, because from the terms of its definition it is inseparable from, and indeed identical with, happiness (§ 2). It is a mere paradox to talk of a man being happy in torture, &c. Happiness requires prosperity, that an 'unimpeded function' may be obtained, i.e. pleasure, though there must not be too much prosperity, else happiness is 'impeded' in another way (§§ 3-4). The instinct of all creatures testifies to pleasure being the chief good (§ 5); and it is a mistake to think that bodily pleasure is the only kind that exists (§ 6). In short, that pleasure is necessary for happiness proves that it is a good (§ 7).

I ἀλλὰ μὴν—ἡδονήν] 'But we may go further—it is universally agreed that pain is an evil, and detestable for it is either absolutely an evil, or is so relatively as impeding the individual in some way or other. But that which is contrary to the detestable in that very point which makes it detestable and evil is good. Therefore it follows that pleasure must be a good. For the answer of Speusippus to this argument does not hold, that "(pleasure is contrary to pain and to the absence of pain) in the same way that the greater is contrary to the less, and also to the equal." For no one could ever say that pleasure is identical with any form of evil.' That pleasure is a good because it is the contrary of pain, is an argument attributed to Eudoxus, Eth. x. ii. 2. Aristotle there (ib. § 5) mentions the answer to it, and refutes that answer as above. Eudemus, in accordance with his usual style, adds the name of Speusippus. Aulus Gellius, IX. 5, mentions this doctrine: 'Speusippus vetusque omnis Academia voluptatem et dolorem duo mala esse dicunt opposita inter sese : bonum autem esse quod utriusque medium foret.' Accordingly, the neutral state between pain and pleasure would have to be regarded as good. Aristotle and Eudemus reply that the point of contrariety between pain and pleasure is that the one is φευκτόν and the other alρετόν, therefore the one must be considered an evil, the other a good, στική. τῷ δὲ φευκτῷ τὸ ἐναντίον ἢ φευκτόν τε καὶ κακόν, ἀγαθόν. ἀνάγκη οὖν τὴν ἡδονὴν ἀγαθόν τι εἶναι. ὡς γὰρ Σπεύσιππος ἔλυεν, οὐ συμβαίνει ἡ λύσις, ὥσπερ τὸ μεῖζον τῷ ἐλάττονι καὶ τῷ ἴσφ ἐναντίον οὐ γὰρ ἄν φαίη 2 ὅπερ κακόν τι εἶναι τὴν ἡδονήν. ἄριστόν τ' οὐδὲν κωλύει ἡδονήν τινα εἶναι, εἰ ἔνιαι φαῦλαι ἡδοναί, ὥσπερ καὶ ἐπιστήμην τινὰ ἐνίων φαύλων οὐσῶν. ἴσως δὲ καὶ ἀναγκαῖον, εἴπερ ἑκάστης ἕξεώς εἰσιν ἐνέργειαι ἀνεμπόδιστοι, εἴθ' ἡ πασῶν ἐνέργειά ἐστιν εὐδαιμονία εἴτε ἡ τινὸς αὐτῶν, δπερ κακόν τε] Cf. Eth. vi. iv. 3, note. We are probably to understand τε, with the Paraphrast and Scholiast. Speusippus would have said that pleasure is an evil. Cf. Eth. x. ii. 5.

2 ἄριστον τ' οὐδέν κωλύει] This admission is directly contrary to the conclusions of Aristotle (cf. Eth. x. iii. 13). It is to be explained as an after development of the system of Aristotle, and an attempt to bring different parts of that system into harmony with each other. Aristotle having used the same formula (èvépyea) to express both pleasure and happiness, Eudemus from the force of the terms identifies them. In this he is quite justified, for it is impossible to distinguish the highest kind of pleasure or joy from happiness, especially if we consider peace (ἐνέργεια τῆς axivnglas) to be a mode of joy. It is in accordance with the rest of the Eudemian Ethics to speak in this way of pleasure as being an essential element in, and as inseparable from, happiness. Cf. Eth. Eud. 1. i. 6-7, 1 v. 11-12 (quoted above), VIII. iii. 11, &c.

The Vatican Scholium on this passage speaks of it as being merely dialectical (but this is from an unwillingness to recognise the discrepancy between Books vII. and x.) It proceeds to attribute the present treatise conjecturally to Eudemus. Aid μέν οθν τούτων δοκεί ταύτον αποφαίνεσθαι τάγαθὸν καὶ τὴν ἡδονήν οὐ μὴν ούτως έχει, άλλά πρός τούς λέγοντας γένεσιν είναι ή φαύλας τινάς των ήδονων. άς και δι' αύτο το μη είναι αύτην το άναθον επιγίγνεται και επιχειρεί ενδόξως ώς ένον αύτην το άριστον λέγειν, έπει έν γε τοις Νικομαχείοις ένθεν διείλεκται καί περί ήδονης 'Αριστοτέλης σαφώς είρηκεν αύτην μη ταύτον είναι τη εύδαιμονία, άλλά παρακολουθείν ώσπερ τοίς άκμαίοις την ώραν. σημείον δέ τοῦ μη είναι τοῦτ' 'Αριστοτέλους άλλ' Εὐδήμου τὸ ἐν τώ κ' (Book X.) λέγειν περί ήδονης ώς οὐδέπω περί αὐτῆς διειλεγμένου. πλην είτε Εὐδήμου ταῦτά ἐστιν εἴτ' 'Αριστοτέλους, ενδόξως εξρηται. διά τοῦτο λέγεται τὸ άριστον ἡδονὴ ὅτι σὸν τῶ ἀρίστω καὶ άχωριστον αὐτοῦ. τούτω δ' ὁμολογεῖ καῖ τὰ ἐξῆς. This, which is a remarkably favourable specimen of the Scholia, may serve to show the wavering and unprofitable character of the commentaries.

ώσπερ και ἐπιστήμην] This must not be taken very strictly, since pleasure and knowledge cannot both be the chief good. Both, however, may be considered as forms of the absolute good. Cf. Eth. 1. vii. 5. The article is omitted at first with ἀριστον, but is added below. Knowledge is good, though some things it is better not to know.

ἄν ἢ άνεμπόδιστος, αίρετωτάτην είναι τοῦτο δ' ἐστὶν ἡδονή. ὅστε εἴη ἄν τις ἡδονὴ τὸ ἄριστον, τῶν πολλῶν ἡδονῶν φαύλων οὐσῶν, εἰ ἔτυχεν, ἀπλῶς. καὶ διὰ τοῦτο πάντες τὸν εὐδαίμονα ἡδὺν οἴονται βίον εἶναι, καὶ ἐμπλέκουσι τὴν ἡδονὴν εἰς τὴν εὐδαιμονίαν, εὐλόγως οὐδεμία γὰρ ἐνέργεια τέλειος ἐμποδίζομένη, ἡ δ' εὐδαιμονία τῶν τελείων διὸ προσδεῖται ὁ εὐδαίμων τῶν ἐν σώματι ἀγαθῶν καὶ τῶν ἐκτὸς καὶ τῆς τύχης, ὅπως μὴ ἐμποδίζηται ταῦτα. οἱ δὲ τὸν τροχίζόμενον καὶ τὸν δυστυχίαις με-3 γάλαις περιπίπτοντα εὐδαίμονα φάσκοντες εἶναι, ἐὰν ἢ ἀγαθός, ἡ ἑκόντες ἡ ἄκοντες οὐδὲν λέγουσιν. διὰ δὲ τὸ 4 προσδεῖσθαι τῆς τύχης δοκεῖ τισί ταὐτὸν εἶναι ἡ εὐτυχία τῆ εὐδαιμονία, οὐκ οὖσα, ἐπεὶ καὶ αὐτὴ ὑπερβάλλουσα ἐμπόδιός ἐστιν, καὶ ἴσως οὐκέτι εὐτυχίαν καλεῖν δίκαιον τῶν ἐν σώματι ἀγαθῶν καὶ τῶν ἐκτὸς καὶ τῆς τόχης] This is the principle with regard to happiness which is laid down in Eth. Nie. I. viii. 15-17. It was afterwards considered characteristic of the Peripatetic School. Cf. Cicero, De Fin. II. vi. 19: 'Aristoteles virtutis usum oum vitse perfectse prosperitate conjunxit.'

Cf. Eth. Nic. L. v. 6. The words ἐκόντες οὐδὲν λέγουσω answer to el μὴ θέσω διαφυλάντων in that place. The paradox alluded to was maintained by the Cynics, and afterwards by the Stoics (who denied that pain was an evil). Cf. Cicero, Trusc. v. ix. 24: 'Theophrastus quum statuisset verbera, tormenta, vol. II.

Cf. also Cicero, Paradoza, ii.

Since however there is no one nature or state which is, or is thought to be, the best for all, so neither do they all pursue the same pleasure, but still they all pursue pleasure. Nay, perhaps unconsciously they are pursuing, not what they think, or would declare, but (in reality) the same; for all things have within them by nature a divine instinct.' This is said, Eth. x. ii, I, to have been the argument of Eudoxus: Εύδοξος μέν οθν την ήδονην τάγαθον ψετο είναι διά τὸ πάνθ' δραν εφιέμενα αὐτῆς καὶ Ελλογα καὶ ἄλογα. 16. § 4, Aristotle justifies the argument against objectors in much the same terms as those adopted in the text.

Cf. the dream-images in Goethe's Faust:

Aristotle, Eth. x. ii. 4 (which is the source of the above passage), does not go so far as to make all creatures aim at the same good, lows δὲ καὶ ἐν τοῖς φαιλοις ἐστὶ τι φυσικὸν ἀγαθὸν κρεῖττον ἢ καθ' αὐτά, δ ἐφίεται τοῦ οἰκείου ἀγαθοῦ.

7 φανερον δέ-αὐτοῦ] 'Finally, it is plain that unless pleasure and the action of life are a good, the happy man cannot live pleasurably. For why should he need pleasure if it be not a good, and if it be possible for him to live painfully? (and it will be possible), for pain will be neither evil nor good, unless pleasure is; so why should he avoid it? and hence it will follow that the life of the good man will not be more pleasurable than that of the bad man, if his moments of action are not more pleasurable.' This is a reductio ad absurdum of the position that pleasure is not a good. We shall be reduced to think: (1) that the happy man may live devoid of pleasure; for nothing that is not good can form part of happiness-or even he may live a life of pain, which is the contrary of pleasure; (2) that the good man will have no more pleasure than the bad man, unless pleasure attaches to good acts, in which case it will be part of the good.

XIV. Hitherto Eudemus has followed the lead of Aristotle, only in one respect making a slight development of his conclusions. He now discusses a subject untouched by Aristotle, but which he had proposed to himself in his first book; cf. Eth. Eud.

Ι. Υ. ΙΙ: πότερον, εί δεί προσάπτειν τώ ζην καλάς ήδονάς τινας, ταύτας (i.e. τάς σωματικάς) δεί προσάπτειν, ή τούτων μέν άλλον τινά τρόπον άνάγκη κοινωνείν —άλλὰ περὶ μέν τούτων ὅστερον ἐπισκεπτέου. Assuming that there are higher pleasures, and that pleasure in the highest form is identical with happiness and the chief good, what is to be said of bodily pleasure? is it an evil or a good? and why is it that men indulge in it so much? To this twofold problem the answers are, Bodily pleasure is in itself a good, as being the contrary of pain; but it is only good under certain limits, as it admits of excess, and the excess is bad (\$ 2). There are various reasons why bodily pleasure recommends itself to human nature. (1) It expels the sense of pain, and hence as an anodyne is universally desired from a physical law, for life is full of labour, and the ordinary functions of the senses are laborious acts, only mitigated by custom, §\$ 4, 5. (2) The period of youth especially craves after physical pleasure. (3) There are special cases where it is in a way necessary, namely, where peculiarities of temperament render men constitutionally depressed and in want of a sort of relief, \$8 4, 6, (4) From the mixture of the material with the spiritual in us, we are unable to continue perpetually delighting in one pure pleasure, that is, the pleasure of thought. God alone is capable of this; to us, through a fault in our nature  $(o\dot{\nu} \gamma \Delta \rho \ \dot{\sigma} \pi \lambda \dot{\gamma} \ o\dot{\sigma} \dot{\delta}^{\dagger} \ \dot{\epsilon} \pi \iota \iota \iota \iota \nu \dot{\gamma} s)$ , change appears sweet, because lower and contradictory elements in us require to be allowed their due action, §8.

'Butright bodily pleasures admit of excess, and the bad man (is bad) in that he seeks that excess, instead of seeking such pleasures as are necessary. All men find delight in meat, and wine, and love, though not all according to the proper law. And reversely all men avoid pain (ἐνωτίως δ' ἐπὶ τῆς λόπης). A man does not avoid the excess of pain, but pain in general. Pain is not contrary to the excess of pleasure, except to him who pursues

the excess of pleasure.' This argument goes to prove that bodily pleasure is in itself good; only when in excess is it evil. On the other hand all pain is evil. Pleasure and pain then are opposite terms, the one being good and the other evil. To make the doctrine of Speusippus (ch. xiii. 1) hold good, it would be necessary to make pain and the excess of pleasure opposite terms. But they are not so, except perhaps in the mind of the intemperate man, who thinks that the only alternative is between excessive pleasure and a painful sensation.

3 This section is not logically continuous with what immediately precedes. It no longer deals with the opinion of the Platonists that bodily pleasure is an evil, but takes up another question already partly anticipated, ch. xiii. § 6, namely, How is the vulgar error to be accounted for which gives so much prominence to physical pleasure in the scale of pleasures?

ἀληθές, πιστεύειν ποιεῖ τῷ ἀληθεῖ μᾶλλον ὅστε λεκτέον διὰ τί φαίνονται αἱ σωματικαὶ ἡδοναὶ αἰρετώτεραι. πρῶτον μὲν οὖν δὴ ὅτι ἐκκρούει τὴν λύπην καὶ διὰ τὰς 4 ὑπερβολὰς τῆς λύπης, ὡς οὕσης ἰατρείας, τὴν ἡδονὴν διώκουσι τὴν ὑπερβάλλουσαν καὶ ὅλως τὴν σωματικήν. σφοδραὶ δὲ γίνονται αὶ ἰατρεῖαι, διὸ καὶ διώκονται, διὰ τὸ παρὰ τὸ ἐναντίον φαίνεσθαι. καὶ οὐ σπουδαῖον δὴ δοκεῖ ἡ ἡδονὴ διά δύο ταῦτα, ὥσπερ εἴρηται, ὅτι αὶ μὲν φαύλης φύσεώς εἰσι πράξεις, ἡ ἐκ γενετῆς, ὥσπερ θηρίου, ἡ δὶ ἔθος, οἶον αὶ τῶν φαύλων ἀνθρώπων. αὶ δ᾽ ἰατρεῖαι, ὅτι ἐνδεοῦς, καὶ ἔχειν βέλτιον ἡ γίνεσθαι. αἱ δὲ συμβαίνουσι τελεουμένων κατὰ συμβεβηκὸς οὖν σπουδαῖαι. ἔτι διώ- 5 κονται διὰ τὸ σφοδραὶ εἶναι ὑπὸ τῶν ἄλλαις μὴ δυναμέ-

και ού σπουδαίον δή-σπουδαίαι] 'It is on account of these two causes, then, that pleasure is thought not to be a good; first, that some pleasures, as we have said before (ch. v. I.), are the actions of a depraved nature, whether congenital, like that of a beast, or acquired, like that of depraved men; secondly, that other pleasures are remedies, implying imperfection, since a normal condition (Exew) is better than the process of arriving at that condition, and some pleasures take place while we are arriving at a complete state of being, hence they are only inferentially and not directly (κατά συμβεβηκός) good.' This paragraph reverts parenthetically to the opinion of the Platonists.

5-6 έτι διώκονται - γίνονται] The argument is now resumed from the sentence ending φαίνεσθαι, 'Another reason why physical pleasure is sought is its comparatively coarse and violent character, which suits those who require strong excitement. And indeed such men even create in themselves certain artificial thirsts for pleasure. If this does not hurt their health, it is no harm. Such men are incapable of enjoving the purer and simpler pleasures, and a neutral state of the sensations is to many painful by a law of nature. For the living creature ever travails, as the physiological books testify, telling us that the acts of seeing and hearing are laborious, only that we are accustomed to them (so they say). So also the young, in the first place, owing to the principle of growth in them, are like those who are intoxicated, and youth is full of pleasure. And again those of bilious nature are ever in need of an anodyne. Their body is continually fretted by reason of their temperament, and they are ever in vehement desire. Now pleasure, be it the opposite of a given pain, or be it what it may, provided it be strong enough, drives out that pain. And hence persons of the bilious temperament become intemperate and vicious.' This passage gives two reasons to explain why a neutral state of the sensations is distasteful, first a general reason: that the laborious action of the human faculties calls for alleviation; second, a special reason: that certain periods of life and certain temperaments produce a craving after physical indulgence.

δίψας τινάς] Fritzsche, after the Scholiast, understands this literally, that some men make themselves thirsty to enjoy the pleasure of drinking. But the use of the plural seems to indicate that we should rather follow the Paraphrast and the majority of the commentators in understanding it generally of artificial desires for pleasure, ἐπισκευασταὶ ἐπιθυμίαι, as the Paraphrast calls them.

ὁμοίως δ' ἐν μὲν κ.τ.λ.] The best commentary on this passage will be found in Aristotle's Problems, bk. xxx. ch. i., where a frequent comparison is made between the effects of wine, youth, and the melancholy (or bilious) temperament, in producing desire. Cf. § 5 : ὁ γὰρ οίνος ὁ πολύς μάλιστα φαίνεται παρασκευάζειν τοιούτους οίους λέγομεν τούς μελαγχολικούς είναι, § 10: και ὁ οίνος δὲ πνευματώδης τὴν δύναμιν. διό δή έστι την φύσιν δμοια δ τε οίνος καὶ ἡ κρᾶσις, κ.τ.λ. Cf. Prob. IV. xxx.: διά τί άφροδισιαστικοί οἱ μελαγχολικοί; ή ότι πνευματώδεις, κ.τ.λ. The Scholiast gives a vapid explanation of the words ωσπερ οἱ οἰνωμ ένοι in the passage before us. Evidently, all that is meant is to compare the desires of youth with those of drunkenness and of the melancholy temperament. We may compare the lines of Goethe:

† Περί μεν οὖν εγκρατείας καὶ ἀκρασίας καὶ περί 9

By the accidental pleasures, I mean such as are of the nature of a remedy. Because, when it happens that we are relieved, owing to some operation of that part in us which continues sound, the result is a sensation of pleasure. By the natural pleasures, I mean those which produce the action of any given nature. The same thing is never continuously pleasant to us, because our nature is not simple, but there is in us a second element, by reason of which we are destructible. Thus, when the one element is in action, it thwarts the tendencies of the second element. And when the two elements are balanced, the result appears neither painful nor pleasant. If there is any being whose nature is simple, the same mode of action will be continuously and in the highest degree pleasurable to him. Hence God enjoys everlastingly one pure pleasure. For there is a function not only of motion, but of rest; and pleasure consists rather in tranquillity than in motion. "Change," as the poet says, "is the sweetest of all things," on account of a certain fault in our nature. The bad man is fond of change, and of the same character is the nature which requires change; it is not simple or good.' In the above passage we see a reproduction, and to some extent a carrying out, of Aristotle's doctrines in the tenth Book of the Ethics, cf. especially ch. iv. 9: Hûs obr obbels συνεχώς ήδεται; ή κάμνει; πάντα γάρ τα ανθρώπεια άδυνατεί συνεχώς ένεργείν. On the comparison between the compound nature of man and the purely divine nature of God, cf. ch. vii. 8: & δέ τοιούτος άν είη βίος κρείττων ή κατ' άνθρωπον οδ γάρ ή άνθρωπός έστιν οθτω βιώσεται, άλλ' ή θείδν τι έν αὐτώ ύπάργει ' όσω δέ διαφέρει τούτο τού συνθέτου, τοσούτω και ή ένέργεια της κατά την άλλην άρετην.

It is to be remarked that the present Book, which commences with a mention of  $\theta \epsilon la$   $d\rho \epsilon \tau \eta$ , or the operation of reason unalloyed by passion, ends with a mention of  $\theta \epsilon la$   $\eta \delta o \nu \eta$ , which is the consciousness of the same.

† λοιπόν — ἐροῦμεκ] These words, which have caused, by their occurrence here, an obvious literary confusion in the Nicomachean Ethics (see Vol. I. Essay I. p. 56), are not even suitable to the Eudemian treatise. The clause is evidently an attempt to sum up and give unity to the preceding book, but it can hardly have been written by the author of the book. To say είρηται τὶ ἔκαστον καὶ πῶς τὰ μὲν ἀγαθὰ αὐτῶν ἐστὶ τὰ δὲ κακά, is an inadequate and incorrect description of the discussions on Continence and Incontinence (cf. x. 5) and on Pleasure and Pain. With regard to the latter, it has been assumed (xiii, 1) that all Pain is an evil, and it has been argued (xiii, 2-7) that Pleasure, as being ένέργεια άνεμπόδιστος, is identical with the chief Good. We trace, then, the work of a somewhat shallow and hasty editor. In the last chapter of Eth. Eud. it is said kal περί ήδον ης δ' εξρηται ποϊόν τι και πώς άναθόν, και ότι τά τε άπλως ήδέα και καλά, και τὰ [τε] ἀπλώς ἀγαθὰ ήδέα, which seems to refer generally to chapters xii, and xiii, of this book. The editor may have had that passage before him.

PLAN OF BOOKS VIII.-IX.

A RISTOTLE'S treatise on Friendship, here contained, is quite continuous. The division of it into two books is merely artificial. There is really no break between the end of Book VIII. and the beginning of Book IX. The words περὶ μὰν οὖν τοὖτων ἐπὶ τοσοῦτον εἰζῆσθω (VIII. xiv. 4) have been introduced, whether by the Author's or by an Editor's hand, to create a division and to constitute two books conformable in length to the other books of the Ethics.

The use of the phrase is derai (VIII. ix. 1, VIII. xiii. 1, IX. iii. 1), in reference to the earlier chapters of Book VIII., has led some persons to suppose that this was originally an independent treatise. But nothing is more clear than that it was written to form a part of Aristotle work on Ethics. Besides general expressions of the author's purpose to confine himself to an ethical point of view (see VIII. i. 7, IX. ii. 2), we find direct quotations of, or references to, the first books of the Nicomachean Ethics. (Compare IX. ix. 5 with Eth. Nic. I. vii. 14; and I. viii. 13, and IX. iv. 2, with Eth. Nic. III. iv. 5.)

The present treatise has a close connection with the first three books of the Nicomachean Ethics. But it is remarkable that it has no connection with Books V. VI. VII. Friendship is here treated in relation to Happiness and in relation to Justice. What is said of Happiness forms the complement to Eth. Nic. Book I., but what is said of Justice has no reference to Eth. Nic. Book V.; rather it appears written tentatively, probably before the Politics of Aristotle, from which the theories of Eth. Nic. Book V. seem to have been derived. (See VIII. vi. 6, VIII. vii. 2-3, VIII. ix., x., IX. i. 1-2.)

Again, it is equally striking that there is no reference to Book
VII. in the parts of this treatise where the phenomena of vice are discussed (see IX. iv. 8-9, IX. viii. 6). Indeed the views taken here are inconsistent with those of Book VII., which contain a more rigid analysis. (Compare IX. iv. 8 with VII. viii. 1.)

The style of these two Books is certainly unlike that of Books V. VI. VII., while it bears a close similarity with that of Eth. Nic. I, and X. Not one of the 'Eudemian' forms of expression is to be found here.

The treatise on Friendship may be roughly divided into three parts:—

I. On the different kinds of Friendship, and on the nature of the highest and truest type. VIII. i.-viii.

II. On the connection of Friendship with Justice, (1) as arising (with certain exceptions, see c. xii.) out of political relationships, or coinciding with them; (2) as implying obligations to be repaid. VIII. ix.—IX. iii.

III. On other questions connected with the nature of Friendship, and especially on its relation to Happiness. IX. iv.-xii.

Though the treatise is continuous, yet it is easy to see that the writer's views became deeper and more definite as he advanced. (Thus compare IX. vi. with VIII. i. 4; IX. x. with VIII. i. 5; and VIII. vi. 2-3, VIII. viii. 7 with VIII. i. 6.)

At the same time we see what a powerful instrument was the Aristotelian analysis for producing clearness of view. By an analysis of the objects of liking (τὸ ψιλητόν, VIII. ii. 1), Aristotle clears away all the vagueness which the Lysis of Plato had left around the nature of Friendship. By an application of his own philosophical form ἐνέχγια (IX. vii. 4–6, IX. ix. 5–6, IX. xii. 1), he obtains a profound theory of the operation of the highest kind of Friendship in relation to human happiness.

In these Books there is no allusion to the sentimental relationship, in vogue among the Dorians from the earliest ages, between a warrior and his squire (the εἰστνήλης and ἀἰτης, or 'inbreather' and 'listener'). All here is broadly human. And yet the idea of 'Friendship' is purely Greek. The Romans imitated it. But in modern times it has been much superseded by the idea of sympathetic marriage. Christianity ignores Friendship; and theoretically it now exists only as a temporary advantage for the young.

ΗΘΙΚΩΝ ΝΙΚΟΜΑΧΕΙΩΝ VIII.

ΜΕΤΑ δὲ ταῦτα περὶ φιλίας ἔποιτ' ἄν διελθεῖν· ἔστι γὰρ ἀρετή τις ἡ μετ' ἀρετῆς, ἔτι δ' ἀναγκαιότατον εἰς τὸν βίον· ἄνευ γὰρ φίλων οὐδεὶς ἔλοιτ' ᾶν ζῆν, ἔχων τὰ λοιπὰ ἀγαθὰ πάντα· καὶ γὰρ πλουτοῦσι καὶ ἀρχὰς καὶ δυναστείας κεκτημένοις δοκεῖ φίλων μάλιστ' εἶναι χρεία· τὶ γὰρ ὅφελος τῆς τοιαύτης εὖετηρίας ἀφαιρεθείσης εὖεργεσίας, ἡ γίγνεται μάλιστα καὶ ἐπαινετωτάτη πρὸς φίλους; ἡ πῶς ᾶν τηρηθείη καὶ σώζοιτ' ἄνευ φίλων; ὅσω γὰρ πλείων, τοσούτω ἐπισφαλεστέρα. ἐν πενία τε 2 καὶ ταῖς λοιπαῖς δυστυχίαις μόνην οἴονται καταφυγὴν εἶναι τοὺς φίλους. καὶ νέοις δὲ πρὸς τὸ ἀναμάρτητον καὶ πρεσβυτέροις πρὸς θεραπείαν καὶ τὸ ἐλλεῖπον τῆς πράξεως δὶ ἀσθένειαν βοηθεῖ, τοῖς τ' ἐν ἀκμῆ πρὸς τὰς καλὰς πράξεις·

I. The discussion of Friendship is justified here (analogously to the way in which the discussion of the voluntary is justified, Eth. III. i. 1-2), first, on the ground of its connection with virtue, secondly, on the ground that it is a means to happiness (dναγκαιότα-TOP) in all conditions of life. As a commencement of the discussion, Aristotle mentions the difficulties raised on the subject in the Lysis of Plato: Does friendship depend on similarity or on contrast? Can bad men be friends to each other? and he adds another: Is there only one species of friendship, or are there more? Aristotle by his own analysis of the likeable (τὸ φιλητόν) immediately cuts straight through these difficulties.

I ἀρετή τις ἡ μετ' ἀρετῆς] We have here no reference to that harmonious manner in society, the mean between flattery and moroseness, which is included in the list of the virtues (Eth. II. vil. 13) under the name of φιλία, but is afterwards said to be nameless (Eth. IV. vi. 4) and to be devoid of the feeling of affection.

τί γὰρ δφελος—φίλους] 'For what is the use of that sort of abundance, if one is deprived of the power of doing good, which is exercised most especially, and in its most praise-worthy form, towards friends?'

The words here quoted had become proverbial. Cf. Plato, Alcib. II. 140 A; Protag. 348 c.

3 τοῖς ὀμοεθνέσι] This word is applied here to brutes as well as men. In the same sense ὀμογενέσιν is used, Eth. Eud. vII. v. 3, and συγγενῆ, Ar. Rhet. I. xi. 25.

tōoι δ' dr τις—φίλον] 'And in travelling too one may see how near and dear every man is to man,' i.e. one may see this both as a matter of general observation, and as oneself meeting with kindness and hospitality.

4 καὶ οἱ νομοθέται] Cf. the speech of Lysias in Plato s Phædrus.

και των δικαίων-δοκεί] 'And the height of justice appears to be of the nature of friendship.' Under the words τῶν δικαίων τὸ μάλιστα equity (τὸ ἐπιεικές) appears to be meant. Cf. Εth. v. x. 6-8.

5 ἀλλὰ καὶ καλόν] This is repeating in other words that friendship is ἀρετήτε. The distinction between ἀναγκαῖον από καλόν is common in Aristotle, and the one term suggests the other. Cf. Eth. IX. xi. I.

καl ξειοι—φίλου] 'And some think that the term "good friend" is convertible with that of "good man." 'Cf. a similar form of expression, Eth. V. ii. II: ού γὰρ Ισως ταϊτὸν ἀνδρί τ' ἀγαθῷ εἶναι καὶ πολίτη παντί.

6 διαμφισβητείται] The questions mentioned here are raised in the Lysis

γὰρ ὁμοιότητά τινα τιθέασιν αὐτὴν καὶ τοὺς ὁμοίους φίλους, δθεν τὸν ὅμοιόν φασιν ὡς τὸν ὅμοιον, καὶ κολοιὸν ποτὶ κολοιόν, καὶ ὅσα τοιαῦτα ὁ οἱ ὁ ἐξ ἐναντίας κεραμεῖς πάντας τοὺς τοιοῦτους ἀλλήλοις φασὶν εἶναι. καὶ περὶ αὐτῶν τούτων ἀνώτερον ἐπίζητοῦσι καὶ φυσικώτερον, Εὐριπίδης μὲν φάσκων ἐρῶν μὲν ὅμβρου γαῖαν ξηρανθεῖσαν, ἐρῶν δὲ σεμνὸν οὐρανὸν πληρούμενον ὅμβρου πεσεῖν ἐς γαῖαν, καὶ Ἡράκλειτος τὸ ἀντίζουν συμφέρον καὶ ἐκ τῶν διαφερόντων καλλίστην ἀρμονίαν καὶ πάντα κατ ἔριν γίνεσθαι ἐξ ἐναντίας δὲ τούτοις ἄλλοι τε καὶ Ἐμπεδοκλῆς τὸ γὰρ ὅμοιον τοῦ ὁμοίου ἐφίεσθαι. τὰ μὲν οῦν 7 φυσικὰ τῶν ἀπορημάτων ἀφείσθω (οὐ γὰρ οἰκεῖα τῆς παρούσης σκέψεως) ὅσα δ' ἐστὶν ἀνθρωπικὰ καὶ ἀνήκει εἰς τὰ ἤθη καὶ τὰ πάθη, ταῦτ ἐπισκεψώμεθα, οἷον πότερον ἐν πῶσι γίνεται φιλία ἡ οὐχ οἷόν τε μοχθηροὺς

it is laid down that friendship cannot consist in pure contrariety.

καΙ περὶ αὐτῶν—φνοικώτερον] 'And about these very questions some inquire more deeply and physically,' i.e. not limiting their view to the phenomena of friendship itself, but bringing in the analogies of the whole of nature. Aristotle sets aside such speculations as not belonging to ethics; he remarks parenthetically below (Eth. VIII. viii. 7), that the contrary in nature does not desire its extreme contrary, but the mean.

Eὐριπίδηs] The verses occur in a fragment of an uncertain play, which is preserved by Athenæus, XIII. p. 599.

7 ή ούχ ολόν τε μοχθηρούς όντας]

Φιλεῖ δ' ἔκαστος οὐ τὸ ὂν αὐτῷ ἀγαθὸν ἀλλὰ τὸ φαινόμενον. διοίσει δ' οὐδέν 3 ἔσται γὰρ τὸ φιλητὸν φαινόμενον. τριῶν δ' ὄντων δι' ἃ

This question is started in the Lysis, p. 214 D: τοῦτο τοίνυν αἰνίττονται, ὡς ἐμοί δοκοῦσιν, ὡ ἐταῖρε, οἱ τὸ ὁμοιον τῷ ὁμοίω φίλον λέγοντες, ὡς ὁ ἀγαθὸς τῷ ἀγαθῷ μόνος μόνφ φίλος, ὁ δὲ κακὸς οὅτ' ἀγαθῷ οὅτε κακῷ οὐδέποτε εἰς ἀληθῆ φιλίαν ἔρχεται.

οί μέν γάρ εν οιόμενοι κ.τ.λ.] ' For they who think that there is only one species of friendship, because it admits of degrees, trust to an insufficient proof. For things also that differ in species admit of degrees. But we have spoken about them before.' Aristotle immediately proceeds to show that there are three distinct species of friendship, in accordance with the three objects of liking. He also says that the friendships for pleasure or profit are less friendships than that for the good (hrróv elow, VIII. vi. 7). All three kinds admit of the idea (λόγος) of friendship; thus they agree in genus and are comparable in point of degree. Cf. Ar. Categ. viii. 36: άπλως δέ, έὰν μη ἐπιδέχηται ἀμφότερα του του προκειμένου λόγον, οὐ ρηθήσεται τὸ έτερον τοῦ ἐτέρου μᾶλλον. As there is no place in the Ethics where Aristotle has discussed this logical question before, a Scholiast says with regard to the last words of the paragraph : ξοικε δὲ εἰρῆσθαι ἐν τοις έκπεπτωκόσι των Νικομαχείων. But most probably the words elograi δ' ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν are the interpolation of a copyist, who was perhaps thinking vaguely of Eth. II. viii. 5, to which the commentators generally refer. These words spoil the grammar of the sentence, as περί αύτῶν is used in the next line with a different reference.

II. 2 πότερον οδν—αὐτοῖι ἀγαθίν] Aristotle here guards himself against the appearance of having admitted the Platonic theory, that the absolute good is always the object of human desire. Cf. Elh. III. iv. 1, and note.

έσται γάρ - φαινόμενον] 'For in that case the object of liking will be an apparent and not an absolute object.'

φιλοῦσιν, ἐπὶ μὲν τῆ τῶν ἀψύχων φιλήσει οὐ λέγεται φιλία· οὐ γάρ ἐστιν ἀντιφίλησις, οὐδὲ βούλησις ἐκείνων ἀγαθοῦ· γελοῖον γὰρ ἴσως τῷ οἴνῷ βούλεσθαι τὰγαθά· ἀλλ' εἴπερ, σώζεσθαι βούλεσθαι αὐτόν, ἴνα αὐτὸς ἔχη. τῷ δὲ φίλῷ φασὶ δεῖν βούλεσθαι τὰγαθὰ ἐκείνου ἔνεκα. τοὺς δὲ βουλομένους οὕτω τὰγαθὰ εὔνους λέγουσιν, ἐὰν μὴ ταὐτὸ καὶ παρ' ἐκείνου γίγνηται· εὔνοιαν γὰρ ἐν ἀντιπεπονθόσι φιλίαν εἶναι, ἣ προσθετέον μὴ λανθάνουσαν 4 πολλοὶ γάρ εἰσιν εὖνοι οἶς οὐχ ἐωράκασιν, ὑπολαμβάνουσι δὲ ἐπιεικεῖς εἶναι ἣ χρησίμους· τοῦτο δὲ ταὐτὸν κᾶν ἐκείνων τις πάθοι πρὸς τοῦτον. εὖνοι μὲν οὖν οὖτοι φαίνονται ἀλλήλοις· φίλους δὲ πῶς ἄν τις εἴποι λανθάνοντας ὡς ἔχουσιν ἑαυτοῖς; δεῖ ἄρα εὐνοεῖν ὰλλήλοις καὶ βούλεσθαι τὰγαθὰ μὴ λανθάνοντας δι' ἔν τι τῶν εἰρημένων.

3 τῦ τῶν ἀψύχων] Suggested by the Lysis of Plato, p. 212 p, where οἶνος is mentioned as an object of liking: οὐδ' ἄρα φίλιπποί εἰσιν, οῦς ἄν οἱ ἵπποι μὴ ἀντιφιλῶσιν, οὐδὰ φιλόρτυγες, οὐδ' αδ φιλόκυνές γε καὶ φίλοινοι κ.τ.λ.

4 η—τοῦτον] 'Or must we add the proviso that (this good feeling) must not be unknown? For many are kindly disposed to men whom they have never seen, but whom they suppose to be good or useful, and one of these latter might reciprocate the same feeling.' τοῦτοκ, being substituted for the plural πολλοί, gives definiteness.

Cf. IX. i. 4: τούτοις και προσέχει, κάκείνου γε χάριν ταθτα δώσει.

III. I ταύτη ή φιλοῦσω] 'According to the particular mode of their friendship.' The differences of mode are specified afterwards.

ού καθ' αὐτοὺς φιλοῦσω] 'Do not love each other for their very selves.' This phrase καθ' αὐτοὺς is rather a logical formula than an ordinary grammatical combination. It seems to have arisen from καθ' αὐτό, 'the absolute.' Cf. VIII. iii. 7, and the use of δι' αὐτούς, VIII. iv. 6, IX. i. 7.

Aristotle, the chief blessing of friendship. Cf. Ix. ix.  $10 : \epsilon l \delta h \tau \hat{\phi}$  μακαρίφ τὸ εθναι αίρετὸν ἐστι καθ' αὐτό, ἀγαθὸν τῆ φύσει δν και ἡδύ, παραπλήσιον δὲ καὶ τὸ τοῦ φίλου ἐστίν, καὶ ὁ φίλος τῶν αίρετῶν δν είη.

6 ἐκάστψ γὰρ—δμοιαι] 'For to every man his own actions and those similar to them are pleasurable, and the actions of the good are (to the good) identical (with their own actions) or similar.' The friend being alterego, the delight of friendship is that it gives an increased sense of existence.

πασα γάρ-τινα] 'For every friendship is for good or for pleasure; either absolute, or else relative to him who feels the friendship, and only bearing a certain resemblance to the absolutely good or pleasurable.' The comma should surely be omitted after  $\tau \hat{\varphi}$ φιλούντι, Aristotle is not here saying (as the commentators fancy) that every friendship implies similarity, but that every friendship, whether the genuine type or one of the secondary and reflected species, aims at either good or pleasure, This is made clear by the next chapter, § 4: πρώτως μέν και κυρίως την των άγαθων ή άγαθοί, τὰς δὲ λοιπὰς καθ' ὁμοιότητα.

ταύτη δέ-τὰ λοιπά] 'But this friendship has all the specified qualities essentially belonging to the persons who feel it (καθ' αὐτούς)—(I say essentially), for even the other kinds of friendship are resemblances of this (the perfect kind).' This passage has vexed the commentators. Zell thinks that δμοια may be referred to καθ' ὁμοιότητά τινα in the previous sentence (which he mistakes), and explains, 'In this kind of friendship there is similarity and all the other requisite qualities.' But we surely then should have expected rà buoca. Cardwell, following Giphanius, Zwinger, and the Scholiast, reads ταύτη γάρ δμοιοι καὶ τὰ λοιπά. In this kind of friendship men are similar, et cætera.' Stahr doubts the genuineness of the entire section. common reading, as above explained, seems borne out by the opening of the next chapter, ή δὲ διὰ τὸ ἡδὺ ὁμοίωμα ταύτης έχει. Cf. VIII. vi. 7. "Ομοια here is in opposition to ταύτη-καθ' αὐτούς.

3 και μόνη δέ-γίνεσθαι] 'And in short, the friendship of the good is alone incapable of being disturbed by accusations. For it is not easy (for the good) to believe any person about a man whom they have long proved. And the sayings about "having faith," and that (the friend) "never could wrong one," and all the other points which are demanded in ideal friendship, are realised in the friendship of the good. But in the other kinds nothing prevents disturbances from accusations (τὰ τοιαῦτα) arising.' Δια-Banker is 'to set two people by the ears.' Cf. Plato, Repub. p. 498 c: μή διάβαλλε έμε και Θρασύμαχον άρτι φίλους γεγονότας.

4 η γαρ άγαθόν τι καὶ ὅμοιον, ταύτη φίλοι) 'For so far as (these kinds of friendship exhibit) something good and resembling the good, so far (those who exercise them) are friends.' The commentators are again deceived by the word ὅμοιον, taking it to mean 'similarity of character.' See above, ch. iii. § 7, note.

5 ο πάνν—συμβεβηκός] 'But the above-mentioned kinds of friendship do not always coincide. Nor do the same men become friends for the sake of the useful, as for the sake of the pleasant. 'But those who are asleep, or who are separated by the intervals of space, do not exercise friendship, though they have all the disposition to exercise it. For the intervals of space do not destroy friendship, but only its exercise.'
This is of course a most inadequate

translation of ἐνεργεῖν and ἔχουσεν. These words must be understood by a study of Aristotle's forms of thought. See Vol. I. Essay IV. On the ἐνεργεια of friendship, cf. Eth. IX. ix.

5 force 8'-Efews] 'Loving is like an emotion, but friendship like a settled disposition of the mind. For loving exists just as well towards inanimate objects; but when men reciprocate friendship it implies purpose, and purpose proceeds from a settled disposition of the mind.' In Eth. IV. vi. 5 (cf. II. v. 2), Aristotle makes friendship to be an emotion, or characterised by emotion. The present passage does not in the least contradict this, as EEcs, or a settled disposition of mind, is merely the result of regulated emotions, and the tendency to reproduce them.

ή δὲ προαίρεσις, κ.τ.λ.] In Eth. III. ii. I, Aristotle speaks of 'purpose' as the test of character; ib. § 11, as constituting character; ib. § 2, as not acting suddenly; ib. § 17, as implying reason and forethought.

έκάτερος—ἡδεί] 'Each of the two good to himself, and he makes an equal return both in wishing good and in (actual) pleasure.' Zell, following two MSS, reads είδει. But Bekker's reading (ἡδεῖ) appears preferable: (1) because love είδει would not be a natural expression; it concounds degree with kind; we should expect ταὐτὸν είδει; (2) because ἡδεῖ gives very good sense, since it is one thing to reciprocate the motives or feelings of friendship, and another to give your friend the same amount of pleasure as he gives you.

λέγεται—Ισύτηκ] 'For equality is said to constitute friendship.' A Pythagorean saying, connecting moral deas with the ideas of number. Cf. Diog. Laert. VIII. i. 8: εἴπέ τε πρῶτος (ὡς ψησι Τίμαιος) κοινὰ τὰ φίλων εἶναι' καὶ φιλίαν Ισύτητα.

VI. I. This section is an awkward repetition of what has been said before, ch. v. § 2. This, however, merely shows that we have probably the uncorrected draft of Aristotle's treatise on Friendship.

2 πολλοίς—εlvai] 'It is not possible to be a friend to many men on the footing of the perfect kind of friendship, just as one cannot be in love with many at the same time. For (the perfect friendship) is a sort of excess of feeling, which naturally arises towards one person alone; again, it is not easy for many persons to be intensely pleasing to the same individual, and perhaps not easy that many should be good.' ὑπερβολή here would be nearly represented by the French word abandon; it implies the throwing away of limits and restraints, a giving up of one's whole self. Cf. IX. iv. 6: ή ὑπερβολή τῆς φιλίας τη πρός αύτον ομοιούται. Of course there is an association of Aristotelian ideas (μεσότης, έλλειψις, &c.) in the term. It is repeated Eth. IX. x. 5, where the question of the plurality of friendships is carefully gone into.

3 πολλοῖς ἀρέσκειν ἐνδέχεται] We should have expected πολλοὸς ἡμῶν ἀρέσκειν, on the nanlogy of the last sentence, πολλοὸς τῷ ἀὐτῷ ἀρέσκειν, but the writing seems careless and the expression is inverted.

VI. iv. 12: ὁ γὰρ βίος φαίλος, καὶ οὐθὲν ἔργον μετ' ἀρετής ἄν μεταχειρίζεται τὸ πλήθος τὸ τε τῶν βαναάσων καὶ τὸ τῶν ἀγοραίων ἀνθρωπων καὶ τὸ θητικόν.

joke, we must have considered this to be meant as such. It is a contradiction in terms to speak of the Absolute Good as painful. But the argument is given in a merely matter-of-fact way. See Vol. I. Essay III. p. 216.

δεῖ δ' ἴσως—αὐτοῖς] 'And perhaps (in seeking friends) one ought (to require) that even good men should have this qualification (i.e. pleasantness), and moreover not in a merely universal way, but relatively to oneself.'

5 of δ' tr ταῖs—φίλοιs] 'Great potentates' (cf. Eth. I. v. 3), 'however, seem to make use of their friends separately;' i.e. they keep two sets of friends, one for profit or business, and another for pleasure.

6 ήδὺν δὲ — γἰνεοθαι] 'Now we have already said that the good man is both pleasant and useful at once. But such a man does not become a friend to his superior (in rank), unless he be surpassed (by that superior) in virtue also. Else he does not find himself in that position of equality which is produced by superiority in proportion to merit. Such persons however (as potentates who surpass the good in virtue), are not produced every day.' The commentators have strangely interpreted this passage, making ὑπερέχηται take for its nominative δ ὑπερέχων, as though Aristotle had said that a good man would not be a friend to a potentate, if that potentate had superior moral qualities; and as though 'equality' were produced by one man having all the merit and another all the power On the contrary, Aristotle would have said that 'proportionate equality' is produced, according to the principles of distributive justice, by each man having in proportion to his merits; of. Eth. v. iii. 6; Pol. III. ix. 15. There is no sense of inequality produced by the position of a man socially exalted, if he be also exalted in intellect and character; inequality is felt when a fool or a villain occupies a high social position. Cf. Pol. III. ix. 15:

VII. 2 ἀνάλογον δ'] The same principle of distributive justice, main-proportionate equality is primary, and quantitative equality secondary; in friendship, quantitative equality is the first, and proportionate equality the second consideration.' Distributive justice begins by presupposing inequalities between man and man, and by proportionate assignments it equalises these. Justice, however, cares little about bringing men to quantitative or exact equality. The latter kind of equality, at all events, is aimed at only in democracies, while the proportionate equality belongs to aristocracies and constitutional governments. Cf. Ar. Pol. vi. ii. 2. Friendship, on the other hand, begins by presupposing equality between the parties, and though a certain amount of inequality may be made up by proportionate assignment of affection. &c., yet a wide interval of inequality will render friendship altogether impossible.

5 ἀκριβής—οὐκέτι] 'In such cases there is no exact definition up to what point friendship is possible; VOL. II. for after many deductions (from equality) have been made, friendship still abides; but when (the one friend) is far removed from the other, as, for instance, God is from man, there is no friendship any longer.' It is indeterminate at what point, if you go on diminishing equality, friendship will cease, just as, in the old puzzle, at what point the heap ceased to be a heap.

6 δθεν καl-τάγαθά] 'From this the question has arisen whether friends wish for their friends the greatest of all goods, as, for instance, to be gods. For having attained this, they would no longer at all be friends to those who formed the wish, and therefore no advantage to them, for friends are an advantage. If, then, it has been rightly stated that the friend wishes all that is good to his friend for that friend's sake, it will be necessary for that friend to remain as he is, and then he will wish for him, being a man, the greatest goods. After all, perhaps, he will not wish LL him to have everything. For every one especially wishes for himself what is good.' Under the words ἀπορεῖται μή ποτ' οὐ is included a question both as to fact and cause. Ovôè γὰρ denies the fact and states the cause, which is that if we wished our friend to become a god, we should wish him to be in a position where he can no longer be our friend. The last sentence (ἴσως δ' οὐ πάντα) qualifies the previous statement, and guards against the notion that any human friendship can be utterly disinterested and selfless. The same topic is fully discussed in the eighth chapter of Book IX.

prefer the latter, as ministering to their vanity. Being loved is akin to being honoured. Parenthetically it may be observed that honour is sought not for itself but on account of things variously associated with it (rard ounβεβηκός). (I) To be honoured by the great affords a hope of promotion. (2) To be honoured by the wise and good is an evidence to men of their own merits. Thus honour is desired as a means to the consciousness of virtue. Cf. Eth. I. v. 5: colkage The τιμήν διώκειν ίνα πιστεύωσιν έαυτούς άγαθούς είναι ' ζητούσι γούν ύπο των φρονίμων τιμάσθαι, και παρ' οίς γιγνώσκονται, καὶ ἐπ' ἀρετή.

3 The active spirit of love, as opposed to the passive gratification of being loved, is exemplified by the case of mothers, who give their children έκείνοι μηθέν ων μητρί προσήκει απονέμωσι διά την άγνοιαν. μάλλον δε της φιλίας ούσης εν τω φιλείν, και των φιλ- 4 οφίλων επαινουμένων, φίλων άρετη το φιλείν εοικεν, ώστ' έν οίς τοῦτο γίνεται κατ' άξίαν, οῦτοι μόνιμοι φίλοι καὶ ή τούτων φιλία. ούτω δ' αν καὶ οἱ ἄνισοι μάλιστ' εἶεν φίλοι: 5 ισάζοιντο γαρ αν. ή δ' ισότης και ομοιότης Φιλότης, και μάλιστα μεν ή των κατ' άρετην όμοιότης · μόνιμοι γάρ όντες καθ' αύτους και πρός άλλήλους μένουσι, και ούτε δέονται φαύλων ούθ' ύπηρετούσι τοιαύτα, άλλ' ώς είπειν και διακωλύουσι των άγαθων γάρ μήτ' αὐτούς άμαρτάνειν μήτε τοις φίλοις έπιτρέπειν. οι δε μοχθηροί το μεν βέβαιον ούκ έχουσιν ούδε γαρ αυτοίς διαμένουσιν ομοιοι όντες επ' ολίγον δε χρόνον γίγνονται φίλοι, χαίροντες τη αλλήλων μοχθηρία. οι χρήσιμοι δέ και ήδεις έπι πλείον διαμένου- 6 σιν έως γαρ αν πορίζωσιν ήδονας ή ώφελείας αλλήλοις. έξ εναντίων δε μάλιστα μεν δοκεί ή διά το χρήσιμον γίγνεσθαι φιλία, οἶον πένης πλουσίω, αμαθής εἰδότι οῦ γαρ τυγχάνει τις ενδεής ών, τούτου εφιέμενος αντιδωρείται άλλο. ένταθθα δ' αν τις έλκοι καὶ έραστην καὶ έρωμενον, καὶ καλόν καὶ αἰσχρόν. διὸ φαίνονται καὶ οἱ ἐρασταὶ γελοίοι ένίστε, άξιούντες φιλείσθαι ώς φιλούσιν όμοίως δή φιλητους όντας ίσως άξιωτέον, μηδέν δέ τοιούτον έχοντας γελοίον. ἴσως δὲ οὐδ' ἐφίεται τὸ ἐναντίον τοῦ ἐναντίου καθ' 7 αύτό, άλλα κατά συμβεβηκός. ή δ' ὅρεξις τοῦ μέσου ἐστίν· to be brought up by other persons, and go on loving them, though not even recognised by them.

4-5 It is this active spirit of love which constitutes the virtue of friendship, and which causes us to praise those who are of a friendly disposition. This then explains what was above stated merely as as a fact, Eth. VIII. i. 5. The same spirit serves as the equalising principle in unequal friendships, greater merit being met by greater love.

5-7 Friendship is based on equality and similarity, especially the friendship of the good. Friendships for the sake of pleasure or profit seem rather based on contrariety, as, for instance, on the contrariety of riches and poverty. But, after all, one would say not that the contrary seeks its contrary, but that the contrary seeks the mean.

5 θιασωτών καὶ ἐρανιστών] Cardwell refers for illustration of these terms to Demosthenes, pp. 313, 23; 403, 19; 1355, 3; 1217, 14.

By omitting, with Fritzsche, Bekker's full stop after συνουσίας, and by placing the words οὐ γὰρ—τὸν βίον in a parenthesis, we see that the participles ποιοῦντει, ἀπονέμοντει, πορίζοντει are to be referred to κοινωνοί, as implied in κοινωνιῶν above.
The passage which speaks of men 'awarding honour to the gods, while providing recreation and pleasure for themselves,' is highly characteristic of the Greek religion. This sort of thing can perhaps be best understood in the present day by those who have seen the religious festivals of the Hindoos. Cf. Plato's Republic, p. 364 Β: θυσίαις τε καὶ ἐπφδαῖς—μεθ' ἡδονῶν τε καὶ ἐορτῶν.

X. This chapter, containing a classification of forms of government and of the perversions to which they are exposed, can hardly have been written after the Politics of Aristotle. It has rather the appearance of a first essay, the conclusions of which were afterwards worked out into detail, and apartly medified. Thus Aristotle in the Politics by no means concedes the position that monarchy is the best form of government. He argues, Pol. III. xv. 4-16, that it is better for a state to be governed by good laws than by the best individual will; further on, Pol. III. xvii., he qualifies this byadmitting that for some peoples monarchy is better suited.

1 παρεκβάσεις] 'Perversions' or 'abnormal growths;' of POL III. vi. II, where a form of government is pronounced to be normal as long as it aims at the public good, abnormal when its end is private interest: φανερὸν τοίνυν ως δσαι μὲν πολιτεῖαι τὸ κουή συμφέρον σκοποῦσυ, αῦται μὲν ὀρθαί τυγχάνουσυ οδσαι κατὰ τὸ ἀπλῶς δίκαιον, ὅσαι δὲ τὸ σφέτερον μόνον τῶν ἀρχόντων, ἡμαρτημέναι πάσαι καὶ παρεκβάσεις τῶν ὀρθῶν πολιτειῶν δεσποτικαὶ γάρ, ἡ δὲ πόλις κοινωνία, τῶν ἐλευθέρου ἐστίν.

πολιτείαν δ' αὐτὴν εἰώθασιν οἱ πλείστοι καλείν] 'But most people are accustomed to term it "a constitution." The word πολιτεία was used by the Greeks in a restricted sense, just as the word 'constitution' is in English, to denote a balanced form of government. Cf. Ar. Pol. III. vii. 3: δταν δὲ τὸ πλῆθος πρὸς τὸ κοινὸν πολιτεύηται συμφέρον, καλείται τὸ κοινὸν δνομα πασῶν τῶν πολιτείω, πολιτεία. Axistotle does not use the word in the Politics to denote a timocracy. In the ninth chapter of Book IV. he uses it to denote a mixed form between oligarchy and democracy. He also uses it to express his own ideal of a state, which was far from being a timocracy.

2 ό γάρ μη τοιούτος κληρωτός άν τις είη βασιλεύς] 'For he who had not these qualifications would be a sort of ballot-box king.' It is difficult to express the word κληρωτός, which as coupled with βασιλεύs is certainly meant to be contemptuous. Aristotle does not appear to mean any definite form of monarchy, so we learn nothing from Pol. III. xiv., to which the commentators refer us. Aristotle here says that the genuine king must be independent in property and position, and above all his subjects in this respect. Externally wanting nothing for himself, he will administer the state for the good of his subjects. If this is not the case, he will be no genuine king, but a parvenu, κληρωτός τις, like a person who had been raised to the throne by the contingency of lot, and therefore insecure in his position, with perhaps only a temporary tenure of office. The word autobour is coupled with μη κληρωτάς (as an epithet of πενταρχίας), Pol. II. xi. 7. It is possible that in the present passage a notion of 'paid services' may be implied. If so, 'hireling monarch' would express the terms under notice. κληρωτός αν τις είη βασιλεύς. ή δε τυραννίς εξ εναντίας ταύτη τὸ γὰρ ἐαυτῷ ἀγαθὸν διώκει. καὶ φανερώτερον έπὶ ταύτης ὅτι χειρίστη κάκιστον δὲ τὸ ἐναντίον τῷ 3 βελτίστω. μεταβαίνει δ' έκ βασιλείας είς τυραννίδα. φαυλότης γάρ έστι μουαρχίας ή τυραννίς ό δή μοχθηρός βασιλεύς τύραννος γίνεται. έξ αριστοκρατίας δε είς όλιγαρχίαν κακία των άρχόντων, οὶ νέμουσι τὰ τής πόλεως παρά την άξίαν, και πάντα η τὰ πλείστα τῶν άγαθων έαυτοίς, και τὰς άρχὰς ἀεὶ τοῖς αὐτοῖς, περὶ πλείστου ποιούμενοι το πλουτείν ολίγοι δη άρχουσι καί μοχθηροί αντί των επιεικεστάτων. εκ δε δή τιμοκρατίας είς δημοκρατίαν σύνοροι γάρ είσιν αθται πλήθους γάρ βούλεται καὶ ή τιμοκρατία είναι, καὶ ἴσοι πάντες οἱ έν τῶ τιμήματι. ηκιστα δε μοχθηρόν έστιν η δημοκρατία έπὶ μικρον γάρ παρεκβαίνει το της πολιτείας είδος. μεταβάλλουσι μέν οὖν μάλισθ' οὕτως αἱ πολιτεῖαι ελάχιστον γάρ οὔτω καὶ ράστα μεταβαίνουσιν. ὁμοιώματα δ' αὐτῶν 4 καὶ οἶον παραδείγματα λάβοι τις αν καὶ εν ταις οἰκίαις. ή μέν γὰρ πατρὸς πρὸς υίεις κοινωνία βασιλείας έχει σχήμα · των τέκνων γαρ τω πατρί μέλει. έντευθεν δέ καὶ "Ομηρος τὸν Δία πατέρα προσαγορεύει · πατρική γάρ άρχη βούλεται η βασιλεία είναι. έν Πέρσαις δ' ή τοῦ πατρός τυραννική. χρώνται γάρ ως δούλοίς τοις υίέσιν. τυραννική δε και ή δεσπότου προς δούλους το γάρ τοῦ δεσπότου συμφέρον εν αυτή πράττεται. αυτη μεν ουν ορθή φαίνεται, ή Περσική δ' ήμαρτημένη· των διαφερόντων γάρ αι άρχαι διάφοροι. άνδρὸς δέ και γυναικός άριστο- 5 κρατική φαίνεται κατ' άξίαν γὰρ ὁ ἀνήρ ἄρχει, καὶ περὶ ταῦτα ἃ δεῖ τὸν ἄνδρα. ὅσα δε γυναικὶ ἀρμόζει, ἐκείνη αποδίδωσιν, απάντων δε κυριεύων ο ανήρ είς ολιγαρχίαν μεθίστησιν παρά την άξίαν γάρ αὐτὸ ποιεί, καὶ οὐχ ή αμείνων. ένίστε δε άρχουσιν αι γυναίκες επίκληροι ούσαι.

6 ἀφελείται—δίκαιον] 'For though all these things receive benefit from those who make use of them, yet neither friendship nor justice is possible towards inanimate objects.' The corresponding passage in the Eudemian Ethicsserves as a commentary on this: Eth. Eud. VII. x. 4: συμβαίνει δὲ καὶ αὐτὸ τὸ [e conj. Bonitz] δργανον ἐπιμελείας τυγχάνειν, ἢε δίκαιον πρὸς τὸ ἐργον, ἐκείνον γὰρ ἔνεκέν ἐστι. The instrument receives just so much care from its master as will keep it in proper condition for the exercise of its functions. The slave, who is treated not as a person but as a thing, receives the same kind of attention. Friendship and justice imply the recognition of personality; they imply treating men not as instruments, but as ends in themselves. On the slavery of the body to the soul, cf. Ar. Pol. 1. v. 6-8.

7 πρότερον και ἀναγκαιότερον οικία πόλεων] In point of time the family is prior to the state, but in point of idea (λόγω) and essentially (φύσει) the state is prior. Cf. Ar. Pol. I. ii. 12: και πρότερον δη τῆ φύσει πόλιο ηδοικία και ἐκαστος ἡμῶν ἐστίν. Τὸ γὰρ όλου πρότερον ἀναγκαῖον είναι τοῦ μέρους ἀναμρουμένου γὰρ τοῦ δλου οἰκ ἔσται ποὺς οὐδὲ χείρ, εἰ μὴ ὁμωνύμως. Aristotle argues that, without the idea of the 'state,' the terms 'man and 'family' would lose their meaning. Thus the idea of family presupposes that of the state, which will accordingly be prior. In the same way, the family is more necessary as a means, the state as an end.

ἐπαρκοῦσιν οῦν—lõia] 'They help one another, therefore, bringing what they each have separately into the common stock.' Fritzsche quotes the saying of Ischomachus to his wife in the Œconomics of Xenophon (vii. 13): νῦν δὴ οἶκος ἡμῶν ὅδε κοινός ἀστυ., Ἡς ὑ τε γάρ, ὅσα μοὶ ἐστυ, ἀπαντα, εἰς τὸ κοινὸν ἀποφαίνω, σό τε ὅσα ἡνέγκω, πάντα εἰς τὸ κοινὸν κατέθηκας.

2 τὸν γὰρ—εῦ δρῶν] 'No one takes it ill that one loves and benefits him, but, if he be of gentle mind, pays his benefactor back in good deeda.' The subject to ἀμώνεται is implied in οὐδείs. Fritzsche quotes Horace, Sat. I. i. I.

χαρίεις has nothing to do with 'gratitude.' It means much the same as is conveyed in the word 'gentleman.' Cf. Eth. I. v. 4: ol δὲ χαρίεντες καὶ πρακτικοί. Iv. viii. 9: χαρίεις καὶ ἐλεύθερος. 5 ἔοικε—διαλύωνται] 'Now as justice is twofold, the one unwritten, the other according to law, so also of utilitarian friendship there appear to be two branches, the one moral and the other legal. The complaints then (which arise) chiefly take place when men do not conclude their connection in the same branch in which they commenced it.' συναλλάττειν is to make a contract, διαλύεσθαι to wind up a contract by the mutual performance of the terms. Men who consider that they have entered upon a socalled friendship with a fixed stipulation (νομική) of certain advantages to be received, will complain if the fixed stipulation is denied, and only a general moral obligation (ἡθική) to render services is admitted.

6 ξοτι-συναλλάξαντας] 'That which is on stated conditions then is legal (utilitarian friendship). One sort of it is wholly commercial, implying payment on the spot (èk xeipds els χείρα); another is more liberal, allowing time (εls χρόνον), but still on the understanding of a specified return. In this then the debt is plain and undoubted, but the delay which it admits of is friendly. Hence in some states no suits are allowed in cases of this kind, but men think that those who have contracted on faith should abide (by the issue).' dναβολή in commerce answers to 'credit;' cf. Plato's Laws, ΧΙ. p. 915 D: μηδ' ἐπὶ ἀναβολή πρᾶσιν μηδέ ώνην ποιείσθαι. Or it may answer to buying or selling for future delivery. φιλικόν (' of the nature of friendship') stands here as a predicate. Of. Eth. VIII. i. 4: TWV δικαίων τὸ μάλιστα φιλικόν είναι δοκεί.

7-8 ή δ' ήθικη—εὐεργετεῖσθαι] 'On the other hand, the moral (branch of utilitarian friendship) is not on stated conditions, but the gift, or whatever else it be, is made as if to a friend. Yet (the giver) claims to get as much, or more, as though he had not given but lent. And if he does not come off in the connection as well as he commenced, he will complain. Now this (sort of disappointment) takes place because all or most men wish that which is noble, but practically choose that which is expedient. It is noble to do good not with a view to receive it back, but it is expedient to be benefited.' This passage discriminately exposes a sort of vacillation between disinterestedness and self-interest, which occurs in utilitarian friendships. A man at one moment thinks vaguely (βούλεται) of aiming at the noble, and makes a gift as if he expected no return. But presently the more definite bent of his mind (mpoalpeass) reverts to the profitable, and he claims to get back as good as he gave. On the distinction between βούλεσθαι and προαιρείσθαι cf. Eth. III. iv. 1, v. ix. 6, and the notes.

9 δυναμένω δή—ή μή] 'If one is able, then one ought to pay back the full value of what one has received;

for one must not make a man a friend against his will (i.e. treat him as if he were disinterested, when he did not really mean to be so). (One must act) as if one had made a mistake at the outset, and had received a benefit from one whom one ought not to have received it from, that is to say, not from a friend, or from some one doing a friendly action; one must conclude the business therefore as if one had been benefited on stated conditions. And (in this case) one would stipulate to repay to the best of one's ability ;if one were unable, not even the giver could demand it; so in short, if one is able, one should repay. But one ought to consider at the outset by whom one is benefited, and on what terms, so that one may agree to accept those terms or not.' The words καὶ ἐκόντι are omitted in the above translation. They are left out by two of the MSS., and while they merely interrupt the sense of the passage, they may easily be conceived to have arisen out of the following words, ἄκοντα γάρ. The passage prescribes the mode of dealing with a person who having conferred a benefit (as described in the last section) expects a return for it. The accusative case διαμαρτόντα is governed by the verbal adjective διαλυτέον which follows; cf. Eth. VII. i. I : λεκτέον άλλην ποιησαμένους άρχήν. Some editions read δμολογήσαι δ' å», which the commentators explain to be governed by δεί, as implied in the verbal adjectives άνταποδοτέον, διαλυτέον.

the benefit accrning to the recipient is the gauge (of what is to be repaid). For he (the recipient) is the asking party, and (the other) assists him on the understanding that he will receive the same value. The assistance rendered then is exactly so much as the recipient has been benefited; and he ought therefore to repay as much as he has reaped, or even more.'

XIV. 1 διαφέρονται] 'Men have differences' in those friendships which are contracted between a superior and an inferior. Aristotle says that these differences ought to be settled by both

3 οὐ γὰρ ἔστιν—ὑπομένει] 'For it is not allowable that a man should at once gain money and honour out of the public, for no one endures to have the inferior position in all points.' This notion, that the state-officers should have either pay or honour, but not both, is expressed before, Εth. v. vi. 6-7. It is drawn from the Athenian ideas of liberty and equality, but is hardly in accordance with the practice of the modern world.

4 ἀπείπασθαι] 'Το disown.' Cardwell quotes Herodotus i. 59: εἴ τίς οἰ τυγχάνει ἐὼν παῖς, τοῦτον ἀπείπασθαι. Demosthenes 1006, 21: (ὁ νόμος) τοὺς γονέας ποιεῖ κυρίους οὐ μόνον θέσθαι τοῦνομα ἐξ ἀρχῆς, ἀλλὰ καὶ πάλιν ἐξαλεῖψαι ἐὰν βούλωνται, καὶ ἀποκηρῦξαι.

χωρίς γὰρ—διωθεῖσθαι] 'For independently of natural affection, it is a human instinct not to reject the assistance (which he might derive from his son).' διωθεῖσθαι is used in the same sense, Eth. Ix. xi. 6.

περὶ μὲν οδν τούτων ἐπὶ τοσοῦτον εἰρήσθο] These words may have been written by Aristotle himself, with the view of dividing his treatise on Friendship into two books, of the same length as the books into which all his various writings are divided. Or, on the other hand, they may have been added, for the same purpose, by an editor.

I. In heterogeneous friendships, equality is to be obtained by the rule of proportion. The same rule holds good in political economy, where the most heterogeneous products are equalised against one another. In political economy there is the convenience of a common standard, money, by which products may be measured. In friendship there is, unfortunately, no such standard.

1 ἀνομοιοειδέστ] This is not quite the same as ταῖς καθ' ὑπεροχὴν ψιλίαις. It implies relationships in which the two parties have respectively different objects in view, as, for instance, in the

καθάπερ είρηται] Cf. Eth. VIII. xiii. I. iv τῷ πολιτικῷ] By the modern division of sciences, Political Economy has been raised into separate existence, so as in its method to be entirely independent of, and in its results subordinate to, Politics. On the Aristotelian theory of the law of value in exchange, see Eth. v. v. 3, and note.

3 ἡ δὲ τῶν ἡθῶν] 'Moral friendship,' or 'friendship based on character,' the same as ἡ κατ' ἀρετὴν φιλία. Cf. Εἰλ. VIII. xiii. II : ἐν δὲ ταῖν κατ' ἀρετὴν—τῆς ἀρετῆς γὰρ καὶ τοῦ ἡθους, ρονται δὲ καὶ ὅταν ἔτερα γίγνηται αὐτοῖς καὶ μὴ ὢν ὀρέγονται ὅμοιον γὰρ τῷ μηθὲν γίγνεσθαι, ὅταν οῦ ἐφίεται μὴ τυγχάνῃ, οἶον καὶ τῷ κιθαρῳδῷ ὁ ἐπαγγελλόμενος, καὶ ὅσῷ ἄμεινον ἄσειεν, τοσούτῷ πλείω εἰς ἔω δ' ἀπαιτοῦντι τὰς ὑποσχέσεις ἀνθ' ἡδονῆς ἡδονὴν ἀποδεδωκέναι ἔφη, εἰ μὲν οῦν ἐκάτερος τοῦτο ἐβούλετο, ἰκανῶς ᾶν εἶχεν εἰ δ' ὁ μὲν τέρψιν ὁ δὲ κέρδος, καὶ ὁ μὲν ἔχει ὁ δὲ μή, οὐκ ᾶν ἔιτ τὸ κατὰ τὴν κοινωνίαν καλῶς ὢν γὰρ δεόμενος τυγχάνει, τούτοις καὶ προσέχει, κὰκείνου γε χάριν ταῦτα δώσει. 5 τὴν ὰξίαν δὲ ποτέρου τάξαι ἐστί, τοῦ προϊεμένου ἡ τοῦ προλαβόντος; ὁ γὰρ προϊέμενος ἔοικ' ἐπιτρέπειν ἐκείνῳ. ὅπερ φασὶ καὶ Πρωταγόραν ποιεῖν ὅτε γὰρ διδάξειεν ἀδήποτε, τιμῆσαι τὸν μαθόντα ἐκέλευεν ὅσου δοκεῖ ἄξια ἐπί-

4 olov-έφη] 'As in the case of him who promises (a reward) to the harper, and "the better he sang, the more he should have," but when the man next morning demands the fulfilment of his promises, said that "he had paid pleasure for pleasure "' (i.e. the pleasure of hope for the pleasure of hearing music). The present tenses έπαγγελλόμενος, ἀπαιτοῦντι, seem to imply an oft-repeated and current story. The story itself is repeated by Plutarch (De Alexandri Fortuna, II. I), where the trick is attributed to Dionysius. Διονύσιος γούν ὁ τύραννος, ώς φασι, κιθαρφδού τινος εὐδοκιμούντος άκούων έπηγγείλατο δωρεάν αύτώ τάλαντον τη δ' ύστεραία του άνθρώπου την υπόσχεσιν άπαιτούντος ' χθές, είπεν, εύφραινόμενος ύπο σοῦ παρ' ον ήδες χρόνον, εύφρανα κάγώ σε ταϊς έλπίσιν ώστε τον μισθον ων έτερπες άπελάμβανες εὐθύς, άντιτερπόμενος.

ἄν γὰρ δεόμενο: --δώσει] 'For a man sets his mind on the things he happens to want, and for the sake of that he will give what he himself possesses,' The beginning of the sentence ( $\delta \nu \gamma \Delta \rho$   $\delta \epsilon \delta \mu \nu \sigma \sigma \rho$ ) is a general statement, the words  $\kappa \delta \kappa \epsilon \epsilon \ell \nu \sigma \sigma \sigma$  contain an application of the general statement to a particular case.

5 την άξιαν δέ-τοσούτον] 'But whose part is it to settle the value (of a benefit), -is it the part of the giver in the first instance, or of the recipient ? (One would say it was the part of him who was the recipient in the first instance), for the giver seems to leave it to the other. Which they mention Protagoras as doing, for whenever he taught anything he used to bid the learner estimate "how much worth he thinks he has learnt," and he used to take exactly so much.' ὁ προϊέμενος is used in a peculiar sense here to denote 'qui prior donum dedit,' in opposition to ὁ προλαβών (or ὁ προέχων, § 8), ' qui prior ab altero accepit.' Protagoras was said to be the first philosopher who taught for money. He probably found it not disadvantageous to assume a high and liberal attitude towards his pupils. On the wealth which he amassed by teaching, see Plato's Meno, p. 91 D, and above, Vol. I. Essay II. p. 119.

6-7 εν τοις τοιούτοις-έπιστανται] 'In such matters some like the principle of "a stated wage." Those, however, who take the money beforehand, and then do nothing of what they promised, are naturally blamed in consequence of their excessive promises, for they do not fulfil what they agreed. But this course the Sophists are perhaps obliged to adopt, because no one would be likely to give money for the things which they know.' Protagoras had no fixed price for his teaching; he left it to the pupil. But some people prefer having terms settled beforehand, μισθός είρημένος, as it is called in the line of Hesiod (Works and Days, v. 368): Mioobs 8' ανδρί φίλω είρημένος άρκιος έστω. It is the perversion of this when men take the money beforehand, and then fail in performing that which was paid for. The Sophists (says Aristotle with severe irony) are perhaps obliged to insist on payment beforehand, on account of the utter worthlessness of their teaching. Aristotle contrasts the conduct of Protagoras (of whom he speaks honourably) with that of 'the Sophists' after the profession had become regularly settled.

This phrase and καθ' αὐτούς are frequently used by Aristotle to characterise the highest kind of friendship, which is an 'absolute' feeling. Eth. VIII. iii. 1: οί μέν οθν διά το χρήσιμον φιλούντες άλλήλους οὐ καθ' αύτοὺς φιλοῦσιν, In the following section, ent rive, 'for some external object,' is contrasted with & abroos, 'that which looks to the personal character alone.' Aristotle, perhaps mindful of the twenty years which he passed in the school of Plato, places very highly the spiritual dignity of teaching in philosophy. After lowe, mounter that is to be understood.

For sometimes a man ought not even to lend money in return to one who has lent money to him. For he lent it to one who is good, thinking to get it back again, but the other does not hope to get it back again from a villain. If this be δπερ γάρ ἐν ἀρχῷ] This observation, that 'differences arise when men are not really friends to each other in the way they think,' has never been exactly made before. The commentators variously refer us to Eth. VIII. iii. 3, VIII. iv. 1, and 1x. i. 4, none of which passages correspond.

κιβδηλεύουσω] To counterfeit friendship, says Aristotle, is worse than counterfeiting the coinage. The comentators quote Theognis, vv. 119 sqq., where the same maxim occurs.

3 ούτε δὲ φιλητέον πονηρὸν ούτε δεῖ The MSS. vary extremely about the reading of this passage, in which there is evidently something wrong. ούτε δεῖ is at all events an interpolation. Fritzsche thinks that the whole is a double gloss upon φιλοπόνηρον.

VI. I: ἐπεὶ δ' ἢσαν τρεῖς οὐσίαι. Eth. III. V. 3: τοῦτο δ' ἢν τὸ ἀγαθοῖς καὶ κακοῖς εἶναι. V. i. I2: ἐπεὶ δ' ὁ παράνομος ἄδικος ἢν, &c. Aristotle is here referring to Eth. VIII. iii. 9; VIII. V. 3.

IV. 1 δπερ αl μητέρες—προσκεκρουκότες] 'Which mothers feel towards their children, and which friends who have had a rupture (feel towards each other),' i.e. they quite disinterestedly, since in the latter case intercourse is precluded, wish each other to live. On the disinterested feeling of mothers, cf. Eth. VIII. viii. 3. On the use of προσκρούευ, cf. Politica, II. v. 4: οἱ πλεῖστοι διαφερόμενοι ἐκ τῶν ἐν ποσὶ καὶ ἐκ μικρῶν προσκρούοντες ἀλλήλοις. ἔτι δὲ τῶν θερακώντων τούτοις μάλιστα προσκρούομεν, οἶς πλεῖστα προσχρώμεθα πρὸς τὰς διακονίας τὰς ἐγκυκλίους.

'For, as we have said, virtue and the good man are the standard for everything.' Cf. Eih. III. iv. 5; X, V, IO.

explain άλλ' ών δ τι ποτ' ἐστίν to refer to the unchangeableness or to the personality of God. If the passage be read as above, it will be seen that the words ar 8 TI WOT' forth are in opposition to γενόμενος δ' άλλος. Aristotle says that to every man his personality is what is dear to him; he would not relinquish this to gain all the world, for by relinquishing it he would not gain anything. With a changed personality, he would no more possess any good thing, than he now possesses it because God possesses all good. All his wishes are made on the basis of being still what he is. The good man, who fosters his thinking faculty, most of all takes care of his proper self.

<sup>4</sup> έκαστος δ' έαυτώ βούλεται-μάλιστα] 'But every man wishes what is good for himself. No one, on condition of becoming another man, chooses that that new thing, which he should become, should possess everything (for God has now all good); but (every man desires to possess what is good) remaining his present self. And the thinking faculty would appear to be each man's proper self, or more so than anything else.' The usual punctuation of this passage has been altered to obtain the above translation, which has been suggested to the annotator, and which seems to give a more natural explanation of the text than has been arrived at by the commentators, who universally

6 πρός αύτον δέ-όμοιοῦται] 'But whether friendship towards oneself is, or is not, possible, we may leave undecided for the present. It would seem to be possible in so far as two or more of the above-mentioned conditions exist, and because the extreme of friendship resembles one's feelings towards oneself.' Several commentators explain ή έστι δύο ή πλείω to mean 'in so far as man consists of two or more parts,' and ἐκ τῶν εἰρημένων they would translate 'in accordance with what we have before said,' referring to Eth. I. xiii. 9. In this sense the passage would be a parallel one to Eth. v. xi. q. But it is clear from the next section that ex των είρημένων refers to the definitions of friendship, given in § I of this chapter. ἀφείσθω is used as in Eth. VIII. i. 7, VIII. viii. 7. We are not here referred to the subsequent discussion in Eth. IX. viii., where by no means the same subject is renewed. .

8 Σχεδὸν δὲ οὐδὲ τοῦς φαίλοις ἐαντούς i But one might almost say that these things do not appertain to the bad at all. For they are at variance with themselves, and desire one set of things while they wish another, just like the incontinent; instead of what seems to them to be good, they choose the pleasant though it is hurtful; and others through cowardice and want of spirit abstain from doing what they think to be best for themselves; and they who through wickedness have committed many crimes hate their life, and fly from it, and put an end to themselves.' The 'desire' of the wicked, as being of the particular and subject to the domination of the senses (Eth. VII. iii. 9), is at variance with their 'wish,' which is of the universal and implies a conception of the good. Cf. Eth. v. ix. 6, VIII. xiii. 8. The description of bad men given here ignores and is at variance with the conclusions of Book VII. In that book the strength, and here the weakness, of vice is represented. Thus in Eth. VII. viii. the bad man is described as unrepentant, abiding by his purpose (§ 1), having the major premiss of his mind corrupted (§ 4), and therefore having no wish for the good, even in the universal. The account in Book VII., which makes drohaola or abandoned vice free from all weakness, is more theoretical and less drawn from nature than the above description. All that is said here has a close relation to, and was probably suggested by, the words in the Lysis of Plato, p. 214 0 : τούς δέ κακούς, δπερ και λέγεται

If it is not possible to feel pain and pleasure at the same moment, at all events after a little while (the bad man) is pained that he felt pleasure, and he "could have wished that those pleasures had not happened to him; "for the wicked are full of repentance." This picture of the mental struggles of the bad does not recall either the phraseology or the doctrines of Book VII., where μοχθηρία is contrasted with, and opposed to, ἀκρασία (cf. VII. VIII. 1). The metaphor στασιάζει occurs repeatedly in Plato's Republic, cf. I. p. 352 A: (ή ἀδικία) ἐν ἐνὶ—ἐνοῦσα—πρῶτον μὲν ἀδῦνατον αὐτὸν πράττειν ποιήσει στασιάζοντα καὶ οὐτὸ ὑμονοοῦντα αὐτὸν σάντὸς, ἐπειτα ἐχθρὸν καὶ ἐαυτῷ καὶ τοῦς δικαίος. Cf. Εἰλ. I. xiii. 15.

good-will is like friendship, but yet it is not friendship, for good-will is exercised both towards unknown persons, and when its own existence is unknown (to the object), which is not the case with friendship. But all this has been said already. It is not even the same as loving: for it exhibits neither violence nor longing, which are the accompaniments of loving.' The Saxon word 'Good-will,' and not the Latin 'Benevolence,' which is too abstract and general, is the representative of eovoia. Good-will, says Aristotle, is engendered by the appearance of noble qualities; it is rapidly conceived, but is passive in its character, and is only the prelude offriendship. There being no correspondent adjective to the substantive 'Good-will,' we must express edvot by 'Well-disposed.' Just as in Eth. III, the cognate faculties to Purpose, and in Eth. vr. the cognate qualities to Thought are discussed, so Aristotle here introduces a discussion of the feelings which are cognate to Friendship.

2 ἡ δ' εδνοια — συμβαίνει] While loving implies acquaintance and familiarity, good-will is conceived instantaneously; thus men conceive goodwill towards particular competitors in the games from their appearance, and are inclined to wish them success.

3 Good-will, says Aristotle, is the prelude of Friendship, just as the pleasure of the eye is the prelude of love. This however does not constitute love. The test of love is longing for a person in absence. Cf. Ar. Rhet. I. xi. II: where the same test is given. In accordance with the unhappy notions of the Greeks, drivra is here put in the masculine gender.

ή διά τ ής δψεως] In Plato's Cratylue, p. 420 A, it is suggested that "Ερωσ is derived from είσρεῖν.... "Ερως δτι είσρεῖ ξέωθεν και οόκ οίκεἰα έστιν ή μόη αδτη τῷ ἔχοντι, ἀλλ' ἐπείσακτος διά τῶν ὁμμάτων, διά ταῦτα ἀπό τοῦ είσρεῖν ἔσρος τό γε παλαιὸν ἐκαλεῖτο. Cf. Shakspeare, Merchant of Venice, Act. III. Sc. ii.

And Romeo and Juliet, Act I. Sc. iii.

ού την διά τὸ χρήσιμον] 'Good-will' is essentially disinterested in its character.

4 This is a picture of the discord produced by evil passions, where every one grasping at the larger share in good things, and shirking his part in labours and services, watches (ἐξετάζει) his neighbour to prevent him encroaching. Thus men force each other to do what is right, while unwilling to do it themselves.

VII. Aristotle says, it is noticed as something extraordinary (ών παρὰ λόγρν ἐπιζητείται) that benefactors seem to love those to whom they have done a kindness more than the benefited persons love them. The common explanation of the paradox λόγον γινόμενον επιζητείται. τοίς μεν οθν πλείστοις φαίνεται, ότι οι μεν οφείλουσι τοις δε οφείλεται καθάπερ ουν έπὶ των δανείων οι μεν οφείλοντες βούλονται μή είναι οίς οφείλουσιν, οί δε δανείσαντες και επιμέλονται της των οφειλόντων σωτηρίας, ούτω και τους ευεργετήσαντας βούλεσθαι είναι τούς παθόντας ώς κομιουμένους τὰς χάριτας, τοῖς δ' οὐκ εἶναι ἐπιμελές τὸ ἀνταποδοῦναι. is, that benefactors look forward to obtaining a return for their kindness, they thus cherish the persons of those who are indebted to them. This selfish theory views mankind on the dark side (ἐκ πονηροῦ θεωμένους), but is not altogether devoid of truth. A deeper (φυσικώτερον) reason, however, may be assigned for the phenomenon in question, namely, that as we can only be said to exist when we are conscious of our vital powers (ἐσμἐν ἐνεργεία), so anything which gives or increases the sense of those powers is dear to us. The benefited person stands to the benefactor in the relation of a work to the artist, he is an exponent of the benefactor's self, and is thus regarded with feelings of affection, as being associated by the benefactor with the sense of his own existence (στέργει δή τὸ ξργον, διότι και τὸ είναι). These feelings, of course, cannot be reciprocated by the benefited person. Again, the benefactor associates an idea of the beautiful (τὸ καλόν) with the recipient of his good deeds; the other associates with him only an idea of the profitable, and this is a less loveable idea, especially when viewed in the past, and become a matter of memory. Again, the active part taken by the benefactor has more affinity to the active principle of loving.

'Επίχαρμος] The words έκ πονηροῦ θεωμένους seem to have been taken 4 ποιήματα, στέργοντες ισπερ τέκνα. τοιούτιο δη ἔοικε καὶ τὸ τῶν εὐεργετῶν· τὸ γὰρ εὖ πεπονθὸς ἔργον ἐστὶν αὐτῶν· τοῦτο δη ἀγαπῶσι μαλλον ἡ τὸ ἔργον τὸν ποιήσαντα. τοὐτου δ' αἴτιον ὅτι τὸ εἶναι πάσιν αἰρετὸν καὶ φιλητόν, ἐσμὲν δ' ἐνεργεία τῷ ζῆν γὰρ καὶ πράττειν. ἐνεργεία δὴ ὁ ποιήσας τὸ ἔργον ἔστι πως· στέργει δὴ τὸ ἔργον, διότι καὶ τὸ εἶναι. τοῦτο δὲ φυσικόν· ὁ γάρ ἐστι δυνάμει, τοῦτο ἐνεργεία τὸ ἔργον μηνύει. ἄμα δὲ καὶ τῷ μὲν εὐεργέτη καλὸν τὸ κατὰ τὴν πρᾶξιν, ιστε χαίρειν ἐν ῷ τοῦτο, τῷ δὲ παθόντι οὐθὲν καλὸν ἐν τῷ δράσαντι, ἀλλ' 6 εἴπερ, συμφέρον· τοῦτο δ' ῆττον ἡδὺ καὶ φιλητόν. ἡδεία δ' ἐστὶ τοῦ μὲν παρόντος ἡ ἐνέργεια, τοῦ δὲ μέλλοντος ἡ ἐνέης, τοῦ δὲ γεγενημένου ἡ μνήμη. ἤδιστον δὲ τὸ κατὰ

out of some iambic or trochaic verse of the Sicilian poet, but the verse itself has not been preserved.

4 τοιούτω δη-μηνύει] 'The case of benefactors seems then something of the same kind. For the object benefited is their "work;" they love this therefore more than the work loves him who made it. The cause of this is that existence is desired and loved by all, but we exist by consciousness, that is to say, by living and acting. Thus he who has made the work in question exists consciously, and therefore he loves the work, because he loves his existence. And this is a principle of nature; for that which exists potentially, the work proves to exist actually.' On this mode of paraphrasing evépyeta, see Vol. I. Essay IV. Any work of art, or creation of the mind, or moral achievement, is here said to show us externally to ourselves. It causes us to exist everyela, that is, not only in ourselves, but for ourselves. It thus becomes a union of the objective and the subjective. And this philosophical principle explains a whole class of homogeneous facts, not only the feelings of benefactors towards the benefited, but of poets towards their poems, of parents, and especially mothers, towards their children; and of those who have made fortunes towards their property. These facts were brought together, without being analysed, by Plato, cf. Republic, p. 330 B-C. Cf. Eth. IV. i. 20.

ένεργεία δὴ—πω:] Many commentators understand these words to mean 'Therefore by means of conscious activity the maker is in a sense his work,' in which they are supported by Eustratius and the Paraphrast. This would not materially alter the general drift of the passage.

6 ήδεία δ' ἐστὶ—μνήμη] 'Now of the present the living reality is sweet, of the future the hope, of the past the memory.' In two clauses of this sentence subjective words are used (ἐλπίς and μνήμη), but ἐνέργεια in the remaining clause hovers between the objective and the subjective. Cf. Ar. De Memoria, i. 4, where αἰσθησις is used in an analogous sentence: τοῦ μὲν παρόντος (ἐστὶν) αἰσθησις, τοῦ δὲ μελλοντος ἐλπίς, τοῦ δὲ γενομένου μνήμη.

VIII. In this interesting chapter, Aristotle discusses the difficulty as to 'whether one ought to love oneself especially, or some one else.' On the one hand, 'self-loving' is used as a term of reproach; on the other hand, one's feelings towards oneself are made the standard for one's feelings towards These two points of view require reconciliation, which may be effected by a distinction of terms. For the word 'self' has two senses-the lower and the higher self, the one consisting in appetites and passions, the other in the intellect and the higher moral faculties. He that gratifies his lower self at the expense of others is 'self-loving' in the bad sense of the term. He that ministers to his higher VOL. II.

self promotes at the same time the good of others, and is worthy of all praise. Such self-love as this may lead a man even to die for his friends or for his country. A man, grasping at the noble, may give up honour, power, life itself; and thus the greatest self-sacrifice will be identical with the greatest self-love. These considerations show in what sense one ought, and in what sense one ought not, to 'love oneself.'

ix. 4-5. But we may particularly note here the delicacy of thought which suggests that the good man may on occasion give up to his friend the doing of noble acts, and thus acquire to himself a still greater nobility. A comparison is sometimes instituted between the φιλαυτία of Aristotle and the 'self-love' of Bishop Butler. But the 'self-love' described by Butler is a creeping quality; it deals with means rather than with ends, and considers the 'interest' of man in this world or the next. Aristotle's φιλαυτία is simply a devotion to what is great and noble.

IX. Does the happy man, who is all-sufficient in himself, need friends or not ≀ To prove the affirmative of this question, Aristotle uses the following arguments:—

I A priori, we might assume that, as happiness is the sum of all human goods, the possession of friends, one of the greatest of external goods, would necessarily be included (§ 2).

<sup>2</sup> Friends will be required by the happy man, not so much as the givers, but rather as the recipients, of kindness.

<sup>4</sup> Those who take the negative side in the question have an unworthy conception of friends, as persons affording profit or pleasure. The happy man is almost independent of such (§ 4), but yet he may want friends in a higher sense. Happiness consists in the play of life (*bepyeaa), and he that sees before his eyes the virtuous acts of a friend has a delightful sense of the play of life, seeing harmonious action and identifying it with himself (ἐπιεικεῖς καὶ οἰκείας, § 5).

5 Again, the sympathy and excitement of friends enables a man to prolong that vivid action and glow of the mind which is the essence of happiness (§§ 5-6).

6 It also confirms him in the practice of virtue (§§ 6-7).

7 Finally, a deeper reason may be assigned for the necessity of friends to the happy man; it depends on our love of life. That sympathetic consciousness (συναισθάνεσθαι) which we have of a friend's existence, by means of intercourse with him, is, only in a secondary degree (παραπλήσιον), the same as the sense of our own existence.

I αὐτάρκεσιν] The quality αὐτάρκεια is claimed for happiness, Ετλ, Ι. vii. 6, where Aristotle guards himself against the supposition that it implies a louely life, and where he promises to return to the subject. τὸ τὰρ τέλειον ἀταρκες εἶναι δοκεῖ. τὸ δ΄ αὐταρκες λέγοιεν οὐκ αὐτῷ μόνη τῷ ζῷντι βίων μονώτην' κ.τ.λ. 'Αλλὰ τοῦτο μέν εἰσαῦθίες ἐπισκεπτέον.

2 ἀπονέμοντας] 'Us who allot;' cf. Eth. I. vii. 3, where happiness is said to be τέλειόν τι και αδταρκες. The form of expression here used is similar to that in Eth. I. x. 2: "Η τοῦτό γε παντελῶς ἄτοπον, ἄλλως τε καὶ τοῖς λέγουσιν ἡμῶν ἐνέργειὰν τινα τὴν εὐδαιμουίαν;

4 ἐπεισάκτον ἡδονῆε] 'Adventitious pleasure,' 'pleasure introduced from without;' cf. Eth. 1. viii. 12: οὐδὲν δὴ προσδεῖται τῆς ἡδονῆς ὁ βίος αὐτῶν ιῶσπερ περιάπτον τυός, ἀλλ' ἔχει τὴν ἡδονὴν ἐν ἐαυτῷ. Cf. Kth. x. vii. 3. The word ἐπείσακτος occurs in Plato's Cratylus, p. 420 B, quoted above in the note on Ix. v. 3.

5 ἐν ἀρχŷ-ράον] 'For we said at the outset (Eth. L. vii. 14) that happiness is a kind of vital action, and it is plain that this arises in us, and does not exist in us like a possession. But if being happy consists in the play of life, and the actions of the good man are good and essentially pleasurable, as we said before (Eth. I. viii. 13), and also the sense of a thing being identified with oneself is one of the sources of pleasure, but we are able to contemplate our neighbours better than ourselves, and their actions better than our own, then the actions of good men being their friends are pleasurable to the good; for (such actions) contain both the two elements that are essentially pleasurable. The supremely happy man then will require friends of this character, if he wishes to contemplate actions which are good and also identified with himself: and such are the actions of the good man being his friend. Again, men think that the happy man ought to live pleasurably, whereas life is painful to the solitary man, for by oneself it is difficult to maintain long a vivid state of the mind, but with others and in relation to others this is easier.'

ἄμφω γὰρ ἔχουσι] Some of the commentators take ἄμφω as though it were the nominative case to ἔχουσι, and meant 'both the good man and φίλων τοιούτων δεήσεται, είπερ θεωρείν προαιρείται πράξεις επιεικείς καὶ οἰκείας· τοιαῦται δ' αὶ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ φίλου όντος. οιονταί τε δείν ήδεως ζην τον ευδαίμονα: μονώτη μεν οὖν χαλεπός ὁ βίος οὐ γὰρ ράδιον καθ' αὐτὸν ένεργείν συνεχώς, μεθ' έτέρων δε και προς άλλους ράον. έσται οὖν ή ἐνέργεια συνεχεστέρα, ήδεῖα οὖσα καθ' αὐτήν, 6 ο δεί περί τον μακάριον είναι ο γάρ σπουδαίος, ή σπουδαίος, ταίς κατ' άρετην πράξεσι χαίρει, ταίς δ' άπὸ κακίας δυσχεραίνει, καθάπερ ο μουσικός τοις καλοίς μέλεσιν ήδεται, ἐπὶ δὲ τοῖς φαύλοις λυπείται, γίνοιτο δ' αν καὶ 7 άσκησίς τις της άρετης έκ τοῦ συζην τοῖς άγαθοῖς, καθάπερ καὶ Θέογνίς φησιν. φυσικώτερον δ' επισκοπούσιν ξοικεν ο σπουδαίος φίλος τῷ σπουδαίω τη φύσει αίρετὸς είναι τὸ γὰρ τη φύσει ἀγαθὸν είρηται ὅτι τῷ σπουδαίω αγαθον και ήδύ έστι καθ' αυτό το δε ζην ορίζονται τοις ζώρις δυνάμει αισθήσεως, ανθρώποις δ' αισθήσεως ή νοήσεως.

his friend.' But it would be irrelevant to speak of the feelings of the friend. The question is, what advantage does the happy man get out of having friends? Δμφω here evidently applies to τὰ τŷ φύσει ἡδέα, as is further proved by the words ἐπιεικεῖς καὶ οἰκείας in the next sentence; it refers to what has gone before, τοῦ δ' ἀγαθοῦ —οἰκείον τῶν ἡδέων.

6-7 δ γάρ σπουδαίος-φησιν] The good man, feeling the same sort of pleasure in the moral acts reciprocated between himself and his friend which the musical man feels in good music, will prolong and enjoy that reciprocation, and, as Theognis says, 'will learn what is good by associating with the good.' The advantage here attributed to friendship is that, by adding the element of pleasure to the best functions of our nature, it assists and develops them. Cf. Eth. x. v. 2: συναύξει γάρ την ενέργειαν ή olkela ήδονή - όμοιως δέ και οι φιλόμουσοι και φιλοικοδόμοι καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἔκαστοι ἐπιδιδόασιν els τὸ οἰκεῖον ἔργον χαίροντες αὐτῷ.

7 τὸ δὲ ζην-νοείν] 'People define "living" in the case of animals by the power of sensation, in the case of men by the power of sensation or thought. But the word "power" has its whole meaning in reference to the exercise of that power, and the distinctive part of the conception lies in the "exercise." Thus the act of living appears distinctively to be an act of perceiving or thinking.' The train of reasoning in this latter part of the chapter is, that life consists in consciousness; life is good and sweet; consciousness is intensified, and life therefore is made better and sweeter, by intercourse with friends.

τοῖς ζψοις] On the ascending scale of life from the plant to the man, cf. De Anima, 11. iii. I-9, Eth. I. vii. 12, and Vol. I. Essay V. p. 295.

διόπερ ἔοικε πᾶσιν ἡδιὸ εΙναι] 'Wherefore it appears to be sweet to all,' i.e. of course ordinary individuals love life, in which there is a certain physical sweetness; cf. Ar. Ρολίτιες, III. vi. 5: Δῆλον δ' ὡς καρτεροθοι πολλήν κακοπάθειαν οΙ πολλοί τῶν ἀνθρώπων γλιχόμενοι τοῦ ζῆν, ὡς ἐνούσης πουὸ εὐημερίας ἐν αὐτῷ καὶ γλικότητος ψυσικῆς. This Greek view of the sweetness of life contrasts with the philosophy of the Hindoos, which represents life as a burden, and individuality as a curse.

8 Οὐ δεῖ δὲ—φανερώτερον] 'But one must not take (as an instance) a vicious and corrupt life, nor one in pain; for such a life is unharmonised, like its characteristics. In the following discourse the nature of pain will be made more clear.'

άδριστος] 'Unlimited;' 'without law, balance, order, harmony.' On the use made by Aristotle of this Pythagorean formula, see Eth. II. vi. 14, and Vol. I. Essay IV. pp. 252-257.

† Έν τοῖς ἐχομένοις] This must be, after all (see Vol. I. p. 49), undoubtedly an interpolation. The editor probably had in his mind a confused reference to x. iii. 2.

9 El δ' αὐτὸ τὸ ζῆν ἀγαθὸν] This is the beginning of a complex protasis, which goes on prolonging itself, ὁ δ' ὁρῶν—τὸ δ' ὅτι αἰσθανόμεθα, &c., till at last it finds its apodosis in § 10; καθάπερ οὖν τὸ αὐτὸν εἶναι αἰρετὸν ἐστιν ἐκάστιρ, οὕτω καὶ τὸ τὸν φίλον, ἡ παραπλησίων.

But this (perceiving) that we perceive or think, is perceiving that we exist; for existing, as we said (§ 7), consists in perceiving or thinking.' ἐνεργοῦμεν is here used in a purely objective sense; the ἐνέργεα is here distinguished from the consciousness which necessarily accompanies it, and with ing in the same spot.' This view of the importance of 'intercourse,' and of the advantages to be derived from it, is repeated and summarised in ch. xii., and forms the conclusion of the treatise.

X. The question of the plurality of friends is brought under analysis in this chapter. The number of one's friends for use or for pleasure is shown to be limited by convenience. The number of one's friends, properly so called, is shown to be limited by one's μηδέ πολύξεινον μηδ' άξεινον καλέεσθαι.

The line is untranslateable into English, as we have no word (like the German Gastfreund) to express both 'host' and guest,' as ξένος does.

2 This section may be said to retract, upon further consideration, what was admitted, Εth. vIII. vi. 3: Διά τὸ χρήσιμον δὲ καὶ τὸ ἡδῦ πολλοῦ αρέσκειν ἐνδέχεται * πολλοὶ γὰρ οἱ τοιστοι, καὶ ἐν δλίγω γρόψο αἱ ὑπηρερίαι.

3 ούτε γάρ-πόλις έστίν] 'For a state could not consist of ten men, nor again if consisting of a hundred thousand does it still continue to be a state.' This extremely limited idea of the size of a state is based on the Greek notion that each citizen must personally take part in the administration of affairs. On this hypothesis, a state consisting of a hundred thousand citizens might easily appear unwieldy. Aristotle in the Politics, VII. iv. 9, represents the state as an organism of limited size: έστι τι και πόλεσι μεγέθους μέτρον, ώσπερ και των άλλων πάντων, ζώων, φυτών, δργάνων και γάρ τούτων ξκαστον ούτε λίαν μικρόν ούτε κατά μέγεθος ύπερβάλλον έξει την αύτοῦ δύναμιν, κ.τ.λ.

which Aristotle compares to the feeling between brothers, is much more akin to the perfect and ideal friendship than it is to either of the lower forms of friendship (for gain or for pleasure). It is essentially based on personal considerations (δι' αὐτούν), though not necessarily on moral considerations (δι' ἀρετήν).

αl δ' ύμνούμεναι] Fritzsche quotes Plutarch, De Am. Mult. 2: τόν μακρόν και παλαιόν αίωνα μάρτυρα ἄμα τοῦ λόγου καὶ σύμβουλον λάβωμεν, ἐν ῷ κατὰ ζεῦγος φιλίας λέγονται Θησεύς καὶ Πειριθους, 'Αχιλλεύς καὶ Πάτροκλος, 'Ορέστης καὶ Πυλάδης, Φυντίας καὶ Δάμων, 'Επαμινώνδας καὶ Πελοπίδας.

XI. The question whether friends are most needed in adversity or prosperity is here answered by saying, that in adversity friendship is more necessary, and in prosperity more beautiful. Some remarks are added on the exact operation of friendship in alleviating sorrow, and some practical rules are deduced.

4 καν μη ύπερτείνη τη άλυπίαθρηνητικός] 'And (such a one), unless he be excessively impassive, cannot endure the pain which is brought upon them; and altogether he does not like sympathetic wailers, not being given to wailing himself.' The words κάν μή κ.τ.λ. have troubled the commentators. The Paraphrast explains them as if meaning :- 'And unless (the sympathetic presence of friends) be exceedingly painless to them.' But evidently the clause is brought in in reference to ol ἀνδρώδεις. 'Manly natures' are not at all unlikely to be somewhat blunt and callous, and deficient in sensibility for the feelings of others. One might almost fancy that

XII. In conclusion, the best thing in friendship is—intercourse. This gives vividness to the pursuits of life; and when good men have intercourse with each other, they mutually strengthen and increase the good that is in them.

I ἡ δ' ἐνέργεια γίνεται αὐτοῖς ἐν τῷ συξῆν] 'But it is by living together that they attain the fulness of life.' The word ἐνέργεια here has evident reference to ἡ αἴσθησις ὅτι ἔστιν in the preceding sentence. Zell and Cardwell follow some of the MSS. in reading αὐτῆς, i.e. τῆς αἰσθήσεως. But ἡ ἐνἐργεια stands naturally alone (cf. Eth. IX. ix. 6), meaning 'the vivid sense of life.' And a similar collocation occurs Eth. VIII. iii. 5: γΙνεται γὰρ αὐτοῖς τὸ κατὰ φιλίαν οῦτως.

3 κοινωνοῦσι γὰρ—ἀλλήλοις] 'For, being of an unstable nature, they have fellowship in evil, and become bad by assimilation to each other.' Cf. Eth. IX. i. 7: τοῦς φιλοσοφίας κοινωνήσασιν. The word ἀβέβαιοι here is not connected with the use of βέβαιοι το μὲν βέβαιον ούν έχουσιν. Aristotle is not talking here of the instability of the friendship between bad men, but of its evil results mutually. Throughout the treatise on Friendship

γίνονται ὁμοιούμενοι ἀλλήλοις· ἡ δὲ τῶν ἐπιεικῶν ἐπιεικής, συναυξανομένη ταῖς ὁμιλίαις· δοκοῦσι δὲ καὶ βελτίους γίνεσθαι ἐνεργοῦντες καὶ διορθοῦντες ἀλλήλους· ἀπομάττονται γὰρ παρ' ἀλλήλων οἷς ἀρέσκονται, ὅθεν

he speaks of the weakness of vice (cf. note on IX. iv. 9), and here he says that bad men, from the weakness and instability of their natures, imbibe evil example.

ἀπομάττονται — ἀρέσκονται] 'For they take the stamp of one another in those things which they like.' Cf. Aristophanes, Ranæ, v. 1040:

δθεν ή 'μη φρην άπομαξαμένη πολλάς άρετας έποίησεν.

ἐσθλῶν μέν γὰρ] On this passage of Theognis, which is referred to above, Eth. IX. ix. 7, see Vol. I. Essay II. p. 93. It is after Aristotle's manner to end a treatise with a line of poetry; cf. Metaphysics, XI. X. 14, where the book ends with the verse

Οὐκ ἀγαθὸν πολυκοιρανίη' εἶς κοίρανος ἔστω,

Accordingly the unnecessary paragraph  $\pi\epsilon\rho l$   $\mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu$   $\sigma \dot{\nu} \nu$   $\phi \iota \lambda l as \kappa.\tau.\lambda$ . is probably the interpolation of an editor.

PLAN OF BOOK X.

THIS book,—beginning with a treatise on Pleasure (which subject is introduced (1) because of its connection with Morals; (2) because of the controversies about it), and rising from the critical examination of extreme views to Aristotle's own theory of Pleasure, namely, that it is the sense of the vital functions, or, in other words, of the harmonious action of some one faculty—proceeds, almost without transition, to declare that Happiness in the truest sense of the term must consist in the action of the highest faculty, and that, this highest faculty being Reason, Philosophy must, beyond all comparison with anything else, whether idle amusement, or even the exercise of the moral virtues, constitute Happiness, or that Practical Chief Good which is the end of Man, and the province of the ethical branch of Politics.

Thus far this branch of Science, having obtained a definite conception, might be thought to be complete. But it still remains, says Aristotle, to ask whether something cannot be added towards its practical realisation, and, as habits of life are clearly necessary for the attainment of human excellence, on which the Chief Good depends, it follows that we shall require such domestic institutions as may be favourable to the cultivation of human excellence. These institutions, whether of public or private ordinance, can only be rightly conceived after a scientific study of the principles of Legislation, i.e. of Politics in its highest form. To this, then, Aristotle proposes to address himself, considering it to be a branch of science which has hitherto been neglected. He roughly sketches out the plan of his works on Politics, with a transition to which the ethical treatise concludes.

This tenth book then shows us the Ethics as a rounded whole. It is written in close connection with Book I. (cf. X. vi. 1), and it sums up referentially the contents of Books I. II. III. IV. VIII. IX. But while the Ethics are thus rounded off in their beginning and end, and as to part of their contents, it is clear on the other hand that they contain a lacuna which has been artificially filled up.

It is very significant that the present book makes no reference to the contents of Books V. VI. VII.; and it seems impossible to avoid thinking that Aristotle wrote the conclusion to his ethical treatise at a time when he had not as yet composed certain parts which were meant to be introduced into it. Whether he afterwards ever composed those parts in literary form, or whether he merely gave materials for them in his oral discourses, we have now no means of knowing. That Books V. VI. and VII. were not actually composed by Aristotle we have seen many reasons for believing.

I. The treatise on Pleasure opens analogously to that on the Voluntary (Eth. III. i. 1), and that on Friendship (VIII. i. 1, 6), justifying the introduction of the subject, (1) as connected with Ethics, (2) as having been made matter of controversy.

διὸ παιδεύουσι κ.τ.λ.] This is all taken from Plato's Laws, II. p. 653. See note on Eth. II. iii. 2, where the passage is quoted.

πρὸς τὴν τοῦ ήθους ἀρετὴν] Some MSS. read ἀρχὴν, which it is strange that the commentators should have thought a natural reading, supported by at μέν τῆς φρονήσεως ἀρχαί (below, viii. 3). Because φρόνησες is regarded by Aristotle as a syllogism, or set of syllogisms, having ἀρχαί or major premisses,—it does not follow that the phrase ἡ τοῦ ἤθους ἀρχή is admissible.

2 οΙ μὸν γὰρ—μέσον] 'For some call pleasure the chief good, others on the contrary call it exceedingly evil, (of these latter) some perhaps believing it to be so, but others thinking it for the interests of morality to declare pleasure to be an evil, even if it be not so, because most men incline towards it, and are enslaved to pleasures, and so one ought to lead men in the opposite direction, for thus they will arrive at the mean.'

In all probability Aristotle here alludes immediately to two sections of the Platonists, (1) the party represented by Eudoxus, whose arguments are quoted; (2) that headed by Speusippus, whose anti-hedonistic arguments were contained in two books mentioned by Diogenes Laertius, under the titles Περί ἡδονης α' · 'Αρίστιππος a', and which are now passed under review. Under the class of those who 'call pleasure the chief good,' Aristotle less directly refers to Aristippus, who, though he belonged to a bygone era, still lived in the pages of Plato's Philebus, and in the book of Speusippus bearing his name.

¿λθείν γὰρ—μέσον] Cf. Eth. ii. ix. 5, where it is said that by going counter to one's natural bias one may attain the mean. Aristotle does not approve of this being done by means of a sacrifice of truth.

ό γὰρ ψέγων-πολλῶν] 'For he who blames pleasure (unreservedly), and yet is seen occasionally desiring it, is thought to incline towards it as being altogether good; for ordinary persons cannot discriminate.' τοιαύτην here, as τοιούτος does frequently in Aristotle, takes its sense from the context. Cf. Eth. VIII. vi. 6, x. ii. 4, &c. From what is above stated we learn that, the decline of philosophy having commenced, some of the Platonists enunciated theories which were meant to be practically useful, rather than true. Thus they overstated what they believed to be the truth about pleasure, in order to counteract men's universal tendency towards it. Aristotle 'doubts whether this is good policy.' Their whole theory is likely to be upset by their occasionally indulging in the higher kinds of pleasure.

2 Εὔδοξος μὲν οὖν τὴν ἡδονὴν τὰγαθὸν ὅετ' εἶναι διὰ τὸ πὰνθ' ὁρῶν ἐφιέμενα αὐτῆς, καὶ ἔλλογα καὶ ἄλογα ἐν πῶσι δ' εἶναι τὸ αἰρετὸν ἐπιεικές, καὶ τὸ μάλιστα κράτιστον τὸ δὴ πάντ' ἐπὶ ταὐτὸ φέρεσθαι μηνύειν ὡς πῶσι τοῦτο ἄριστον ἔκαστον γὰρ τὸ αὐτῷ ἀγαθὸν εὐρίσκειν, ώσπερ καὶ τροφήν τὸ δὴ πῶσιν ἀγαθὸν, καὶ οῦ πάντ' ἐφίεται, τὰγαθὸν εἶναι. ἐπιστεύοντο δ' οἱ λόγοι διὰ τὴν τοῦ ἤθους ἀρετὴν μῶλλον ἡ δι' αὐτούς διαφερόντως γὰρ

II. This chapter contains the grounds on which Eudoxus 'used to think that pleasure is the chief good;' and an examination of three objections, which had been started to those reasonings. The arguments of Eudoxus are: (1) that all things seek pleasure; (2) that pain is essentially (καθ' αὐτό) an object of aversion, and therefore pleasure, its contrary, must be essentially an object of desire : (3) that pleasure is always desired as an end-in-itself, and not as a means to anything; (4) that pleasure when added to any other good makes it more desirable. The objections to these arguments are: (1) the opinion of Plato (which serves as an objection to argument 4th), that the chief good must be incapable of being added to any other good, and so made better. This objection Aristotle allows as valid. (2) An objection to the 1st argument, probably suggested by Plato's Philebus, p. 67, and repeated by Speusippus,-that the testimony of irrational creatures is of no value. This objection is disallowed. (3) The counter-argument of Speusippus to the 2nd argument of Eudoxus,-that not pleasure, but the neutral state, is the true contrary to pain. This is refuted.

I τὸ αἰρετὸν ἐπιεικές] We have here a quotation of the very words of Eudoxus. In § 4, Aristotle generally approves of the present argument. His whole conclusion is to be found Eth. X. iii. 13:—that Eudoxus was more right than his opponents, but wrong in not discriminating between the different kinds of pleasure, and in going so far as to say that pleasure is the chief good. The term To alperby, in opposition to τὸ φευκτόν, seems to have played a great part in the reasonings of Eudoxus. It is admitted by Plato, Philebus, p. 20, as a necessary attribute of the chief good, and so also by Aristotle, Eth. r. vii. 8; x. ii. 4. Here it is implied in the word έφιέμενα. It appears simply to mean 'that which is a reasonable object of desire,' cf. Eth. VIII. viii. 2: ἡ φιλία καθ' αὐτὴν αίρετή, and X. iii. 13, ήδονή οὐ πᾶσα αίρετή. As implying will and choice, it is applicable in a relative, as well as an absolute sense, to means as well as to ends. Book III. of the Topics contains hints on the method of dealing with this term, and throws light on its use, which fluctuates between a reference to the good, the useful, and the pleasant (cf. Top. III. iii. 7).

έπιστεύοντο δ' ol λόγοι] This is a pleasing allusion to the personal character of Eudoxus of Cnidus, who lived about 366 в.σ., and who enjoyed great fame as an astronomer. He appears to have introduced the sphere from Egypt into Greece. The poem of Aratus is a versification of his Φαινόμενα. Certain stories in Diogenes would leave the impression that, being Plato's pupil, he quarrelled with his

2 δ μὴ δί' ἔτερον] The end is better than the means, but this does not prove anything as to the comparative superiority of pleasure to the rest of the whole class of ends. Thus the argument of Eudoxus overshot the mark. A similar argument of his is mentioned with careless approbation, Eth. I. xii. 5: Δοκεῖ καλῶτ συτηγορῆσι, says Aristotle, 'Eudoxus is thought to have pleaded well' in favour of pleasure being the chief good, because it is never praised. This argument would only prove that it belongs to the class of τὰ τίμα.

προστιθεμένη»] It is suggested as a commonplace of reasoning. Topics, III. ii. 2, that you may say 'Justice and courage are better with pleasure than without.'

3 παν γαρ-χωρίς] 'For that "every good is better in combination with another good than alone." This is indeed the very argument by which Plato proves pleasure not to be the highest good. For the pleasant life is more desirable with wisdom than without,' Cf. Philebus, pp. 21-22, where however the proposition oùdévos προστεθέντος-γίνεσθαι is not to be found. Plato only argued that, as the highest conception of human good implied a combination of both pleasure and knowledge, pleasure separately could not be the chief good. It is a deduction of Aristotle's from the terms ikardy kal réheov, used by Plato, that the chief good is incapable of addition or improvement. Cf. Topics, III. ii. 2, where it is said that the end plus the means cannot be called more desirable than the end by itself; cf. Eth, I. vii, 8, where the same 4 των καθ' αυτό άγαθων αιρετώτερον γίνεται. τι οῦν ἐστὶ τοιούτον, ού και ήμεις κοινωνούμεν; τοιούτον γάρ επίζητείται. οι δ' ενιστάμενοι ως οὐκ άγαθὸν οὖ πάντ' εφίεται, μη οὐθεν λέγωσιν ο γάρ πάσι δοκεί, τοῦτ' εἶναί φαμεν. ό δ' άναιρων ταύτην την πίστιν ου πάνυ πιστότερα έρει. εί μεν γὰρ τὰ ἀνόητα ἀρέγετο αὐτῶν, ἦν ἄν τι τὸ λεγόμενον, εί δε και τα φρόνιμα, πως λέγοιεν αν τι; ίσως δε καὶ ἐν τοῖς φαύλοις ἐστί τι φυσικὸν ἀγαθὸν κρεῖττον ή 5 καθ' αυτά, δ εφίεται τοῦ οἰκείου ἀγαθοῦ, οὐκ ἔοικε δὲ οὐδὲ περὶ τοῦ ἐναντίου καλῶς λέγεσθαι. οὐ γάρ φασιν, εἰ ή λύπη κακόν έστι, την ήδονην άγαθον είναι άντικείσθαι γάρ καὶ κακὸν κακῷ καὶ ἄμφω τῷ μηδετέρῳ, λέγοντες ταῦτα οὐ κακῶς, οὐ μὴν ἐπί γε τῶν εἰρημένων ἀληθεύοντες. άμφοιν μεν γάρ όντων κακών και φευκτά έδει άμφω είναι, των μηδετέρων δε μηδέτερον ή όμοίως νου δε φαίνονται την μέν φεύγοντες ώς κακόν, την δ' αἰρούμενοι ώς ἀγαθόν. ούτω δη και αντίκειται.

III. Aristotle investigates remaining arguments used by the Platonists to prove that pleasure is not a good:
(1) that it is 'not a quality.' This argument would prove too much, as it would be equally decisive against happiness, or the actions of virtue;
(2) that it is 'unlimited.' But (a) in one sense this will apply to virtue also, (b) in another sense it is only applicable to the 'mixed pleasures,' which are analogous to health, i.e. a proportion variable according to eircumstances; (3) that it is 'not final'

ποιότητές εἰσιν, οὐδ' ἡ εὐδαιμονία. λέγουσι δὲ τὸ μὲν 2 ἀγαθὸν ὡρίσθαι, τὴν δ' ἡδονὴν ἀόριστον εἶναι, ὅτι δέχεται τὸ μᾶλλον καὶ τὸ ῆττον. εἰ μὲν οὖν ἐκ τοῦ ἤδεσθαι τοῦτο κρίνουσι, καὶ περὶ τὴν δικαιοσύνην καὶ τὰς ἄλλας ἀρετάς, καθ' ἃς ἐναργῶς φασὶ μᾶλλον καὶ ῆττον τοὺς ποιοὺς ὑπάρχειν κατὰ τὰς ἀρετάς, ἔσται τὸ αὐτό · δίκαιοι γάρ εἰσι μᾶλλον καὶ ἀνδρεῖοι, ἔστι δὲ καὶ δικαιοπραγεῖν καὶ σωφρονεῖν μᾶλλον καὶ ῆττον. εἰ δ' ἐν ταῖς ἡδοναῖς, μή ποτ' οὐ λέγουσι τὸ αἴτιον, ἄν ὧσιν

or perfect, but in some sort 'a transition.' Against which Aristotle argues, (a) that it cannot be a motion, because not admitting the idea of speed, (b) that it cannot be a creation, because not capable of being resolved into its component parts, (c) that it cannot be a filling up, for this is merely corporcal, and even in the case of bodily pleasure it is not the body that feels; (4) that there are many disgraceful pleasures. To which it may be answered, that pleasures differ in kind, and even if some be bad, others may be absolutely good.

1 el μη τῶν ποιστήτων] This seems to be the only record of an argument, probably occurring in the works of Speusippus, that 'pleasure is not a good, because it is not a quality.' It points to the moralising tendency, above noticed, of this school of Platonists, as if they said that nothing could be called 'good' which did not form part of man's moral character.

2 εἰ μὲν οδν ἐκ τοῦ ἡδεσθαὶ] Pleasure may be said to admit of degrees, first, in reference to men's different capacities of feeling it; but in this respect it will stand on the same footing as courage and justice.

el δ' èν ταῖς ἡδοναῖς—μικταί] 'In the second place, if (they predicate this attribute of "unlimited" as existing, not in the recipients of pleasure, but) in the pleasures themselves, perhaps they omit to state the reason of the fact, namely, that while some pleasures are unmixed, others are mixed.' Plato in the Philebus divides pleasures into mixed and unmixed. Of each he makes three classes. Mixed pleasures are: (1) bodily pleasures, the restoration of harmony in the animal frame, where the bodily pain of want or desire is mixed up with the bodily pleasure of gratification; (2) the pleasure of expecting this restoration, where the bodily pain of want is mixed up with the mental pleasure of the idea of relief; (3) the pleasure which we feel in the ludicrous, where the mental pain of seeing the un-beautiful is mixed with the mental pleasure of laughing at it. The unmixed pleasures, i.e. in which no pain is implied, are (1) those of smell; (2) those of sight and hearing; (3) those that belong to the intellect. Of these two classes Plato confines the attribute of ἀμετρία, ' want of measure,' to the first class. The unmixed or pure pleasures necessarily possess emmerpla, cf. Phileb. p. 52 c. The same doctrine is given Eth. v11. xiv. 6: al δ' ανευ λυπῶν (ἡδοναί) οὐκ ἔχουσιν ὑπερβολήν. Speusippus, forgetful of this distinetion, appears to have made duerpla (άδριστον είναι) a universal predicate of pleasure.

3 τί γὰρ κωλύει κ.τ.λ.] Even the mixed pleasures, says Aristotle, admit the idea of proportion (συμμετρία), just as health is a proportion, though a relative and variable one, of the elements in the human body. In the Topics, vi. ii. i, the words ἡ ὑγίεια συμμετρία θερμῶν καὶ ψυχρῶν are given as an instance of an ambiguous definition, συμμετρία being used in more senses than one.

οὐ γὰρ—ñττον] 'Health is not the same proportion of elements in all men, nor even in the same man always, but with a certain laxity of variation it still remains health, though admitting of difference in the degrees (according to which the elements are compounded).'

4 τέλειόν τε τάγαθὸν τιθέντες κ.τ.λ.] Plato, in the Philebus, p. 53 c, accepted the doctrine of the Cyrenaics, es del γένεσε έστυ (ἡ ἡδονή), and then, by the contrast of means and end, γένεσε and οὐσία, he proved that pleasure could not be the chief good. As said above, Vol. I. Essay IV. p. 249, Plato seems to have recognised a class of pleasures above those which were mere states of transition, but to have had no formula to express them. Speusippus probably appplied the argument drawn from the Cyrenaic

οίον τη τοῦ κόσμου] i.e. οὐκ ἔστι τάχος και βραδυτής καθ' αυτήν. ' Αll motion has speed and slowness properly belonging to it, if not relatively to itself-as, for instance, the motion of the universe has no speed or slowness in itself (because it moves equably), -at all events in relation to other things.' Aristotle argues that though it is possible 'to be pleased' (ἡσθῆναι — μεταβάλλειν είς ἡδονήν) more or less quickly, it is not possible to 'feel pleasure' (ήδεσθαι) either quickly or slowly. This argument seems a verbal one, like some of those in Eth. 1. vi. against Plato's doctrine of ideas. If pleasure be identified with klynges, the argument holds good. But if it only be held to have the same relation to klynous as Aristotle himself makes it to have to everyera, Eth. x. viii. 4, the argument falls to the ground. This argument and the one in § 6 really only apply to the want of a sufficiently subjective formula to express pleasure. If pleasure were defined as 'the consciousness of a transition,' there might then be degrees of speed in the transition, though not in the consciousness of it. τη δ' ήδονη τούτων οὐδέτερον ὑπάρχει ἡσθηναι μὲν γὰρ ἔστι ταχέως ὥσπερ ὀργισθηναι, ήδεσθαι δ' οὕ, οὐδὲ πρὸς ἔτερον, βαδίζειν δὲ καὶ αὕξεσθαι καὶ πάντα τὰ τοιαῦτα. μεταβάλλειν μὲν οὖν εἰς τὴν ἡδονὴν ταχέως καὶ βραδέως ἔστιν, ἐνεργεῖν δὲ κατ' αὐτὴν οὐκ ἔστι ταχέως, λέγω δ' ήδεσθαι. γένεσίς τε πῶς ἄν εἴη; δοκεῖ γὰρ οὐκ ἐκ τοῦ 5 τυχόντος τὸ τυχὸν γίγνεσθαι, ἀλλ' ἐξ οῦ γίγνεται, εἰς τοῦτο διάδυεσθαι. καὶ οῦ γένεσις ἡ ἡδονή, τούτου ἡ λύπη φθορά. καὶ λέγουσι δὲ τὴν μὲν λύπην ἔνδειαν τοῦ κατὰ 6 φύσιν εἶναι, τὴν δ' ἡδονὴν ἀναπλήρωσιν. ταῦτα δὲ σωματικά ἐστι τὰ πάθη. εἰ δή ἐστι τοῦ κατὰ φύσιν ἀναπλήρωσις, ἡ ἡδονή, ἐν ῷ ἀναπλήρωσις, τοῦτ' ἀν καὶ ἡδοιτο τὸ σῶμα ἄρα οἰ δοκεῖ δέ οἰδ' ἔστιν ἄρα ἀναπλήρωσις ἡ ἡδονή, ἀλλὰ γινομένης μὲν ἀναπληρώσεως ἡδοιτ' ἄν τις, καὶ τεμνόμενος λυποῖτο, ἡ δόξα δ' αὕτη Aristotle's real objection to the term κίνησις lies deeper than these mere dialectical skirmishings, and has been explained, Vol. I. Essay IV. pp. 247-50.

5 γένεσις τε-φθορά] 'And how can it be a creation? For it does not seem to be the case that anything can be created out of anything; a thing is resolved into that out of which it is created. And (as the Platonists say) pain is the destruction of that of which pleasure is the creation.' This elliptical argument seems to require for its conclusion, 'Where then are the elements out of which our perfect nature (ovoia) is created by the process called pleasure, and into which it is resolved by the destructive process called pain ?' We find pain called a destruction in the Philebus, p. 31 E: δίψος δ' αδ φθορά και λύπη και λύσις, ή δὲ τοῦ ὑγροῦ πάλιν το Επρανθέν πληροίσα δύναμις ήδονή. Aristotle, arguing polemically, says, 'Where then are the elements with which the creative and the destructive process must begin and end?'

He afterwards reasonably substitutes ἐνέργεια for γένεσις as a better formula, but the above polemic seems not to have much value.

6 ούδ' έστιν άρα-λυποίτο] 'Neither is pleasure therefore a replenishment, though one may feel pleasure while replenishment is taking place, just as one may feel pain while one is being cut.' Pleasure, says Aristotle, may be synchronous with replenishment, but cannot be identical with it, for pleasure is a state of the mind, and not of the body, cf. Eth. I. viii. 10: τδ μέν γάρ ήδεσθαι των ψυχικών. All that is proved here is that a more subjective formula than αναπλήρωσις is required to express the nature of pleasure. Plato had used the formula πλήρωσις, Philebus, p. 31 E, and Speusippus probably repeated it.

τεμεόμενος] The words τομαί καὶ καύσεις were commonly used by Plato, as instances of bodily pain. Cf. Τίπισεις, p. 65 Ε: ταῦτα δ' αδ περί τὰς καύσεις καὶ τομὰς τοῦ σώματος γεγνόμενὰ ἐστι κατάδηλα,

(b) that the flatterer is different from the friend; (c) that the pleasures of childhood differ from those of maturity. The whole reasoning is repeated in better form in chap, v.

The term 'friend' is used here in a distinctive sense to denote 'the true friend,' just as it is in Εth. VIII. xiii.
9: ἄκοντα γὰρ φίλον οὐ πουητέον.
Common language, which contrasts the flatterer who ministers pleasure, from the friend who ministers good, testifies to the non-identity of pleasure (in all forms) with good.

12 περl πολλά τε] If pleasure, according to Eudoxus, were the chief good, all pursuits would be prized in proportion to their affording pleasure, but this Aristotle shows not to be the case.

IV. Having finished his critical remarks on existing theories (7à λεγόμενα) about pleasure, Aristotle proceeds synthetically to state his own views, as follows: (1) Pleasure is, like sight, something whole and entire, not gradually arrived at, but a moment of consciousness, at once perfect, independent of the conditions of time, $8 1-4. (2) It arises from any faculty obtaining its proper object, but is better in proportion to the excellence of the faculty exercised, §§ 5-7. (3) It is thus the perfection of our functions, but is distinct from the functions themselves, § 8. (4) It cannot be continuously maintained, owing to the weakness of our powers, our functions being soon blunted by fatigue, § 9. (5) Pleasure, in short, results from the sense of life, and is inseparably connected with the idea of life, §§ 10-11.

The genus (τί ἐστι) of pleasure here
moments of consciousness which are complete in themselves; the differentia (ποῖδν τι) is that it regults from the exercise of any faculty upon its proper object. It may be said that this definition would leave pleasure undefined;
but in fact it is a simple sensation,
not admitting of entire explication.

2 διόπερ-απαντί] 'Therefore it is not a process; for every process is under conditions of time and aims at some end; as, for instance, the (process of) architecture is perfect when it has effected what it aims at. May we not say (*) then that it is perfect in the particular (τούτω) time viewed as a whole? But in the separate parts of the time occupied all processes are imperfect, and are different in species, both from the whole process, and from each other. For the collection of the stones is different from the fluting of the pillars, and both from the making of the temple. And the making the temple is a perfect process, for it wants nothing towards its proposed object; but that of the basement and the triglyph are imperfect, for they are each the making of a part. Therefore they differ in species, and it is not possible to find a process perfect in species in any time whatsoever, unless it be in the time occupied viewed as a whole.' fluted tablet added as an ornament to the frieze (perhaps the last act in the creation of the temple). The creation of the temple as a whole, regarded in the whole time which it occupies, is alone to be regarded as a perfect process.

3-4 ouolws be-eldos] 'So too in the case of walking, and all other processes. For if passage be a process from place to place, even of this there are different species, flying, walking, jumping, and the like. And not only this, but even in walking itself (there are different species), for the whence and the whither are not the same in the whole course and in the part of the course, and in one part and the other part; nor is it the same thing to cross this line and that. For a person not only passes a line, but a line in space, and this line is in different space from that line. We shall treat exactly of process elsewhere, but it seems not to be perfect in every time, but the majority of processes seem imperfect and differing in species. if the whence and the whither constitute a differentia. But pleasure seems perfect in kind in any time (of its existence) whatsoever.' Every process is under conditions of time, and its parts being under a law of succession are essentially different from each other: the borepow from the mpôrepow, the beginning, middle, and end, from one another. In pleasure nothing of the kind is to be found. One moment of pleasure does not lead up, as a preparative, to another more advanced moment. Pleasure, when felt, is, ipso facto, complete.

illustration used here is given also, with a slight confusion of terms, in the Eudemian book, Eth. vi. xii. 5, "Επειτα καὶ ποιοθοι μέν, οὐχ ὡς ἰατρικὴ δὲ ἐγ⟩ίειαν, ἀλλ' ὡς ἡ ἐγ⟩ίεια.

' But if the object and the percipient be in this (highest) condition, there always will be pleasure, as long as subject and object remain.' The relative terms τὸ ποιοῦν and τὸ πάσχον take their meaning from the way in which they are applied. Thus, Εέλ. v. 9, they are used for 'producer and consumer.' Here τὸ ποιοῦν is used for the percipient, τὸ πάσχον for the object perceived.

8 ὁμοίων γὰρ ὅντων—γίνεσθαι] 'For from similar pairs of relatives, bearing the same relation to one another, i.e. the active and passive, the same result is naturally produced.' This appears to be an abstract and a priori way of stating the universality of pleasure attendant on the harmony between a faculty and its proper object.

9 πωι οδυ—dμαυρουται] 'How is it then that no one is continuously in a state of pleasure! The reason must be that one grows weary. For all human things are incapable of continuous activity. Pleasure, therefore, ceases to be produced, for it depends on the activity of the faculties. It is on this same account that some things please us while they are new, but afterwards not in the same way. For at first the intellect is excited and acts strenuously on the objects in question (as in the case of sight, when one first fixes one's glance), but afterwards the action is not equally vivid, but relaxed, and so one's pleasure also fades.' On this doctrine, cf. Vol. I. Essay IV., and Ar. Metaph. VIII. viii. 18, there quoted, p. 251.

to It is natural to say that all desire pleasure, from its inseparable connection with the sense of life, and with each of the vital functions. Thus far Eudoxus was right, but he was wrong in not recognising a difference in kind between different pleasures, and this point is demonstrated in the ensuing chapter.

V. Pleasures may be thought to differ in kind: (1) Because our several functions (mental and others) differ from each other in kind, and things different in kind are perfected by things different in kind, §§ 1-2. (2) Because while its own pleasure promotes any particular exercise of the faculties, an alien pleasure impedes it, §§ 3-5. (3) Because the human functions differ from each other in a moral point of view, and the pleasures therefore which are so closely connected with them as almost to be identical must differ in the same way from each other, $$ 6-7. (4) Creatures different in kind must have, and by common consent do have, different pleasures, § 8. pleasures of man when in a morbid state must differ from the pleasures of man when in a healthy state. As a corollary to the last argument it may be added, that reasonings against pleasure from a reference to the morbid pleasures have no weight. The answer to them would be, that such are not pleasures at all.

I και τὰ φυσικὰ και τὰ ὑπὸ τέχνης] The ἐνέργειαι mentioned in this section must be those of the rational faculty. Thus we have the classification of things capable of being made perfect, into nature, art, and the moral and intellectual life of man. Cf. Eth. III. iii. 7: αίτια γάρ δοκοθουν είναι φύσις καὶ ἀνάγκη καὶ τύχη, έτι δὲ νοῦς καὶ πῶν τὸ δι' ἀνθρώπου.

2 φανείη δ'-τελειοί] 'This would also seem to be shown by the intimate connection existing between each pleasure and the function which it perfects.' Cf. Eth. x. i. I: μαλιστα γάρ δοκεί συνωκειωσθαι τώ γένει ήμων. Pleasure, generally speaking, is proper to the human race; from another point of view, each function has its own proper pleasure, and the pleasure 'proper' to one function is 'alien' to other functions. This distinction of οίκεία and άλλοτρία ήδονή was perhaps suggested by a passage in the Republic of Plato, IX. 587 A, where these terms are used, though not with quite the same application. It is there said that in the philosopher each part of his soul does its proper work and attains its proper pleasure; but when some lower passion has the predominance, that passion, causing

And yet pleasure can hardly be thought or perception—this would be absurd; but through their not being separated, some persons fancy them to be identical.' To 'divide' and to 'distinguish' are, as Coleridge tells us, two different things. Pleasure, though not divided, should be distinguished, from the vital functions.

The author of the Eudemian books, however, Eth. vII. xii. 3, identified them, and we might well ask Aristotle why happiness, any more than pleasure, should be identified with byforgeta.

Heraclitus says that "an ass would prefer hay to gold," — the reason being that he is an ass. This saying of Heraclitus, which reminds us of the Æsopic fable of the Cock and the Jewel, was probably meant to satirise the low desires of the human race. It forms the pendant to that other saying, 'Zeus looks on the wisest man as we look on an ape,'

10 ℓστιν ἐκάστου μέτρου ἡ ἀρετὴ καὶ ὁ ἀγαθός] That there is a definite standard of pleasure and of taste, as of other apparently variable things, is most clearly laid down in Aristotle's discussion upon the saying of Protagoras, that 'man is the measure of all things.' Cf. Metaphysics, x. vi. 6: φανερόν ὁ τοῦτ ἐκ τῶν γινρουμένων

Those who are vicious and corrupt are to be pronounced not to be right judges of what is good or pleasant. Their pleasures are to be pronounced not pleasures at all. Cf. Plato, Philebus, p. 40 C: ψευδέσιν άρα ήδοναις τὰ πολλά οί πονηροί χαίρουσιν, οί δ' άγαθεί των ανθρώπων άληθέσιν.

VI. Aristotle having concluded his treatise upon the nature of pleasure, reverts now to the general question of the nature of happiness, or the chief good for man. He takes up from the first book the following fundamental propositions: (1) that happiness must be an action (ἐνέργεια) and not a state (ξξις) of the faculties; (2) that it must be final and satisfying; (3) that it must consist in some development of the faculties sought for its own sake. The remainder of the chapter is occupied with excluding games and amusements from the above definition. Though exercises of the faculties sought for their own sake, these are (a) patronised by unworthy judges,-tyrants, children, and the like; (b) after all, they are rather

1 είρημένων δὲ τῶν περὶ τὰς ἀρετάς τε καὶ φιλίας καὶ ἡδονάς] Cf. Eth. 1. xiii. 1, where the analysis of ἀρετή, or human excellence (the most important part of the conception of happiness, Eth. 1. x. 9) is introduced; Eth. VIII. i. 1, where the discussion of friendship partly as connected with virtue and partly as an external blessing, is justified; Eth. x. i. 1, where a treatise on pleasure is added on account of the human interest of the topic, and the controversies which have been raised about it.

But perhaps after all monarchs are no evidence, for neither virtue nor reason, on which the higher functions of man depend, are involved in kingly power.' Cf. Eth. 1. v. 3, where it is said that brutish pleasures 'obtain consideration' owing to potentates, who have everything at their command, devoting themselves to such.

S εὐδαιμονίας δ' οὐδείς—βίον] 'For no one allows a slave to share in happiness, any more than in the social life of a citizen.' In Politics, I. xiii. 13, it is said that the slave, as distinguished from the artisan, is κοινωνός ζωῆς, i.e. he 'lives with the family,' but he is not κοινωνός βίον, he does not share in the career of his master.

VII. Aristotle's argument now culminates in the declaration that happiness, in the highest sense, consists in philosophy: (1) because this is the function of the most excellent part of our nature; (2) because it most admits of continuance; (3) because it affords most pure and solid pleasure; (4) because it has pre-eminently the character of being self-sufficient; (5) because it is above all things an end-in-itself, and not a means to ulterior results; (6) because it is a sort of repose, and as it were the fruit of our exertions. It is indeed something higher than man regarded as a composite being, and is only attainable by him through virtue of a divine element which is in him. But we must not listen to those who would preach down our divine aspirations. On the contrary, we should encourage them, and endeavour to live in harmony with our noblest part, which is in fact our proper self.

I the θείου—θείοτατου] 'Whether it be, itself too, absolutely divine, or relatively speaking the divinest thing in our nature.' Philosophy is said in the Metaphysics, 1. ii. 14, to be most divine in two ways, first, as being kindred to the thought of God; second, as being knowledge of things divine. τοαότη δὲ διχώς ἀν είη μόνου ΄ ἢν τε γὰρ μάλιστ' ἀν δ θεός ἔχοι, θεία τῶν ἐπιστημῶν ἐστί, κᾶν εί τις τῶν θείων είη. 3 ethoyor be-elvail 'And it is reasonable to suppose that those who know pass their time more pleasantly than those who are inquiring.' This is opposed to the often-repeated saying that 'the search for truth is more precious than truth itself.' Bishop Butler says, 'Knowledge is not our proper happiness. Whoever will in the least attend to the thing will see that it is the gaining, not the having of it, which is the entertainment of the mind. Indeed, if the proper happiness of man consisted in knowledge considered as a possession or treasure, men who are possessed of the largest share would have a very ill time of it; as they would be infinitely more sensible than others of their poverty in this respect. Thus he who increases knowledge would eminently increase sorrow' (Sermon XV.) In one respect these two views are reconcileable; for Aristotle never meant to say that the έξις or κτησις της σοφίας constitutes happiness, but the everyera κατά την σοφίαν, 'the play of the mind under the guidance of philosophy.' He contrasts the peace and repose of conviction with the restlessness of doubt. In the same spirit Bacon said (Essay I.): 'Certainly, it is heaven upon earth to have a man's mind move in charity, rest in providence, and turn upon the poles of truth.' But in another respect the views of Aristotle are irreconcileable with those above quoted from Butler. The one over-states, nearly as much as the other under-states, the blessings of knowledge. And Aristotle strangely leaves out of account that sense of ignorance which the wisest man will always retain. His statement is chargeable with philosophic pride, from which Socrates and Plato were free. (See Vol. I. Essay III. D. 216.)

8 κατὰ τοὺς παραινοῦντας] The moralists, says Aristotle, take a shallow view in bidding us tame down our aspirations to our mortal condition. Cf. Rhet. II. xxi. 6, where the gnome, θνατὰ χρὴ τὸν θνατὸν φρονεῦν, is quoted from Epicharmus. Isocrates (Ad Dem. p. 9 h) gives a sort of reconciliation of the views: ἀθάνατα μὲν φρόνει τῷ μεγαλό-ψυχος είναι · θνητὰ δὲ τῷ συμμέτρως τῶν ἐπαρχέντων ἀπολαύευ, which reminds one of George Herbert's quaint lines:

Sink not in spirit: who aimeth at the sky

Shoots higher much than he that means a tree.

A grain of glorie mixt with humblenesse

though (this noblest part) be small in proportionate bulk, yet in power and dignity it far surpasses all the other parts of our nature.' Aristotle here signifies that the divine particle (voûs) bears a small proportion to the whole of our composite nature. And in accordance with this he elsewhere intimates that only at short and rare intervals can man enjoy the fruition of his diviner nature. Cf. Metaph. ΧΙ. vii. 9: εί οὖν οὅτως εὖ ἔχει, ὡς ἡμεῖς ποτέ, ὁ θεὸς ἀεὶ, θαυμαστόν. Pol. VIII. V. 12 : ἐν μὲν τῷ τέλει συμβαίνει τοῖς άνθρώποις όλιγάκις γίγνεσθαι. With which we may compare the saying of Spinoza (De Intellectus Emendatione, II.), that at first he found himself only able to rest in the idea of 'the truly good' for short intervals, yet that these intervals became longer and more frequent as he went on. 'Et quamvis in initio hacintervalla essent rara et per admodum exiguum temporis durarent, postquam tamen Verum Bonum magis ac magis mihi innotuit, intervalla ista frequentiora et longiora fuerunt.' Aristotle idealises these moments of the philosopher, supposτὸ λεχθέν τε πρότερον ἀρμόσει καὶ νῦν· τὸ γὰρ οἰκεῖον ἐκάστφ τῆ φύσει κράτιστον καὶ ἤδιστόν ἐστιν ἐκάστφ, καὶ τῷ ἀνθρώπφ δὴ ὁ κατὰ τὸν νοῦν βίος, εἴπερ τοῦτο μάλιστα ἄνθρωπος. οὖτος ἄρα καὶ εὐδαιμονέστατος.

VIII. Aristotle, pursuing this theme, declares further the paramount excellence of the philosophic life, by showing that the life of practical morality holds a merely secondary place, (1) because it is bound up with man's composite nature, that is, with the passions; (2) because it is more dependent on external circumstances; (3) because such a life cannot possibly be attributed to the gods. He adds that though the philosopher will certainly require a degree of external prosperity, this will only be a very moderate degree, as the sayings of ancient sages testify. And if there be any providence of the gods watching over men, it may be presumed that this will especially watch over the philosopher, who loves and honours that which is divine.

3 συνέζευκται δὲ — ἀνθρωπικαί] 'Thought, moreover, seems inseparably connected with excellence of the moral nature, and this with thought, since the major premisses of thought are in accordance with the moral virtues, and the "right" in morals is that which is in accordance with thought. But as thought and moral virtue are bound up with the passions, they must be concerned with our composite nature : and the virtues of the composite nature must be purely human.' And therefore secondary to philosophy, which is more than human. This passage appears to contain the germ of much that is expanded in the Eudemian books; cf. Eth. VI. xii. 9-10, xiii. 4. But we may observe, 1st, that thought (φρόνησις) is here as if for the first time coming forward in opposition to philosophy (ocola), and not in that recognised opposition which would have been the case had Book VI. been previously written; and, that there is no reference to any previous discussions on the moral syllogism.

συνέζευκται] 'Thought' and moral virtue are here said to be reciprocally connected, just as it is said of pleasure πολιτικός here appears to be used in opposition to ὁ σοφόε (§ 13), not as distinctively indicating 'the politician,' but as representing the whole class of the active virtues, which are subsequently analysed. Thus, Eth. I. v. 4, we find of χαρίεντες καὶ πρακτικοί given as equivalents for οἱ πολιτικοί.

τῷ ἀνδρεἰῳ δὲ δυνάμεωτ] δύναμι here seems used in a sense exactly corresponding to 'physical power.' In modern warfare, a weak body may often be accompanied by the highest personal courage, but in the ancient mode of fighting this would have been impossible or useless.

7 διεξιούσι δὲ—θεῶν] 'And if we went through all the virtues, we should see that whatever relates to moral action is petty and unworthy of the gods.' Aristotle argues here that we cannot attribute morality to the Deity without falling into mere anthropomorphism; but it might be replied that there is the same difficulty in conceiving of God as engaged in philosophic thought. Aristotle himself felt this difficulty, and elsewhere defined the thought of God as 'the thinking upon thought' (Metaph. x1. ix. 4), which would not only deprive the Deity of all those fatherly and tender functions which the human race is prone to attribute to Him, but would also remove Him from the conditions of all human thinking. If the conceded that the life of God is only analogous to that of the philosopher; we might then ask, why not also analogous to the life of the good man? Plato, by placing the 'idea of justice' in the suprasensible world, allowed a more than mortal interest to morality.

To Aristotle seems to lose no opportunity of expressing his contempt for great potentates. 'Reason is not implied in kingly power,' Eth. x. vi. 4. 'One may do noble deeds without ruling over land and sea,' &c. We may again refer to George Herbert, who in his verses on Church Music, says,—

'Now I in you without a bodie move, Rising and falling with your wings; We both together sweetly live and love!

12 συμφωνεῖν δη—ὐποληπτέον] 'The opinions of the philosophers appear then to coincide with our arguments. Authority of this kind affords a certain ground of belief. But truth in practical matters is settled by an appeal to facts and human life, for in them rests the decision. We ought then to consider previous sayings with a reference to facts and life; if those sayings agree with facts, we should accept them; if they differ, we must account them mere theories.' Cf. Eth. I. viii. I.

el γάρ τις — ὥσπερ δοκεί] 'For if there be any care of human affairs by the gods, as men think there is.' We may compare Shakespeare's

Aristotle expresses here no opinion, one way or the other, as to the reality of a Divine Providence. δοκεί merely indicates that an opinion is held; the word is frequently used to indicate a false opinion or fancy. Cf. Eth. VII. xii. 3: δοκεί δὲ γένεσίς τις είναι, ότι κυρίως άγαθόν. Χ. Vi. 3: δοκεί μέν οδν εὐδαιμονικά ταθτα είναι, ὅτι κ.τ.λ. Plato had said that moral virtue (see the last note) placed men peculiarly under the care of the gods. Aristotle, differing from Plato in his conception of the Deity, says, if there be any care of men by the gods, it must surely be extended in an especial degree not to the just man, but to the philosopher, since philosophy is most akin to the life of the Deity Himself.

אמי סטרשה] 'Even on this supposition.' It seems probable that Aristotle had in his mind the very words of Plato, above quoted.

IX. The theory of human life now being complete, Aristotle asks if anything more is wanting? The answer is Yes, since theory is not by itself enough to make men good. For virtue three things are required, nature, teaching, and custom. The first is beyond man's control; the second may be identified with theory, which we have now supplied; the third requires institutions for the regulation of life, which may either be (1) of public, or (2) of private ordinance. As a fact, the state too much neglects (§ 14) the arrangement of daily life, and therefore private individuals must address themselves to the task in a scientific spirit, and must first learn the principles of legislation. Whence are these principles to be learnt? On the one hand we find that practical politicians neither write nor speak on the principles of their art. On the other hand the Sophists, who profess to teach politics, are far from understanding even what they are, and their mode of teaching is merely empirical. So far from imparting principles, they go to work in an eclectic way, collecting laws, which are mere results, lying, as it were, on the surface. Legislation, as a science, has in short been neglected hitherto, and must now be essayed. We must enter at once upon the whole theory of the state, examining former speculations and existing constitutions, and developing a conception of the best form of government.

According to the sequence of ideas in this chapter, it would appear that the connecting link between ethics and politics is to be found in the word $\tilde{\text{Pos}}_0$, custom, or mode of life. As custom has great influence upon men's power of attaining virtue and the chief good, and on the other hand as the institutions of individual life have a close connection with those of the state, it follows that politics are the complement of ethics.

Under the head of 'doing' are of course included the functions of thought, which, as we have just been told, are the highest forms of action in man. Cf. Pol. VII. iii. S: ἀλλὰ τὸν πρακτικόν οὐκ ἀναγκαῖον εἰναι πρὸς

3 πολλούς ἀν μασθούς] The saying of Theognis (v. 432) was that the Asclepiadæ would have deserved great reward had they known how to heal the minds of men.

Εί δ' 'Ασκληπιάδαις τοῦτο έδωκε θεός, 'Ιᾶσθαι κακότητα καὶ άτηρὰς φρένας ἀνδρῶν, Πολλούς αν μισθούς και μεγάλους έφερον.

The last line is quoted in the Meno of Plato, p. 95 E, to indicate that Theognis held teaching inefficacious to produce virtue. Aristotle borrows the application. On Theognis see Vol. I. Essay II. p. 92 sqq.

κατοκώχιμον ἐκ τῆς ἀρετῆς] 'Under the influence of virtue.' This word, which is also written κατακώχιμον, seems derived from κατέχειν, with a reduplication. In Ar. Pol. II. ix. 8, we find κατακώχιμοι πρὸς, and ἐδ. VIII. Vii. 4. κατακώχιμοι ὑτό.

6 τοῖς ὡς ἀληθῶς εὐτυχέσω] 'To those who are in the most ideal sense of the term to be called fortunate.' Cf. Eth. III. v. 17; καὶ τὸ εễ καὶ τὸ

In a spirit the very opposite of this remark, Pericles is reported (Thucyd. 11. 37) to have boasted of the freedom enjoyed by the Athenians from all vexatious interference with the daily conduct of individuals : έλευθέρως δέ τά τε πρός τό κοινόν πολιτεύομεν καί ές την πρός

On the one hand Thucydides praised the free system of Athens; on the other hand Aristotle praised the organised and educational system of Sparta; see below, § 13, and cf. Eth. I. xiii. 3, and note. He was probably led into this political mistake, partly by the state of society in Athensitself, partly by the influence of Plato, from whom he imbibed one of the essential ideas of communism, -namely, that the state should arrange as much as possible, instead of as little as possible.

Aristotle considers that any people among whom the state does not settle by law the customs of daily life is unworthy to be called a society at all. He ignores that element called 'oublic opinion,' which in so many respects, and more naturally, supplies the place of legislation.

14 και δράν αὐτὸ δύνασθαι] 'And that it should have power to effect the object in question.' This apparently refers to § 12: ἡ μὲν οῦν πατρική πρόσταξιο οῦκ έχει τὸ Ισχυρὸν κ.τ.λ.

do this (i.e. to help his children and friends towards virtue) after learning the principles of legislation.' As we find from Eth. VI. viii. 2, legislation was considered by the Peripatetics to be the superior (ἀρχιτεκτονική) form of political thought. A person possessing the general principles of scientific legislation (see below, § 16) would be best able to deduce rules for the guidance of his family, and at the same time to allow of such exceptions as individual peculiarities might call for. That the family is a deduction from the state, which is prior in point of idea, we know to have been Aristotle's opinion, Pol. I. ii. 12.

16 οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ ἐμπειρίαν] 'And yet perhaps nothing hinders a man even without scientific knowledge treating well some particular case, from an accurate observation, empirically, of what results on each thing being tried.' Cf. Mctaph. 1. i. 7: πρὸς μὲν οδυ τὸ πράπτειν ἐμπειρία τέχνης οὐδὲν δοκεῖ διαφέρευ, ἀλλὰ καὶ

18 μόριον γὰρ ἐδόκει τῆς πολιτικῆς εἶναι] 'For, as we said, legislation is generally considered to be a branch of politics.' This probably refers to £th. I. ii. 7: χρωμένης δὲ ταύτης ταῖς λοιπαῖς πρακτικαῖς τῶν ἐπιστημιῶν, ἔτι δὲ νομοθετούσης τὶ δεῖ πράττευ καὶ τίνων ἀπέχεσθαι. In VI. viii. 2-3, the point of view is different, πολιτική not being there treated as a science.

έπαγγίλλονται μέν διδάσκειν οι σοφυταί] Cf. Plato, Μεπο, p. 95 B: οι σοφυταί σα οἶτοι, οἶτερ μόνοι ἐπαγγέλλονται, δοκοῦσι διδάσκαλοι εἶναι ἀρετῆς; The whole of the present discussion on the teaching of political science is evidently suggested by that on the teaching of virtue in the Meno, where it was shown that the great statesmen do not attempt to teach their sons virtue, and that the Sophists, who

20 ol δὲ νόμοι-ἐοίκασιν] ' But laws are as it were the results of political science.' Aristotle's account of the Sophists' method of teaching politics is precisely analogous to his account of the way in which they taught dialectic. He here speaks of their taking a shallow view of politics, and making it an inferior branch of rhetoric; and he adds that they adopted a superficial eclecticism, making collections of laws without touching upon the principles from which legislation must depend. They thus imparted mere results, which to those who are uninstructed in principles are wholly useless. In the same way (Soph. Elench, xxxiii. 16) he says they gave various specimens of argument to be learnt by heart, and that this was no more use than if a person who undertook to teach shoemaking were to provide his pupils with an assortment ος shoes. λόγους γὰρ οι μὲν ἡητορικούς οι δὲ ἐρωτητικούς ἐδιδοσαν ἐκμαθάντεν, εἰς οῦς πλειστάκις ἐμπίπτεν ψήθησαν ἐκάτεροι τοὺς ἀλλήλων λόγους. 21 οθ γὰρ φαίνονται—ἔξειι] 'For men do not appear to learn the physician's art from treatises, though the physician's art from treatises, though the stating not only modes of treatment, but how people can be cured, and how each person is to be treated, according to a classification of habits (of body).' συγγραμμάτων here is frequently translated 'prescriptions,' but from what Aristotle says about them clearly something more is meant. In the Mines which bears Plato's name we find συγγράμματα used as a generic word, of which several species, latρικά, γεωργικά, μαγειρικά, δε., are mentioned, and are compared (as here) with 'laws.' Cf. Μέπος, p. 316 c sqq.: ήδη ποτὰ ἐνέτιχες ἔψιγγάμματι περὶ ὑγιείας τῶν καμιώντων; 'Έγωγε...' Ιατρικά ἀρα καὶ ἰατρικοὶ νόμοι ταθτα τὰ συγγράμματα ἐστὶ τὰ τῶν ἰατρῶν; Ίατρικὰ μέτσω.... 'Αρ΄ οὖν καὶ τὰ γεωργικὰ συγγράμματα γεωργικοὶ νόμοι εἰσίν; κ.τ.λ. The συγγράμματα here mentioned were perhaps 'reports of cases,' or monographs on particular diseases.

τοῖς δ' ἀκευ—γένουντο] 'But those who without proper training study such things would not be able to judge of them correctly (except by mere accident), though they might gain an appreciative faculty with regard to the subject.' Εξε-here denotes the state of mind formed by scientific training. Such a training especially produces 'judgment' (το κρίνεω καλῶ). Cf. Pol. III. xi. 14: ξόται γὰρ ἔκαστος μὲν χείρων κριτής τῶν εἰδότων. Εὐλ. I. iii. 5, and note. This kind of judgment, as being deep and original, is distinguished above from σύνεσιs, the power of appreciation, but in Eth. VI. X. 2, σύνεσιs is called κριτική, in a lower sense, and as contrasted with 'thought,' which is πρακτική.

22 παραλιπόντων οῦν] One must be struck with the disdainful way in which Aristotle here quite sets aside the Republic and Laws of Plato, by which he had been himself so much influenced, as if they were not to be reckoned as even attempts at founding the science of politics. Below, he alludes to them as 'perhaps on some particular points having made good remarks.'

23 πρώτον μέν οἶν] A roughoutline of the Politics is here given, as Aristotle conceived it before writing it. The sketch is so very general that it omits the subject of Book I., and yet critics have thought that this passage may be taken as evidence of what the order of books in Aristotle's Politics should be.
